USING THIS CATALOG

What You'll Find Inside

The mighty tome you now hold in your hands, The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference (2005-2006 Edition), is jammed with photos of Citadel Miniatures and of all the products (games, rulebooks, paints, terrain, and more) that are available from Games Workshop.

Because there are so many product codes and different ways to buy GW products, this section provides all the information you need to get your hands (or claws, talons, powerfists, or tentacles) on all that great Games Workshop merchandise.

The Miniatures

While you'll find games, rulebooks, and hobby supplies, it is the matchless Citadel Miniatures that rule the catalog. Each available model will be listed as follows.

In All Their Forms

Games Workshop sells its models in boxed sets, in blister packs, and as component parts. Throughout the catalog, models are shown assembled, painted, and on their appropriate bases. Each catalog entry specifies whether it is a boxed set, a blister pack, or an individual part (hereafter referred to as a "bit" or "bitz"). For each boxed set of plastic miniatures, the catalog will show assembled and painted models as well as the plastic "sprues" so that hobbyists can see the variety of pieces that make up the models.

Most gamers, painters, and collectors will want to buy whole models, but some hobbyists will want to purchase the separate parts for conversion and modeling purposes. Thus, every individual piece that is available for sale is shown, coded, and listed on the separate price list.

From the manifested horrors of Chaos to the deadly grace of the Eldar – the Citadel Miniatures range is staggering in depth and detail!

Codes and Price Lists

Codes identify each product, and these codes will match up with the Price List. All blisters, boxes, bitsz, and sprues shown in each section will have their prices listed in the appropriate section of the price list.

Where Is This Stuff Available?

All of the products in the catalog are available from participating Independent Retail shops (often called Rogue Traders), Games Workshop Hobby Centers, and the GW Mail Order Service at:

1-800-394-GAME

and the Online Store at:

<http://store.us.games-workshop.com>

This point is so important that we had to emphasize it below. If your local shop carries ANY Games Workshop products, then it has access to EVERYTHING in this enormous Catalog. Ask the staff of your local shop today!

All the models in this catalog can be purchased from Independent Retailers, Games Workshop Hobby Centers, as well as Games Workshop Mail Order and the Games Workshop web site.

Safety First

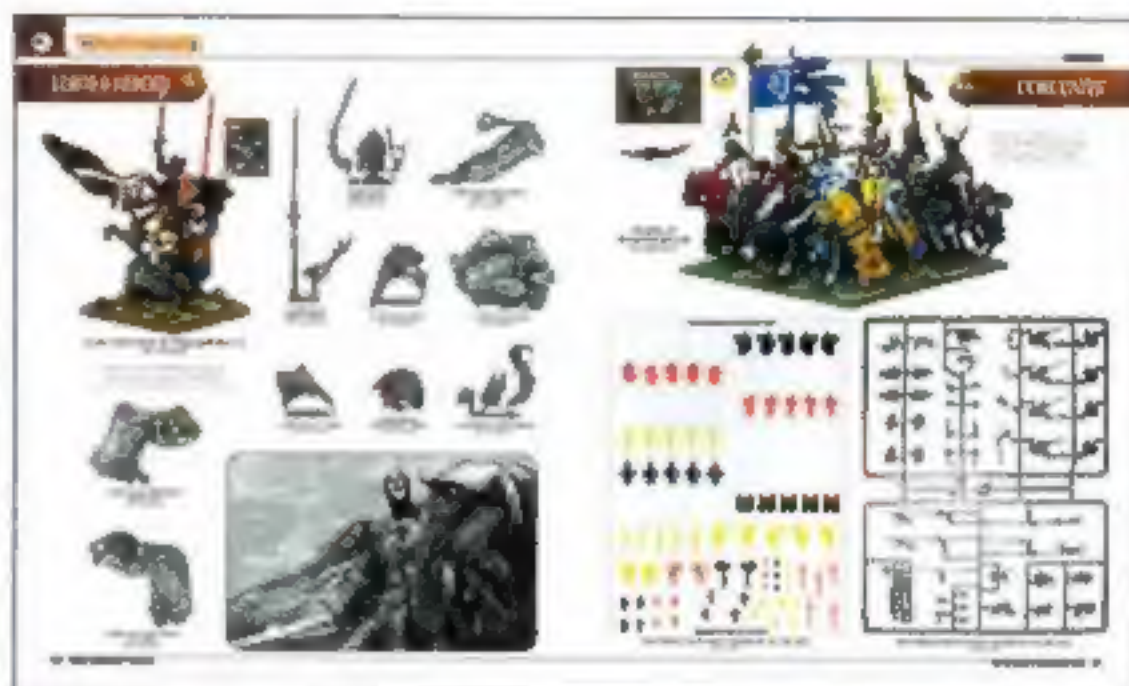

Citadel Miniatures are fine-scale models designed for gamers and collectors. Due to the small and pointed components of Citadel Miniatures, they are NOT RECOMMENDED FOR CHILDREN UNDER THE AGE OF 12.

Hobbyists of any age should be careful when modeling. Hobby knives, files, clippers, and more can cause bodily harm if used incorrectly. Always be sure to read and follow the instructions on the packaging when using any type of glue or spray primer. By having a thorough understanding of the product and following the proper procedures, any modeler can enjoy the Games Workshop hobby in complete safety.

Citadel Miniatures are not recommended for children under the age of 12.

New Models Replace Old

Over the years, Games Workshop has made many fantastic models, and we have no plans of stopping! During that time, entire ranges of Citadel Miniatures have been replaced with newer, better models. However, no matter how much better the new miniatures are, the older versions were always somebody's favorite! Therefore, whenever possible, we continue to sell these "Classic" models. While the majority of these models are not pictured in this catalog, many of them are still available. Contact Direct Services or visit our web site or one of our Hobby Centers to check on availability.

Specialist Range

The Specialist Range is made up of all the available Specialist Games and their model ranges, including those for the Battlefleet Gothic, Blood Bowl, Inquisitor, Mordheim, Necromunda, Warmaster, and Epic 40,000 games. These games are well supported with great miniature lines available through the Online Store and Direct Services.

Classic and Collector's Range

The icon to the right denotes items that are Special Offers. You won't normally find these items on the shelves in your local Independent Retailer or GW Hobby Center. You can place a special order for these items at your local GW Hobby Center and most Independent Retailers. All Special Offer items found in this catalog will be marked with the Special Offer icon.

Promotional Range

On occasion, Games Workshop produces a few Promotional models for events such as major Battle Tours, Games Days, or perhaps a new game launch. These models are limited editions, as they are ONLY for sale at the event and are not otherwise available. We have included some of these models in this catalog, but they will NOT have codes, nor may they be ordered through any of our sales channels.

Above: This promotional Witch Hunter Inquisitor was available at Warlords Weekend.

Out of Stock

While GW tries not to run out of stock of any products, there are occasionally forces beyond our control. Even if we do run out of stock on a few items, our improved manufacturing system will have the items back in stock in no time. However, there may be exceptions.

Models from older ranges may suffer when their molds become worn out. If we cannot repair or replace the molds, then we will retire the model from the available range rather than sell poorly cast figures.

If any models have dropped from availability, updates will be sent to Rogue Traders, Games Workshop Hobby Centers, and our Mail Order Division and will also be noted on our web site. Again, we do not anticipate any such incidents, but over the years, we've learned that it happens on occasion.

Unassembled & Unpainted

In this catalog, models and bitz are shown in a variety of ways – painted, unpainted, in pieces, and fully assembled. Games Workshop models are always sold as unassembled and unpainted. The painted and assembled models are shown to provide both a clear picture of the finished product and an inspiration to the modeler and painter.

Full models (not bitz) are sold with the appropriate plastic base that is specified by the game rules. For instance, an Imperial Guard trooper is supplied with a 25-mm round base, while an Ogre will come with a 40-mm square base.

The size of Citadel Miniatures can be very different. Some are huge (like a Giant or Carnifex), while some are relatively small (Gnoblar). Where possible, models are shown at ACTUAL SIZE in the catalog. In some cases, the models are shown a bit smaller, and this fact is noted where relevant throughout the catalog.

All models are supplied unpainted.
Models, bitz, and plastic sprues are shown at actual size unless otherwise noted.

How the Catalog Is Organized

When you start to flip through something as massive as The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference (2005–2006 Edition), it is best if you have an idea of how things are laid out and what you can expect to find in each section.

Organized by Game

The catalog is organized by Game System. The first part of any section will cover the game, what it is, how to get started, and the core products: rulebooks, annuals, and supplements. Next, the armies, warbands, fleets, or teams for that game will be covered.

Army Organization

Warhammer 40,000 and Warhammer armies are displayed in basically the same way.

Introduction. A bit of background on the army and a brief synopsis on its fighting style.

Getting Started. The relevant Codex/Army books and any Battle Force or Battalion starter force boxes.

By Codex or Army Book. The models for the armies are then organized per their Codex or Army books. Thus, for Warhammer 40,000 armies, HQ choices are first and are followed by Elites, Troops, Fast Attack, and Heavy Support. For Warhammer armies, Lords & Heroes are listed first and are followed by Core, Special, and Rare choices.

Hobby Stuff

Colors of War. The Colors of War sections show off a lot of different color schemes that can be used to paint the models. These sections can help hobbyists choose a color scheme for their own army or perhaps inspire them to create their own unique version.

Showcase. At the end of each army, we spotlight models in a showcase. These awesome and eye-catching armies are often painted by Grand Tournament contestants from around the world and will give the reader an inspirational rendition of the featured army. There are plenty of ideas to be found in the showcase. With the plethora of a bitz to be found on these pages, you should have no trouble in finding ideas to make your own miniature masterpieces.

Hobby Material. Throughout each section are hobby tips, step-by-steps, and as many great examples as we could pack in. We have included showcases of completed armies and converted models. Terrain has not been overlooked, and we showcase battlefields or terrain pieces for almost every army.

Alternate Models. In the Showcase section, we include a few converted models and list the bitz and a difficulty rating for those hobbyists interested in trying their hand at a conversion. Included here are component codes as well as any Special Offer Bitz that are not shown elsewhere in the Catalog. If you're looking for a unique addition to your force, this section is for you!

COMPLEXITY RATING

Tactics & Countertactics

At the end of each section, tactics for the army are given to help if you are starting the army and need help in getting a feel for how it works. In case you are having trouble with a particular army, countertactics give you ideas on how to defeat your opponent. Within each section, there may be units that have tactics that are particularly suited to them. When the icon above right appears next to a unit or troop type, look for an associated strategic tip later on in the section.

Exceptions

Of course, with a catalog of this size, there are bound to be exceptions to the rules. For example, the Chaos Creatures section includes models that can be used in both the Warhammer 40,000 and Warhammer.

GAME SYSTEM

This small icon lets you know quickly which section of the catalog you are flipping through.

HEADER FOR SECTION

Each army for Warhammer 40,000 or Warhammer is labeled with these headers to let you know what you are looking at.

HOBBY PROJECTS

In addition to showing off the amazing models and bitz, the catalog has worked in lots of hobby tips, painting step-by-steps, advice, and examples.

How Is It Packaged?

The many models shown in this catalog are packaged and sold in a wide variety of ways. To ensure that the hobbyist can find and receive exactly what he/she is looking for, we define here what each label means. The goal of this section is to point out how to read the labels and clarify what is meant by each of the packaging terms. Models are available in the following packages.

Box or Boxed Set. These terms denote the packaging of either a set of models or a larger multiple-piece model that is sold in a box. If the description says "Random," then the mix of models in the box may differ slightly.

Bolt Thrower Box (1 Bolt Thrower & 2 Crew)
99120210006

Blister Packs. This term refers to a particular type of packaging, a plastic bubble that holds models to a piece of card. If you were to order a Blister Pack code that said "Random," you would receive a random variation of the available models from that code.

Note that the catalog does not show the blister pack but instead shows the assembled models that are enclosed.

Bitz. This term refers to a component piece that makes up a complete model that would normally be sold in a Blister Pack or Box. Bitz have longer 12-digit codes and are shown unpainted. No additional plastic parts, such as miniature bases, plastic shields, or mounts (like horses or wolves) are included with bitz sales.

Some single-piece models may be given both a blister and a bitz code. Where this is the case, each code will be labeled clearly so that customers can ascertain whether they are getting the blister (complete with all necessary plastics, bases, etc.) or the bit.

Plastic Sprues. "Sprue" describes the plastic "frames" of plastic models or pieces. Each sprue comes with detailed component parts that must be cut out and assembled. There are boxed sets of many plastic sprues (to build an entire squad or unit), and most sprues are also available as independent bitz.

Some plastic sprues are accessories, like plastic shields or plastic Space Marine backpacks. Other plastic sprues are used to make up complete plastic Citadel Miniatures. In the case of complete plastic models, there are countless ways to assemble the plastic components, so we always try to show a few finished examples so that readers will know what the finished product looks like.

Shown here are a plastic sprue labeled as a bit, a boxed regiment full of plastic sprues, and some of the fantastic models that can be assembled from those pieces.

Ogre Bulls Box (6)

Multiple Options

At times, there are multiple ways to buy the same figure. Here, the Chaos Knights from the Warhammer Chaos army will serve as our example.

OPTION 1. If you want to buy only a single model, look for a label similar to the one below.

Knights of Chaos Blister (Random 1) 99060201129

The label of "Random 1" means that, if you order the code 99060201129 you will receive one of the Chaos Knights. As there are multiple models with the same code, the blister is packed randomly. If you are at a Rogue Trader shop or Games Workshop Hobby Center, you can shuffle through the blisters and pick exactly which one you want.

OPTION 2. The next option is under the color picture that shows all the available models painted and reads something like the caption below.

This label does NOT say "Random." Thus, the models pictured are the ones that come in the box. This option is perfect if you're looking to build a unit of Chaos Knights.

OPTION 3. The third way you may purchase a Chaos Knight is as individual bitz. Each of the separate parts that make up the complete models you find in the box are broken down and coded for sale as individual pieces. Bitz are a great option for serious hobbyists looking for exact pieces, but they will have to be special ordered and are sold at a premium price. It is slightly cheaper to order the random blister of one Chaos Knight than to order the specific component bitz that will make up the model.

WHERE? Better stores should stock options 1 and 2. To get option 3 (the bitz), you can ask your favorite shop to place an order for you or try our Online Store or Mail Order Service.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Random or Not?

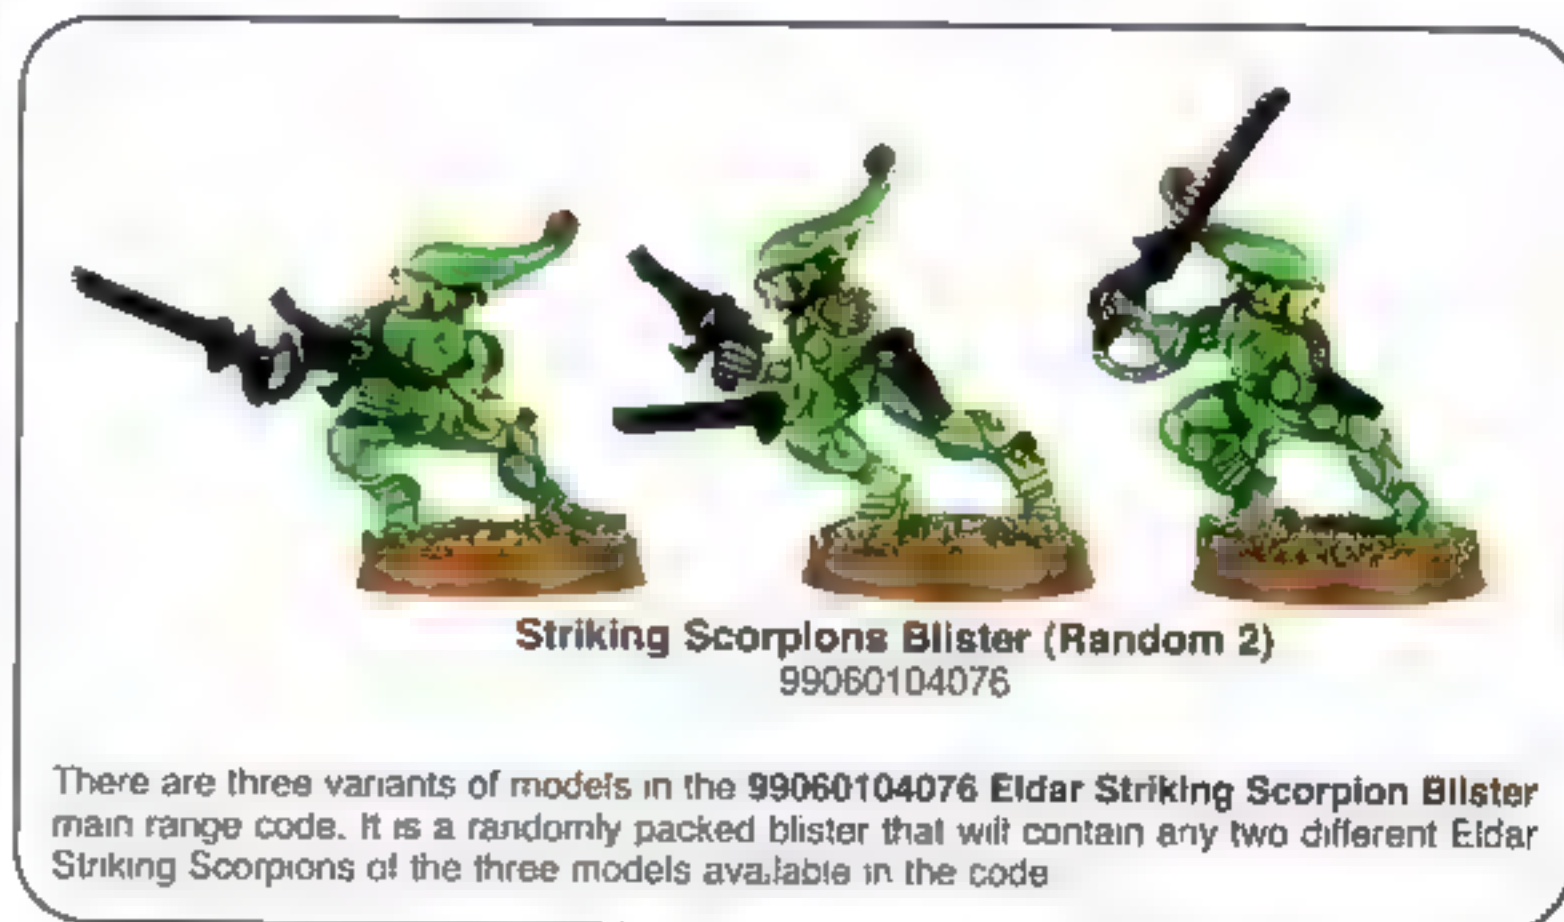

Remember the only time you will receive random miniatures is when you order a code that has "Random" marked next to it.

Random packaging is done when there are a multitude of models that have exactly the same code. If purchasing a particular model is important to you, the best routes to take are either to get to a store that carries a wide selection of Games Workshop products and find the variant on the shelves or to place a special order and order the exact model you want as bitz.

Will This Catalog Ever Be out of Date?

The bad news is that, yes, The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference will be out of date at some point. The good news is that it will be out of date because there are new Games Workshop models, accessories, games, and more coming out all the time.

Hobbyists can keep up to date with the latest releases by checking out White Dwarf magazine and by visiting the Games Workshop web site.

Striking Scorpions Blister (Random 2) 99060104076

There are three variants of models in the 99060104076 Eldar Striking Scorpion Blister main range code. It is a randomly packed blister that will contain any two different Eldar Striking Scorpions of the three models available in the code.

It is also possible that, during the course of the ongoing year, Games Workshop may have to drop a few codes of miniatures due to mold deterioration. When codes are lost, for any reason, updates will be posted on our web site as well as sent out to all Rogue Trader shops and Games Workshop Hobby Centers.

For help with this catalog or any Games Workshop products, call our Hobby Specialists at 1-800-394-4263 (GAME).

How Do I Purchase Items Shown in This Catalog?

If you are looking to purchase Special Offer models or if you are after individual bits or pieces then you can place a special order straight from your favorite store. Just ask a staff member to place a special order for Games Workshop.

While it is true that our products are easier to find than they were years ago, you may still live far away from any shops that carry Games Workshop merchandise. Or it could be, for some reason, that your local store does not want to participate in our special ordering program. Games Workshop has a toll-free Mail Order Service that is fast and efficient as well as a fantastic Online Store.

Finding a Store Near You

Every other month, we print a Retailer List in White Dwarf magazine that groups all the Independent Rogue Trader stores and Games Workshop Hobby Centers by State or Province. On our web site, under Shopping you can also run a search to find the store nearest you. You can also place a call toll-free (1-800-394-GAME) to our Mail Order Staff who will happily assist you in finding a local shop.

How Can I Get Catalog Help?

We have done our best to design this catalog in an easy-to-follow method so that hobbyists can find what they want. However, if you have a question that just doesn't seem to be answered in this catalog, we are happy to answer all questions. The best way to get in touch with us is to call us at

Coding & Prices

Games Workshop reserves the right to correct errors and modify prices as they appear in this catalog. All prices in The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference (2005-2006 Edition) are subject to change. Price updates, if any, will be sent to Independent Retailers and our Hobby Centers as well as posted on our web site.

Returns

It is conceivable that you may find yourself with an undamaged Games Workshop item that you do not want. Perhaps a well-meaning relative or friend purchased a duplicate item for your army, or maybe you just picked up the wrong box and didn't notice until you got home. If you can't fit it into your army/collection/painting plans, then you will want to make a return.

Independent Retailers set their own policies for returns, refunds, store credit, and exchanges. We suggest you ask about the store policy before purchasing major items, as some shops may be unable or unwilling to accept returns.

Games Workshop's Return Policies

- Games Workshop Hobby Centers accept returns for exchange on packaged, current range products only. The boxed set, blister pack, book, or game must be in saleable condition, i.e., unopened and undamaged. Refunds are also available on returns but only within 30 days of purchase and when accompanied by the original sales receipt. Some limitations and exceptions may apply. Please see the individual Hobby Center manager for more details.
- Games Workshop Direct Services (Mail Order and the Online Store) accept returns for exchange on packaged, current range products only. The boxed set, blister pack, book, or game must be in saleable condition, i.e., unopened and undamaged. Refunds are available only to customers of Direct Services within 60 days of purchase. Some limitations and exceptions may apply. Please contact Direct Services at 1-800-394-4263 (GAME) to obtain a return authorization before sending any products.
- Games Workshop CANNOT accept returns on bitz so be very careful when writing down codes and numbers to ensure you are getting the models you want.

If you have an item that you would like to return to Games Workshop, give us a call (1-800-394-GAME) and we will be glad to help you out.

Please note these Return Policies are for customers. Independent Retailers should contact their Sales Representative to discuss replacement products or returns.

Special Note to Independent Retailers

It is obviously impractical for any store to attempt to carry every game, model, and bit that Games Workshop makes. However, The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference (2005-2006 Edition) makes sure that any store stocking any Games Workshop products can special order even the most obscure and unusual bit in our entire product line. This voluminous book is a gateway to vast amount of models, bitz, and more.

Games Workshop has produced a small packet of materials that can help any Independent Retailer understand the Special Order process and also help Retailers advertise to their customers that their store is the place to order all bitz and other special needs. If you're an Independent Retailer and have not yet received a catalog and a retailer's guide, please contact your Sales Representative right away.

Games Workshop strives for 100% Customer Satisfaction.

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF HIS CATALOG

An Invaluable Resource

Army builders, painters, collectors, modelers, and terrain builders will find The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference (2005-2006 Edition) to be an invaluable resource and inspiration for any of their projects. On this page, we've tried to gather some tips, tricks, ideas, and suggestion to help you get the most out of this Catalog.

Tactics & Countertactics

While the main thrust of this catalog is toward the painting and converting aspect of the hobby, the gaming aspect is not entirely left out in the cold. After all, after spending hours crafting and painting your latest unit, it isn't any fun at all for it to be wiped out on the 1st turn of the game. To help you get the most out of your hobby, Tactics and Countertactics can be found at the end of each section.

Conversions

Converting models is the art of altering a model from its normal appearance. There are countless ways to convert a model, like using modeling putty to add extra features or swapping bitz and pieces from other models. From simple additions like a few skulls around a hero's base to wild changes like tentacles or mutations, a conversion can really make a model unique and characterful.

For conversion fans, this complete catalog is like finding the fabled Golden City of El Dorado. All the available bitz, plastic sprues, and individual models are shown on page after page. So whether you are looking at finding some thematic metal shoulder pads for your Space Marine army or looking for some severed heads to adorn your Ork Warlord's trophy rack, you've come to the right place.

Explore Ranges

When planning for conversions, don't just look for bitz to use in your own army section. Branch out and try other games entirely. Use Warhammer 40,000 models in your Warhammer force or Warhammer bitz to help detail your Warhammer 40,000 vehicles. Below are some ideas.

- Check out the range of metal and plastic shields for each of the Warhammer armies
- Bitz can make for great campaign markers and really bring a map to life!
- Scavenged Ork weapons can be pulled from any army!
- Chaos mutations know no bounds!
- A few models from your favorite opponent's range make for nice prisoners or casualties
- Try using Empire or Bretonnian banners for Space Marines or Imperial Guard.

Inspiration

When you sit down to start a new painting project, it is often useful to have a reference. What could be better than hundreds of pages of painted miniatures?

With this catalog, you will no longer be subjected to hasty last-minute scrambles to find a painted picture in an old issue of White Dwarf or have to go online to scour the Games Workshop web site. In addition to models from the incomparable 'Eavy Metal team, there are tons of pictures of Golden Demon-winning models, armies from Grand Tournament champions, and a host of variant schemes in the Colors of War sections.

Above: Bob Ketter's Ultramarines capture the feel of one of the greatest of all Space Marine Chapters.

THANKS!

The Complete Games Workshop Catalog and Hobby Reference is enormous. There is no denying that this project would never have gotten off the ground without the help of many, many people, and we'd like to take this space to thank as many of them as we can.

First off, thanks to the matchless talents of the Games Workshop Citadel Miniatures sculptors and 'Eavy Metal Team painters. These models are not mere "toy soldiers" but instead are tiny works of art that will continue to bring the exciting worlds of Games Workshop to life for so many of us.

Second, thanks to all the fans and hobbyists out there who we have seen at Games Day, Golden Demon painting competitions, Grand Tournaments, Rogue Trader events, and more. Without your skills and enthusiasm, there would be no Games Workshop.

Special thanks go out to all the hobbyists whose work appears in this catalog. These full-color examples of some of the most splendid paint jobs, conversions, and armies on this planet would not have been possible without your work. We have tried to give credit to all the artists who are shown, but with over 600 pages, we're sure we missed a few. Please get in touch with us, and we'll be sure to add your name to the next edition.

And last but not least, thanks to the Games Workshop U.S. staff, especially William Stilwell, Stu Spengler, Nicole Shewchuk, Drew Will, Sean Forbes, and Jeff Cauley, who slaved under the weighty responsibility of showing off all of the Games Workshop products with as much care, sweat, and skill as with which they were originally made and painted. Special mention goes out to those who fell along the way. Thanks again!

CHAOS CREATURES

The skies grew blacker still until the darkness became an ominous pressure. None knew if the defenses could hold, but when a forking tongue of lightning cracked the skies, the battlefield was illuminated for a brief, but damning moment. Hordes of snarling creatures with bestial manes and wicked axes were revealed. But what stopped the blood from flowing from our hearts was the towering figure rising above the daemonic throngs. We clapped our hands to our faces and covered our eyes and ears as the creature bellowed its own savage answer to the earth-shaking thunderclap.

A Bloodthirster had come, and our doom was sealed.

Chaos Creatures are otherworldly, powerful, and inherently evil. They are also unique in that the majority of models and troop types may be used for both Warhammer 40,000 and Warhammer games.

There are four major powers of Chaos Khorne, the Blood God, governs the realm of rage and battle. Tzeentch is the Changer of Ways and the Master of magic and the Weave of Time. Nurgle is the Lord of Decay whose realm is plagues, disease, and pestilence. Slaanesh is the Dark Prince who is neither man nor woman and whose realm is pleasure and decadence.

In Warhammer 40,000

In the far future, the Warp is mankind's greatest hope and also its greatest threat. As the Warp allows for travel between unimaginable distances, entire systems can be crossed in a span of hours, days, or weeks as opposed to the years, decades, and even millennia that conventional travel would require. However, the Warp is rife with peril.

The ebb and flow of the Warp tide is unpredictable and subject to vast storms that affect space, time, and most of all, the sanity of any who dare to enter. The Warp is home to countless horrible creatures and most notably the four Chaos Powers: Khorne, Nurgle, Tzeentch, and Slaanesh.

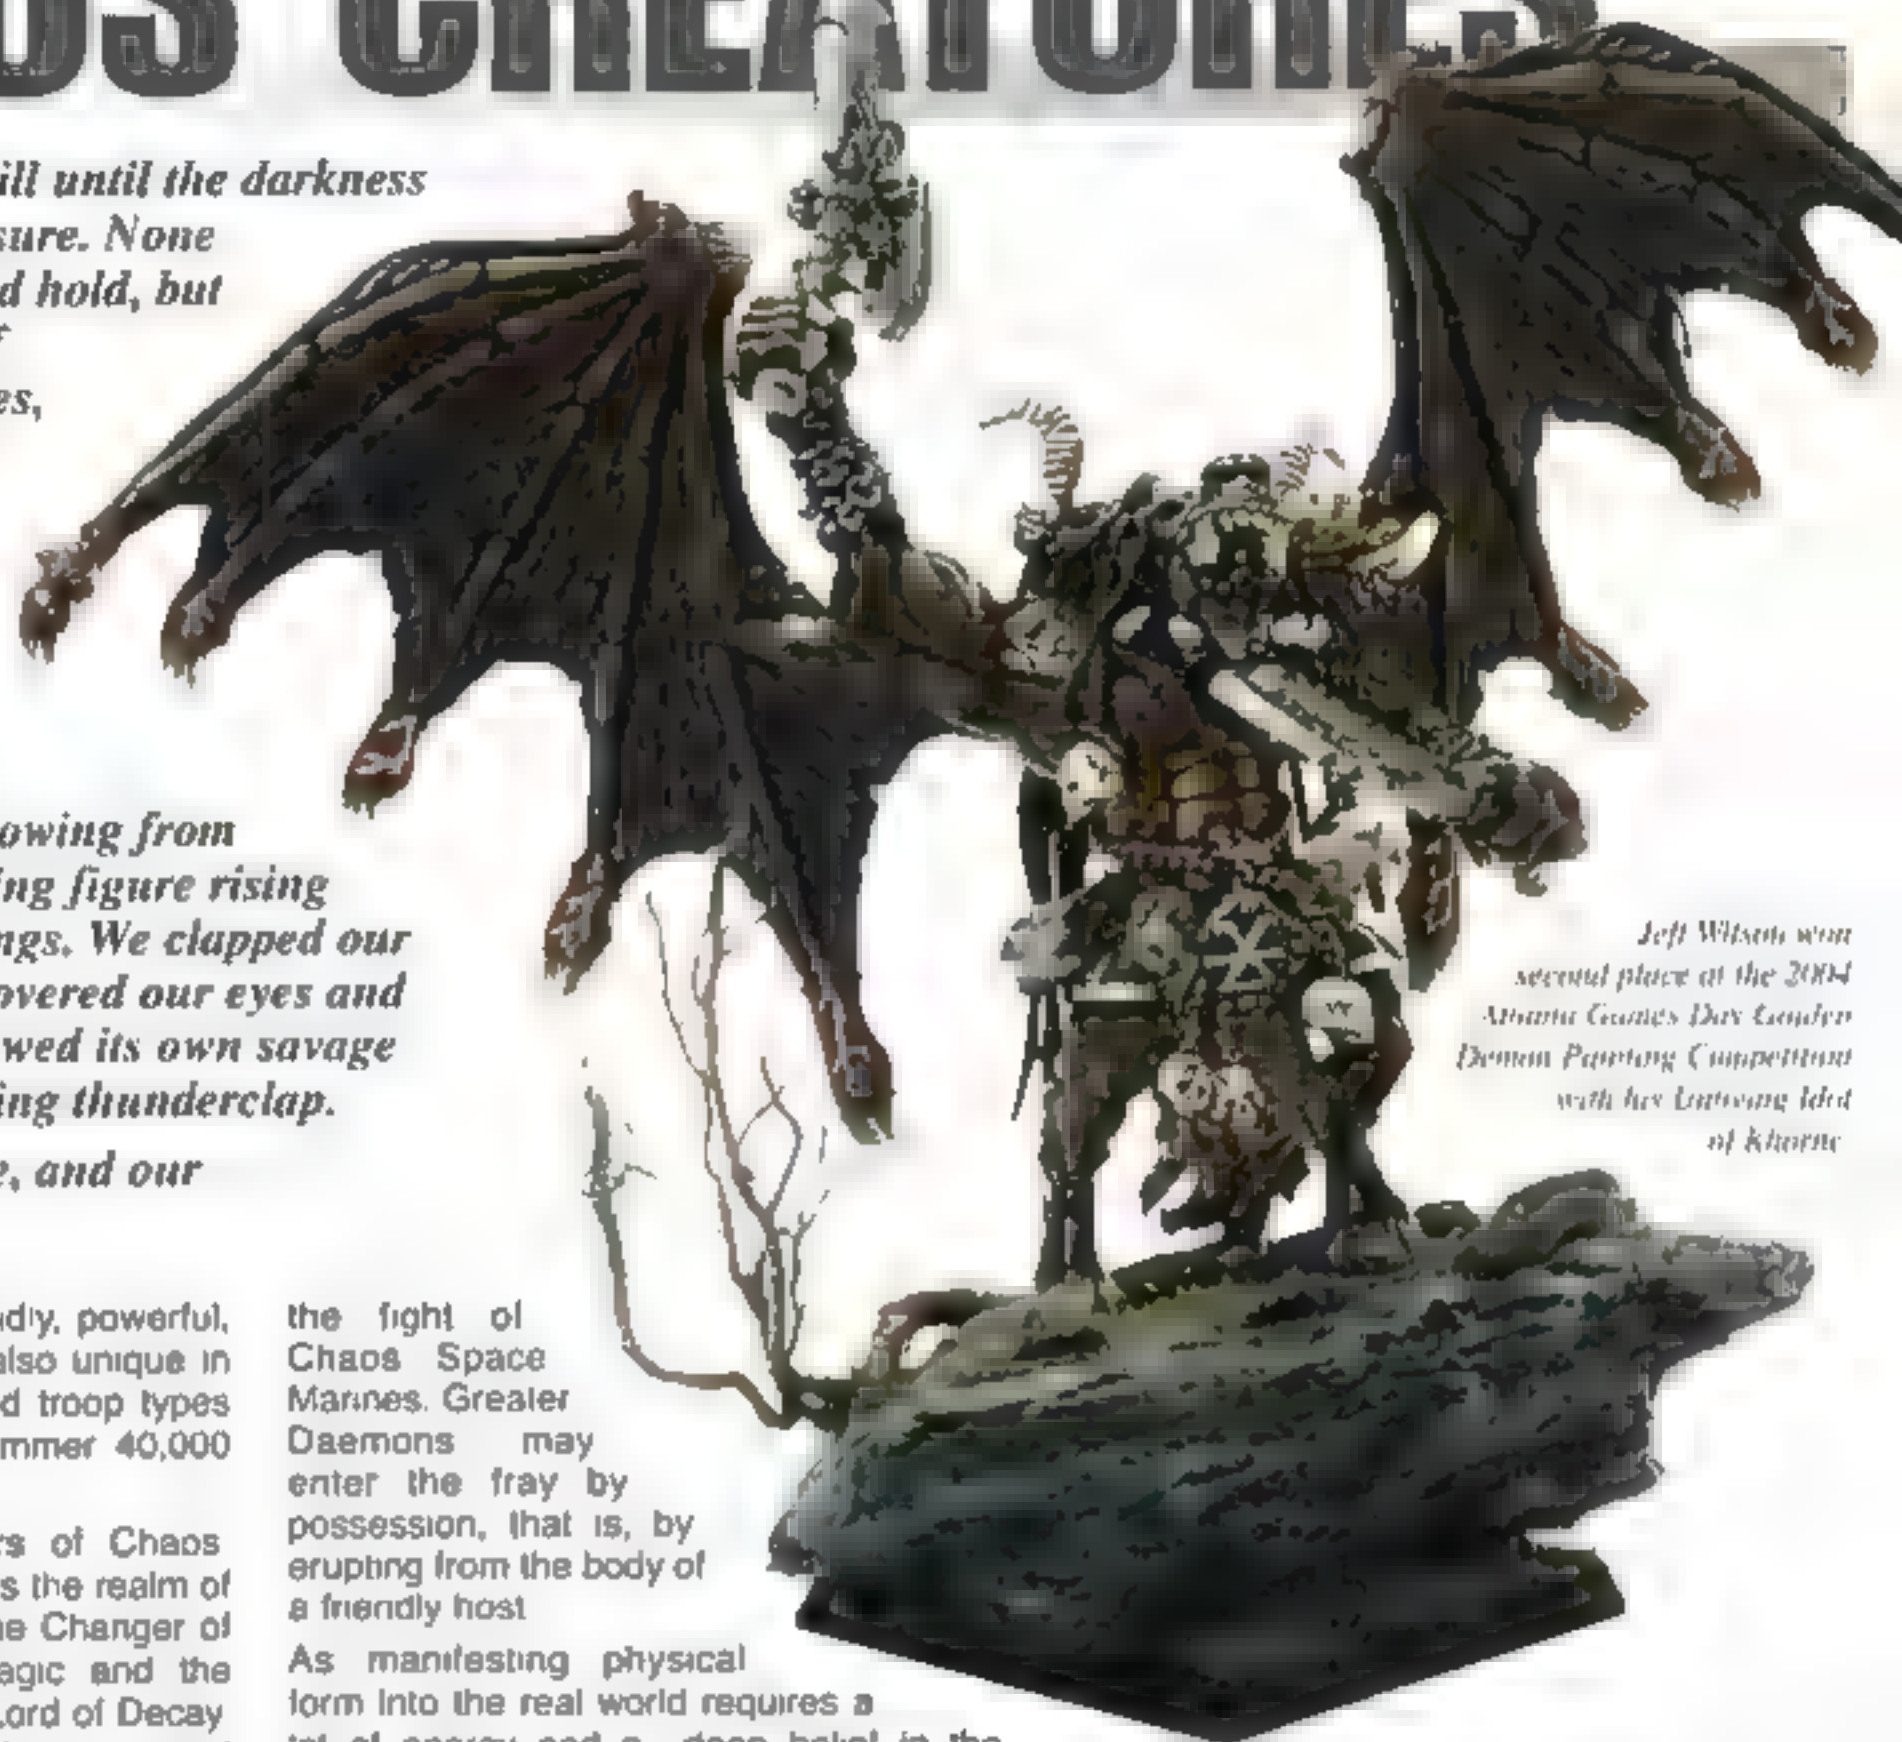

On the battlefields of the 41st millennium, the Daemons of Chaos may be summoned to aid the fight of Chaos Space Marines. Greater Daemons may enter the fray by possession, that is, by erupting from the body of a friendly host.

As manifesting physical form into the real world requires a lot of energy and a deep belief in the Chaos power, the Daemons can rarely stay materialized for long and thus are subject to instability. Still, for the short time they may appear on the battlefield, the Daemons are brutal and potentially game-winning units.

As Daemons are summoned onto the battlefield, they can often materialize right where they are needed most. All Daemons, whether Packs, Nurglings, or Beasts have an invulnerable save. However, appearing on the battlefield where they are summoned means that often Daemons are on top of their victims before too many shots may be fired.

Khorne's Bloodletters and Flesh Hounds excel in close combat. Horrors of Tzeentch hurl sorcerous bolts to defeat the foe, and Plaguebearers use their horrible Nurgle's Rot and oozing venom to take out even the toughest of enemy fighters. Slaanesh Daemonettes use their Warp Scream to slow down the enemy and make them ripe for destruction.

Jeff Wilson won second place at the 2004 Atlanta Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition with his Lamenting Idol of Khorne.

In Warhammer

In the world of Warhammer, Daemons exist in the Realm of Chaos and other magically saturated lands. During times of great upheaval, Daemons may also be summoned to the mortal lands to wreak untold havoc.

Daemons may be fielded in several ways in Warhammer. They may be a part of a Chaos army under the command of a mortal, or beasts General, be it a Chaos Lord, Exalted Sorcerer, Beast Lord, or Doombull. Alternatively, a player can choose to field an entire army of Daemons led by a Greater Daemon or Daemon Prince.

On the battlefield, all Daemons are a force to be reckoned with. Blocks of Bloodletters or Plaguebearers are capable of taking out the enemy's best elite units in close combat. Flesh Hounds of Khorne are excellent fast flanking troops, and Screamer of Tzeentch and Chaos Furies can fly to hit the enemy almost anywhere on the battlefield. Horrors of Tzeentch can mass in units and cast devastating spells, while units that get too close can be assailed by accompanying Flammers who cast magical firebolts within 8". Slaanesh Daemonettes produce an aura that distracts and disables the foe.

Elite units, Dragons, Giants, and more will pale before the powers of Greater Daemons. Greater Daemons and Daemon Princes are colossal embodiments of Chaos and leave only destruction and terror in their wake.

The Nature of the Beast

Whether you are building a unit for Warhammer 40,000 or Warhammer Daemons are both colorful and hard-hitting. By their very nature, Chaos creatures provide a fantastic opportunity for creative modelers and conversion-fans to really go to town. On the following pages, you will find examples of Golden Demon winners and eye-catching Grand Tournament armies. Many of these examples are converted, that is, they have mixed and matched body parts, weapons, tentacles, mutations, and even extra putty to make them unique (and often quite hideous).

Use these examples, as well as all the pictured bitz and pieces, to spark your own imagination and help you come up with your own twisted mutations of Chaos. So what are you waiting for? Grab your hobby knife and get converting!!!

Brian Holover won first place at the 2004 Chicago Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition with Garthrax, Greater Daemon of Khorne.

About the Chaos Creatures Section

This section contains models that are for use in armies in both Warhammer and Warhammer 40,000. Unless otherwise noted, all of the boxed sets and blister packs in the Chaos Creatures section come packaged with both Warhammer and a Warhammer 40,000 game-appropriate bases where applicable.

Above: Although the Chaos furies are shown on their box cover with square 25mm bases for Warhammer, they come packaged with both those bases and the 25-mm round bases for use in Warhammer 40,000.

GETTING STARTED

Warhammer Armies: Hordes of Chaos has all of the rules for the majority of the Daemons in this section, as well as tips on collecting and fielding a Chaos Daemon army. Warhammer Storm of Chaos contains new troop types for Chaos and plenty of background information on Archum's campaign of destruction.

PAINTING THE GREAT UNCLEAN ONE

Here, we'll show you a few techniques and tricks you can use to paint the areas of rotting flesh on your Great Unclean One. These techniques are simple to do and, when properly executed, will yield a stunning Greater Daemon.

Undercoat your Greater Daemon with Chaos Black spray and paint any areas of poor coverage with thinned Chaos Black paint. Paint the flesh areas of the Daemon with a basecoat mix of Dark Angels Green and Vomit Brown. Add a little Bleached Bone to the basecoat and highlight the raised areas.

Highlight the Daemon's pustules again after adding more Bleached Bone to the Dark Angels Green and Vomit Brown basecoat mix. Paint the maggots in a 50/50 mix of Bubonic Brown and Bleached Bone. Highlight after adding more Bleached Bone to the mix.

Paint the intestines and gaping flesh with a mix of Bubonic Brown and Chaos Black. Highlight these areas after adding Bleached Bone to the initial paint mix. To finish off wash these areas with a thin coat of Brown Ink.

Paint the exposed bone areas of the Greater Daemon with a 50/50 mix of Bubonic Brown and Chaos Black. Add Bleached Bone to this mix for a series of successive highlights. Finish off with a final highlight of Bleached Bone. To finish off the rotting flesh areas, apply several glazes of Purple, Green and Brown inks.

PAINTING GREATER DAEMONS

Daemons of Slaanesh have a pale, almost pastel hue to their skin. We have detailed a few of the techniques we used to paint our Greater Daemon of Slaanesh below.

Undercoat the Greater Daemon with a thin layer of Chaos Black. Paint the skin with a basecoat of Dwarf Flesh.

Add increasing amounts of Elf Flesh to Dwarf Flesh and paint a series of successive highlights. Finish with Elf Flesh on its own.

Add Skull White to Elf Flesh and paint another highlight. Finally, apply very delicate highlights of Skull White to the model.

To add some definition to your Daemon, apply a thin layer of Blue Ink to some of the deeper recesses of the model.

Paint a basecoat of four parts Liche Purple to one part Chaos Black on the claws and horns. Highlight first with Liche Purple and then with successive layers of Liche Purple with Skull White added. Wash these sections with Purple Ink.

Paint the tongue with a basecoat of Shadow Grey. Add in a small quantity of Dwarf Flesh for the highlights on the tongue.

Paint the Daemon's black endoskeleton, talons, and straps with a basecoat of Chaos Black and then highlight with Codex Grey.

Paint the gold areas with a basecoat of Dwarf Bronze. Highlight with Shining Gold and then add Mithril Silver to the Shining Gold for edging highlights.

If you have a steady hand you might want to try painting some tattoos on the model. In Chaos Black paint like the one shown on the right.

PAINTING TZEENTCH HORRORS

Crackling with magical energy, the Daemons of Tzeentch are resplendent in bright primary colors.

To get a nice, bright final color on your Horrors of Tzeentch, start with a Skull White undercoat. Make sure your coverage is complete.

Start by painting a basecoat of Enchanted Blue. Once this coat dries, wash the model in Blue Ink. Highlight the skin with Enchanted Blue and then again with Hawk Turquoise.

Blend up a 50/50 mix of Hawk Turquoise and Skull White and highlight the raised areas of the model.

Paint the Horror's nails with Skull White.

Paint the mouth and eyes with Chaos Black. Basecoat the gums, eyes, and tongue in Warlock Purple. Pick out the details with Tentacle Pink and add an extra Skull White highlight to the tongue. Add spots to the tongue by dipping your brush in Magenta Ink and dabbing the tip onto the tongue.

Finish off your Horror by covering the base. Cover the base with white glue and dip it into a container of sand. Paint the sand with Black Ink and then drybrush it with Bleached Bone. Dab a bit of white glue in places on the base and dip it into a container of static grass. Paint the edge of the base in Goblin Green. If you like, you can paint areas of the base in Magenta or Blue Ink to represent dripping magical energy.

PAINTING PLAGUEBEARERS

Plaguebearers are rotten with disease and dirty with decay. Their colors are normally muted and muddy. The technique described below allows you to paint 5 or 10 Plaguebearers quickly and at the same time

Undercoat the Plaguebearer with Skull White and then basecoat it with Bleached Bone

Apply Black Ink to the entire surface of the model. Once dry, wash the Plaguebearer with Dark Green Ink

Highlight the model by painting Bleached Bone on the raised and flat areas. Take a little extra time on the face and make sure you pick out the cheek bones and nose

Next, apply Brown and Chestnut inks to select parts of the model generally the darker recessed areas. Streak some ink across the belly to make it look dirty and diseased.

Paint the open wounds and sores with Snakebite Leather and then wash these areas with Red Ink. Don't worry if some of the ink overruns, as it will only add to the wounded, diseased look of the model

Highlight the facial features, outer flaps of broken skin, and pustules with Bleached Bone followed by Skull White

Paint the single eye with Blood Red and then Skull White. Leave red around the edge of the eye. To finish off the Daemon, dot the eye with a Chaos Black pupil and wash the sword with Brown Ink

Group shot shown at approximately 65% actual size

Bring It onto Your Tabletop

Warhammer 40,000 is the game that allows two or more players to command the forces of the Imperium of Mankind or its enemies on the tabletop. Using fantastically detailed models for soldiers, futuristic tanks, aliens, and more, players move, shoot, and try to outmaneuver each other on a table-turned-battlefield. Each player controls a whole army. Good tactics win games, while poor ones will get your forces wiped off the gaming table.

More Than a Game

In addition to being a competitive game, Warhammer 40,000 is an entire hobby. Players can build armies, paint models, create new terrain, devise scenarios or special missions to play, and get involved in an ongoing league or campaign – as many challenges as a gamer could want.

Some players get involved in many different aspects of the Hobby, while some settle on a few or even just one particular part. The following pages are all about getting started with the game and building your army.

All Levels of Gaming

The Warhammer 40,000 rules allow great scope for gaming. Games can range in length from quick half-hour skirmishes with a dozen or so models per side to massive battles between dozens of players – each with his own sizeable armies. The objectives of each game can be as simple as “wipe out the other side” to complicated missions seeking to capture a powerful artifact or reach a certain portion of the battlefield (perhaps to close down a teleporter).

Some players build large and official armies for play in tournaments, large gatherings of like-minded competitors. The gaming lasts for hours or even whole weekends before a winner is declared. Other gamers quite gleefully (and unofficially) scratch-build their own battle stations, massive tanks, or mutated monsters to make their games even more varied. Still others link their games to form a large campaign, where each battle affects the next.

There is no right or wrong way to play, and many gamers constantly find new favorite ways to play to supplement traditional gaming. It's a big universe out there!

So Many Choices

First off, it is important that we say there is no right or wrong way to choose an army. There is nothing wrong with starting to collect an army and then switching to another because it suits your style better. Just remember, though, the more times you switch armies, the further you'll be from having a fighting force to play with.

Take a look at the following advice and mull it over. Perhaps we can get you on the right course as quickly as possible.

Getting Started

Some lucky players know which army they want to collect immediately. Perhaps they have seen some games in action or spoken with an experienced friend. Others are less sure and may have boiled it down to a few choices but still don't really know. This page and the next can help you reach a decision.

To make your best decision, the first thing to do is to amass all the information you can about the armies that you find appealing. This very catalog is an excellent aid. There may be a lot of criteria for players choosing their armies, but here are some of the ones we've encountered most often: style of play, background, and the miniatures. Each of these topics deserves closer inspection.

Style of Play

Each army in the Warhammer 40,000 game is different and will be better at different things on the tabletop. The important part here is for players to try to imagine the kind of play they'd like best. Do you see yourself as an aggressive, risk-taking commander who is looking to bring the fight to the enemy? Or does a defensive stand sound better? Would you rather lay down a hail of fire from long-range, or do you want superior numbers to swamp the foe? It is possible to achieve some or even all of these tactics with the same army, but every force has strengths and weak points.

For example, let us consider a Tau army. The Tau have some of the best and most advanced weaponry in the Warhammer 40,000 game. They can strike hard from long range. Where Tau fall short is in close quarters combat. There are upgrades, troop choices (like Kroot), and more that can compensate for this lack of hand-to-hand skill, but even with these things in place, a Tau army is far better off when keeping the foe at range.

In this catalog, players can find out more about how each army plays by reading the Fighting Style sections for each force.

Background

One of the best parts of the Warhammer 40,000 game is the rich background. Each army has its own history, home world, and goals. A lot of players find inspiration for collecting an army in its background.

For example, the Tyranids are an alien race that has a single Hive Mind consciousness. All the swarms of creatures are coordinated as if a single mind controlled them! Tyranids drift through space looking for life forms to consume for the Hive. Most of the troop types are mindless engines of destruction that can be driven to destroy all they encounter.

A player looking for a small army with lots of individuality, a noble history, and a valiant ethos would do well to steer clear of the Tyranids! Each army in this catalog begins with some background information.

Miniatures

Many players choose armies based strictly on the look of the model range. Since collecting and painting are such a large part of the Warhammer 40,000 Hobby, choosing a force based on looks is a sensible option. After all, the more you like and enjoy the models, the more you'll have fun in the collecting, painting, and modeling aspects of the Hobby.

This catalog is ideal in that such minded players can ogie the entire available range of models for each army.

Taking the Next Step

The next step, once you've found an army or two that really capture your interest, is to find out more. The Games Workshop web site is also ideal for this sort of research, and you'll find information about every army.

Finding and talking to a local gaming group is always a great idea. After all, the members may be some of the opponents you'll be squaring off against with your new army in the future. Ask around to find out the times when players meet at your local Rogue Trader Independent Retailer or Games Workshop Hobby Center.

The Essentials – The Codex

Once you've decided on an army, the Codex for that army is the next logical step. Each Codex goes into detail about one particular army, its rules, and background and enables players to build game-legal armies for play.

Each Codex contains a complete army list along with descriptions and rules for every troop and vehicle as well as every weapon and piece of battle gear available to the force. Additional background and history are included, as are the profiles for some special characters and all the special rules you'll need to know about your army of choice.

Collecting Models

If you are anything like us, you often gravitate toward the most eye-catching models in the range first, which is completely understandable. However, if you end up with an army that has only commanders and no troops, playing a standard game can become a problem. It makes sense to balance your force as you collect it.

Most Warhammer 40,000 scenarios are played with the Standard Mission template (shown at right). This is an excellent place to start, as it lists maximums for different types of squads as well as the minimum requirements. These minimums – an HQ choice and two Troops choices – make an excellent starting force.

In this catalog, in the Collecting an Army sections of each chapter, we make a few suggestions about how to begin collecting each army.

As you continue to collect models and expand your force, you'll want to include extra choices in your force, like four or five options for Heavy Support even though only three are allowed in Standard Missions. Why? Having a range of models to choose from allows you to switch your army or gear up to take on specific opponents. The ability to field three tanks or two Devastator Squads is a nice option against tough foes who aren't expecting such a plan. Similarly, having a lot of Fast Attack choices to make a highly maneuverable army will surprise opponents who are expecting a slow or defensive force.

Warhammer 40,000 is full of armies that are fun to play, model, and paint. From the technologically advanced and idealistic Tau to the implacable pinnacle of genetic modification of the Tyranids, you can find an army for you!

Each Codex arranges its army into the following sections. HQ, Elites, Troops, Fast Attack, and Heavy Support. This catalog is similarly organized.

HQ. HQ is short for Headquarters and contains heroes, officers, advisors, and other specialists that lead the army.

Elites. Elites are the best trained or most ferocious warriors in the army. They often have access to the best weapons and armor.

Troops. All armies contain a high number of rank-and-file soldiers. Often, these warriors are flexible, if not spectacular, in all aspects of battle.

Fast Attack. Speed is vital in warfare, and these squads or vehicles are ideal at grabbing objectives, scouting, or disrupting the foe.

Heavy Support. The awesome firepower of battle tanks or war machines can pound the enemy to smithereens!

Standard Missions

The Standard Mission Force Organization Chart provides a good guide for choosing an army. To begin with, you will need at least one HQ unit and two Troop units (dark-shaded boxes indicate units that must be taken for the mission). Beyond these mandatory choices, you have some flexibility in choosing the remainder of your force from the following: up to 1 HQ, 0-3 additional Elites, 0-4 additional Troops, 0-3 additional Fast Attack and/or 0-3 additional Heavy Support.

CHAOS SPACE MARINES

We fight the long war, not for vain notions of duty or honor, but for a far purer purpose: hatred. At the height of our glory, we were betrayed and cast out by our own kin. Guilliman, Dorn, Sanguinius – these are names I curse. Horus, Perturabo, Angron – these are names I revere, names I would follow to the very end. It is that hatred that has sustained me through the long millennia. I tend it with bitterness. I nurture it with the deaths of my former brothers. I know that when the end is upon us and Horus is returned, then the false Emperor shall be cast down from his sepulchral Golden Throne, and we shall take our rightful place at the side of Horus, the true Emperor of Mankind.

Ferrous Ironclaw – Wardsmith of the Iron Warriors Second Grand Company

At the very birth of the Imperium of Man, fully half of the Emperor's most trusted Space Marine Legions turned against him in a bitter civil war. Brother fought brother and Mankind stood upon the very brink of extinction. Ten thousand years after their defeat, those same traitors, intent upon nothing less than the utter destruction of the Imperium and the death of its weakening Emperor, still launch their Black Crusades out of the Eye of Terror.

Fighting Style

Chaos Space Marines are a versatile force. You can specialize your army such that you have a lot of fast troops, heavy assault, close combat experts, or even troops like Daemons. With power and Terminator armor, most Chaos armies can absorb a lot of punishment. As such, almost any fighting style is possible with this army. However, because of their high points cost, Chaos armies tend to be small in number. Thus, wars of attrition are not advisable.

Collecting a Chaos Army

The Warhammer 40,000 Chaos Space Marine army has one of the widest selections of different troop types in the entire game. Not only do Chaos Commanders get to pick from the heretical forces of the Chaos Space Marine Legions, but there are tons of specialty troops including Chaos Space Marine Bikers, high-flying Raptors, and the living weapons of the Chaos Obliterators. There are also cults within the Chaos Space Marine Army dedicated to the four major powers of Chaos (Khorne, Tzeentch, Nurgle, and Slaanesh) like the blood-soaked Khorne Berserkers and the ear-shattering Noise Marines. Each one specializes in a particular form of destruction. In addition, Chaos Space Marines can summon help from the Warp itself by enlisting the aid of Daemon Packs and Daemon Beasts to crush their opponents' bodies and souls. As if that weren't enough, there is a wide array of vehicles including the Chaos Dreadnought, whose only purpose is to blast opposing forces to bits. Above all, Chaos Space Marine armies are about variety (and evil), and there are plenty of models available to suit even the most warped Chaos Space Marine Lord.

SKIN BASES FOR CHARACTERS

The base can be as important as the model. Here are some great base ideas for your character such as Abaddon, Ahrihan, Cypher, Typhus, and any other large-base models.

BASES FOR TZEENTCH/CHAOS UNDIVIDED CHARACTERS

BASES FOR NURGLE CHARACTERS

BASES FOR KHORNE CHARACTERS

Use skulls clipped from the Chaos vehicle accessory sprue. Arrange the skulls around the model's feet.

BASES FOR SLAANESH CHARACTERS

CONVERTING YOUR DAEMON PRINCE

The plastic Dragon Wings (99380299002) make a great addition to your Daemon Prince. They fit so well that the conversion will require minimal putty work to smooth out the join.

This Daemon Prince's head was converted to fit into the theme of an Iron Warriors army. Some careful putty work was applied to create a steel mask that covers the creature's mouth. The Inquisitor range also has many heads that are appropriately sized.

CONVERTING PLAGUE MARINES

Even with the many different Plague Marines available, you might find yourself wanting to convert a few yourself to make some variant special weapon troopers, icon bearers, Possessed, or just because.

RUPTURED INTESTINES

This Aspiring Champion has a mass of intestines spilling out of his armor – surely a sign of Nurgle's favor! Making the intestines is easy. Simply make long, thin "snakes" out of green stuff. Starting at the bottom and working to the top and front, layer the rolls of green stuff to give the impression that they are spilling out of a gap in the armor. While it isn't necessary, you can use one of Cherubael's tabards from the Inquisitor line as both a tabard on the champion and to provide a base to which you can apply the lower bunch of intestines.

You can also see the use of plasticard to make thigh armor plates to make the armor look a bit more archaic and the horn from a Chaos Terminator trophy rack to make a helmet spike similar to the horns of a Plaguebearer. The hole in the side of the helmet is for the placement of a rebreather tube made from guitar wire.

BACKPACKS AND HELMETS

In keeping with the idea of the Plague Marines having older patterns of armor, you can use Skaven Poison Wind Globadier backpacks instead of Chaos Space Marine backpacks. Use guitar wire to link the plasma gun to the apparatus on the backpack. Spikes rescued from an old tank originally from the Chaos Vehicle Accessory sprue can add both height and some Chaos flair to the backpack.

You can convert the helmet to have a look similar to that of a gas mask. Sculpt lenses over the eyes, and use a vent from a Space Marine backpack to make a mouth grille.

Shown below are some more details you can add and an example of how they might look painted.

ADDING CHAOTIC DETAIL TO TANKS

Though bits on the Chaos Vehicle Sprue can make any tank fit into a Chaos Space Marine army, a few extra details will make your tanks look even more evil and corrupt!

RIVETED BANDING

One of the defining characteristics of Chaos Space Marine armor is the use of banding around armor plates. Adding similar detail will help tie your infantry and vehicles together visually and make the tanks look like they are older patterns. Take a piece of plasticard strip to make the banding. You can make rivets made a leather punch tool. The tool shown here is a Golden Eagle leather punch (just search for the terms "leather punch" and "golden eagle" on an internet search engine to find one for purchase).

SPIKE INFESTATION

A good way to depict various forms of Daemonic influence is to have things bursting through the armor. To model spikes on your vehicles, carve some out of pieces of sprue. Drill holes into the armor of your tank where you want the spikes to go. Glue the spikes into the holes from the back – this technique helps to suggest that the spikes are bursting through the armor. Use some green stuff to add a bit of detail around the holes.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH CHAOS SPACE MARINES

- A. An army such as an Alpha Legion army with three Havoc squads and three Chosen squads can field an incredible number of heavy weapons that can also Infiltrate. Add a Bloodthirster and some Bloodletters for close-combat support, and this army can be very difficult to deal with in many games.
- B. A Night Lords army can field four units of Raptors. In general, these fast-moving assault specialists can break large units of enemy troops in close combat or use the Hit & Run ability to expose a particular target in the Shooting Phase. In a Night Lords force, the Raptors gain even more utility in a mission that uses the Night Fighting rules, since all Night Lords have Acute Senses.
- C. The Word Bearers are renowned for using large numbers of Daemons. Chaos Bikers can zoom forward with the Turbo Boost ability and use icons to summon the army's Daemons practically on top of the enemy lines, where your opponent least expects it! Other units such as Raptors and Possessed with the Daemonic Flight upgrade can also be used to cross the table quickly and place their icons in locations where the Daemons will be the most disruptive to your opponent's plans. In total, Word Bearers could have up to nine Troops units, such a large number of Daemons would be hard for most armies to deal with.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST CHAOS SPACE MARINES

- A. Infiltrate is not used in all missions, but it does show up in most. Some wargear will help when facing armies with lots of Infiltrators – the auspex, surveyor and chooser of the slain come to mind. During deployment, you can spread out your units such that they can see most of the board – that way, the Infiltrators will have to be placed over 18" from your units. Lastly, you can use Infiltrators of your own to limit the places the enemy can deploy his units. When the Daemons are finally summoned, units that can Deep Strike can fill gaps in your line that the Daemons might otherwise exploit.
- B. Close combat specialists of your own can usually handle Raptors in assault, although you'll want to make sure backup is handy. Fearless units or units with high Leadership and the ability to reroll failed Morale Checks can withstand the initial charge, although this approach will usually give the Raptors the opportunity to use their Hit & Run ability. One alternative is to leave a unit with low Leadership (or one with the ability to reroll successful Morale Checks) out in front to receive the Raptors' assault and then fall back (not very unlikely thanks to the Raptors' Daemonic Visage), leaving the Raptors open to your own shooting!
- C. Psycannons (which ignore invulnerable saving throws) can deal handily with Turbo Boosting bikers. In addition, if you can pour enough firepower into the bikes you can potentially eliminate them all and stop the Daemons from being summoned onto the board so close by. Since the bikes will be trying to get very close to you, you will usually be in range for rapid fire! If a Word Bearer army does take nine units of Daemons, it is allowed only two selections each of Elites, Fast Attack, and Heavy Support. In the 1st turns of the game, you should outnumber the Word Bearers that are currently on the table (provided you aren't waiting for your own Daemons, Reserves, or Deep Striking units). Again, wiping units out should be a priority to limit Daemonic summoning. In addition to scoring Victory Points for the destruction of a unit, you will also get Victory Points for the Daemons being off-table at the end of the game.

The bladed and sleek Reaver Jetbikes hovered several feet above the roof of the partially collapsed building. Hissrex could feel her bike's powerful anti-gravitic motor thrum and purr beneath her skin-tight gauntlets. The machine was gently pulling at the tethers that held the Jetbike in place. The signal to attack would come soon, and the squad knew its mission was to take out the Ork artillery before the battle started. The Cabal of the Rending Talon could not afford to have its Raiders shot out of the sky. Without a word, the Succubus gave the hand signal. In one fluid motion, all ten of the Jetbikes slipped off their tethers and glided downward in single file. Their approach up a side street of the crumbling city was unchecked. In perfect unison, each rider thumbed the turbo-boosters and sent their machines rocketing over the rubble barriers the Orks had created. Soon, thought Hissrex, the wild joy of the combat drugs would kick in, and the bloodshed would begin.

Among the mysterious race of the Eldar, there are those especially bloodthirsty raiders who have come to be known as the Dark Eldar. Little is known about these debased cousins of the Eldar. Striking without warning, they are well known for piratical raids, and it is rumored that these hit and run attacks are staged to capture prisoners and fresh victims for never-ending tortures back in the twisted Dark Eldar realm. Where Dark Eldar come from and how they came to be this way is largely unknown, but it is assumed that the only thing worse than being killed by these alien raiders is being taken alive by them.

Fighting Style

Dark Eldar are fragile but deadly foes. Their razor sharp attacks can quickly decapitate their enemies before they know what hit them. Capable of lightning-fast raids, the Dark Eldar rely on their speed and anti-gravitic hover vehicles to launch wicked assaults or to get into position to pour massed firepower into an overwhelmed foe. Although vicious in the extreme, Dark Eldar cannot stand for long in a firefight, and their numbers are too few to engage in a battle of attrition.

Using Raider transports and sophisticated weaponry, successful Dark Eldar players need to concentrate their attacks and negate a threat before it has time to respond. The hovering torture device known as a Taos can absorb some punishment, and a Dark Eldar Lord with a retinue of Incubi can deliver serious damage. However, the rest of the army is fragile, and your enemies will know it! Dark Eldar offer players a unique challenge. In the hands of a master, the army is swift and ruthless, but as many careless aspiring Dark Eldar Raiders have discovered, the army is unforgiving to tactical blunders.

Collecting a Dark Eldar Army

A good way to start a Dark Eldar army is to collect the compulsory squads from the Standard Missions Organization Chart. Select two core Troops squads and an HQ choice. These selections will also give starting players a great small army to get started. Warrior squads offer a lot of firepower, especially when one or two of the Warriors are equipped with dark lances (for attacking vehicles) or splinter cannons (for attacking squads). Raider squads are also a Troops choice. Although smaller in maximum size than the Warrior Squad, the added mobility of the Raider transport adds not only speed to the squad but another heavy weapon as well. A Dark Eldar Lord is a fearsome close combat monster with access to loads of specialized upgrades from the Dark Eldar Armory.

When a Dark Eldar player is ready to enlarge his army, a great first expansion is a retinue for his Dark Lord. A retinue may be composed of Incubi, wicked followers who are equipped with power armor and vicious hand-to-hand weaponry. Other great additions are Wyches, who are lightly armored hand-to-hand troops who have access to deadly combat drugs and a wide selection of gladiatorial weapons. Dark Eldar have two great Fast Attack options to rock foes back on their heels: Reaver Jetbikes and Helions. For Heavy Support, the fallen Eldar use the black-pinioned Scourges, the heavily equipped Ravagers, or the menacing Taos. The Dark Eldar are full of unique choices, and in the end, each player will need to personalize his army with squads and wargear that fit into a preferred strategy or style of play. Start your own terror-causing rampage across the galaxy today!

The Reaver Jetbike is a one-crew vehicle that uses an anti-gravitic impulse engine. The front canopy, rear canopy, and keel blade assume various forms. Whether these forms cater to the rider's aesthetic tastes or different battlefield situations is impossible to tell. The Reaver Jetbike is capable of high speeds and fires splinter-like ammunition.

Constructed by the insane Haemunculi, the Talos is a torture device that sweeps across the battlefield on anti-gravity motors, launches on to its foes, and incarcerates them within its armored shell.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH DARK ELDER

- A. The webway portal is a very useful tool for Dark Eldar armies. Dark Eldar can bring in reserves through the portal rather than from the table edge and spring into action much more easily. If one webway portal is good, two are even better! Consider purchasing two webway portals to ensure that you can bring out heavy-hitting units like Talos and Ravagers into a position where they will do the most good when you need them to.
- B. Raiders are another way that Dark Eldar can maneuver into position on the battlefield. A great way to use these swift-but-fragile transports is to concentrate your force on one portion of the enemy lines by zooming up one side of the table. This strategy can be particularly effective in missions that use the Escalation rule. You can bring your Raiders onto the board in the same area and focus most of your army in a place where your opponent can bring only a portion of his army to bear.
- C. An Archon or Dragon can become quite a terror in assault with the right wargear. One interesting combination includes a tormentor helm, combat drugs, the shadow field, an agonizer, poison blades, and a Hellion skyboard. This combination of equipment gives you a commander who can zip around the battlefield and engage any enemy with a good chance of success. Against high-Toughness creatures, the poison blades will perform well while the agonizer can handle most vehicles or opponents with a good armor save. In the meantime, the Hellion skyboard doesn't stop the commander from gaining the bonus for two hand weapons, and the tormentor helm gives the commander something to shoot with in the Shooting Phase as well.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST DARK ELDER

- A. Webway portals, while dangerous, are susceptible to a couple of countermeasures. First, there's a chance you can destroy the model carrying the webway portal if you can identify him. Of course, you'll need quite a bit of firepower (and probably some indirect-fire weapons like a Basilisk or Whirlwind as well) to make certain. Second, webway portals are not very useful if you can surround them with your models to stop enemy units from coming onto the board. In this case, what you will need is lots of troops who can reach the webway portal in time (bikes, cavalry, jump infantry, and transports can help).
- B. Deployment is critical when facing an army that is as mobile as the Dark Eldar. By placing your army close together in one area of the board, you can respond with the majority of your force to almost any Dark Eldar maneuver.
- C. This commander is a daunting prospect for any squad to face and extremely difficult to kill due to the shadow field. However, this model can be taken down through several methods. Any weapons that ignore invulnerable saves (such as psycannons, incinerators, or warscythes) should destroy this commander fairly quickly. Another method is to surround the Dark Eldar commander and use the sheer weight of numbers to drag her down - although the shadow field fails only on a 1, if you make your opponent roll enough dice, that result will eventually come up!

ELDAR

Farseer Tyli shifted her mind and broadcast a message to the awaiting commanders. The time to launch the attack was now.

Instantaneously, each Eldar leader set his squads in motion. Their anti-gravitic engines whining under the sudden burst of speed, Jetbike squadrons and Falcons swept forward on the flanks. Guardians with their heavy weapons platforms emerged from cover to anchor the center. Rangers, far closer to enemy lines but hidden by their Cameleoline Cloaks, opened fire at key targets with their long rifles.

As Tyli had planned, the sudden synchronized attack had eradicated the Imperial forward firebase before a distress signal could be sent.

The Eldar race is ancient beyond human reckoning. It is said that the Eldar had mastered the intricacies of space travel before Mankind first looked upward at the stars.

The Eldar are a technically advanced but dying race and have suffered a vast cataclysm that split their once mighty civilization. Now, the Eldar are a race of wanderers fighting to reclaim their shattered domain in a galaxy of barbaric usurpers and insidious evil.

Right: Bryan Shaw won third place in the Warhammer 40,000 Single Miniature category at the Los Angeles 2003 Golden Demon competition.

Fighting Style

More than any other army, the Eldar are made up of highly specialized squads, HQ types, and vehicles. When a masterful commander can play to the strengths of each squad or model, the Eldar become a high unstoppable force. In the hands of a novice, the army is fragile and easily broken. Blending the right mix for each game is an art unto itself.

Collecting an Eldar Army

Most players begin their Eldar armies with a strong force of Guardians (either Storm squads or Defender squads) and a Farseer to fulfill the compulsory HQ and two Troops choices. Next, the varied abilities of the Aspect Warriors allow the commander to pick and choose which skills he values most – the deadly charge of the Howling Banshees, the short-ranged firepower of the Fire Dragons, or the displacing movement of the Warp Spiders. Each of the Elites choices offers superlative abilities in some (but never all) the arts of war.

Eldar vehicles provide more fast and heavily armed options. With Falcons and Wave Serpents, the Eldar excel at swift attacks and flexible defense. These vehicles enable the Eldar to move the right units where they are needed.

Farseers and Warlocks provide the Eldar with very powerful psykers, and the towering might of a Wraithlord or the lightning-fast attacks of a Jetbike squadron will be hard to pass up.

Whether your style is moving quickly into hand-to-hand, hit-and-run attacks, or anything else you can come up with, an Eldar army that is focused toward an overall plan is a deadly force on the battlefield!

This Eldar Vyper by Bruno Grelter won first place in the Warhammer 40,000 vehicle category at the 1999 French Golden Demon.

PAINTING RUNES

Complete the highlighting and shading of the area where the rune will be positioned and let it dry.

Next, take a sharpened pencil (the mechanical ones work the best) and lightly draw out the design that you wish to paint. If you are working over a dark color, use a white charcoal pencil.

Paint over the pencil lines with thinned-down Chaos Black paint. Test the consistency of the paint before applying it to the model. If the paint is too thin, it will no longer be opaque. If it is too thick, it will make your design lumpy and obscure the detail.

When painting the design, make sure to cover the pencil lines completely with the paint.

Once dry, go back with a bright opaque color and paint in the center of the Chaos Black lines. When this coat dries, highlight the central line with a bit of pure Skull White. Save these tiny highlights for sharp corners or the tips of lines to make the design appear to have a bit more depth to it.

PAINTING GEMS

Begin by painting the gem with the desired base color. We used Jade Green for the base color.

Next, take the darker shade (Scafy Green here) and paint the upper right or left corner of the gem. While the paint is still wet, take another brush, wet it, and break up the lower border of the darker shade color until it makes a smooth transition into the base color. A little practice may be necessary, but the end result is quite attractive.

For the highlight, paint the bottom edge of the gem opposite the shading using the lighter shade color (Skull White added to Scafy Green in this case).

Use the same technique as described above, making sure that you leave enough of the base color to make a smooth transition from highlight to shadow.

When satisfied with the blend of shadow, base, and highlight colors, take a bit of thinned Skull White paint and apply a single tiny highlight in the center of the darkest part of the gem. Finally, add a thin, curved line of Skull White along the bottom edge to finish off the overall effect.

APPLYING DECALS

The application of a decal can add some extra detail and character to your models. Start by choosing an appropriate decal for your vehicle or model, and carefully cut it out from the sheet. It's a good idea to cut some extra space around one side of the decal. This space makes it easier to hold the paper while you transfer the decal to the model's surface.

Take a pair of tweezers and hold the transfer by the paper surrounding it. The shiny area is the part that will be transferred, so holding on to the paper anywhere outside of this area should be fine. Dip the transfer in a shallow dish of water (we used a jar lid) and hold it under water for about 30 seconds. When the decal starts to peel away from the paper, it is ready to be transferred.

Take a brush and dampen the area where you plan to apply the transfer. This method will help you reposition the transfer to get the placement just right. While holding the edge of the paper with the tweezers, take a brush and gently slide the decal off the paper onto the model's surface.

Reposition the decal with a wet brush until it is in the desired position. Next, take a piece of paper towel or a dry brush and gently dab away any excess water from the surface. This step should affix your decal into place. If you notice bubbles under the decal, re-wet the decal and smooth it out with a damp brush.

Take some of the background color and paint over the shiny area around the decal. This step will help hide the fact that a decal was used and prevent it from detracting from the overall appearance of the model. If you like, the rest of the transfer can be painted over in a different color to suggest a hand-crafted appearance.

PAINTING ELGAR VINE PATTERNS

Vines can add some interest to the flat surface of the wings on Eldar tanks such as the Falcon Grav Tank and Fire Prism Grav Tank

Begin by shading and highlighting the background color over which the vine pattern will be painted. Be sure to choose a background color that will contrast with the color of your vines so that they will really stand out

Next, draw a series curved lines with a pencil over the surface. Try to keep the pattern looking random and always keep the lines curved with no straight sections. Aim to keep the lines a uniform distance from one another. When you're satisfied with the pattern, water down some paint (Dark Angels Green in this case) and paint over the lines. Varying the width of the lines will add to the overall grace of the curves, but that's a matter of taste

When the basic lines are dry, go back in with the pencil and add jagged thorns on either side of the vines. As with the vine curves, try to keep the thorns a uniform distance from one another. Paint the thorns with the same base color used on the vines themselves.

Go back in and highlight the centers of the lines with a lighter shade of the vine color. When this is dry, add another brighter highlight around the most pronounced curves to add further depth to the vines. At this point, touch up any blemishes with the background color. Finally, sit back and marvel at how easy and attractive the overall effect is!

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH ELDAR

- A. A Farseer and some Warlock bodyguards mounted on jetbikes constitute a formidable squad – both for headhunting (shuriken catapults and the Mind War power are very good for taking out enemy HQ units) and tank hunting (singing spears and witchblades, as mentioned above, do very well against vehicles). This unit is amazingly resilient (the jetbikes provide a 3+ armor save in addition to the Warlocks and Farseer's rune armor – not to mention the Fortune power) and also very fast with the new turbo-boost rule that enables the unit to get nearly anywhere it needs to on the battlefield.
- B. A unit of Wrathguard led by a Warlock with the Enhance power can tie up enemy units in hand-to-hand turn after turn. This unit also excels at tank hunting. A squad of five Wrathguard and a Warlock in a Wave Serpent can provide you with a nearly unrivaled ability to take out enemy vehicles. Even extremely tough vehicles like the Land Raider or the Monolith are vulnerable to wrathcannon shots, singing spears, and witchblades.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST ELDAR

- A. Although the Farseer and his bodyguard mounted on jetbikes can be very tough to kill, that unit still doesn't cause too many casualties in close combat. Any reasonably resilient unit can tie up the Farseer and his Warlocks for most of the game without needing to worry about being cut down. Another benefit of assaulting the Farseer's unit is that you may shut down some of his psychic powers (some require line of sight, and some are used in the Shooting Phase – neither type works well in the middle of a big melee). One chance to destroy this unit lies in assault – should you manage to win and chase the Eldar down, you'll wipe them out no matter what. Of course, with the Eldar's high Initiative, this result is possible but not likely.
- B. Wrathguard are tough, but they are not impossible to beat. Heavy weapons fire (and especially ordnance blasts from battle cannons or earthshakers) will cut Wrathguard down without too much trouble. The key thing to remember about Wrathguard is that the unit is fairly slow. While Wrathguard can be transported in a Wave Serpent, it's rather likely that you'll end up facing them on foot as well. Without a transport, the Wrathguard can be outmaneuvered. If you decide when and where to fight these ghost warriors, they won't be much of a hindrance.

Mixed Colors

Ullthwé. Ullthwé is one of the most sinister Craftworlds, and its black uniforms look suitably grim and foreboding. To emphasize this theme, we used a bone color to contrast the black. Bone is more subtle than pure white and helps keep the tone of the army uniformly dark.

Alaitoc. The primary color of the Alaitoc Craftworld is deep blue with a bright contrasting color such as Sunburst Yellow. To add a bit more of an alien feel, we have used a mottled effect to vary the colors on the blue parts of the armor.

Saim-Hann. The best way to get a good looking Saim-Hann force is to find a way of painting a strong red that you are comfortable with. You could make a very bold red by using Blood Red or keep the tone darker and more sinister by choosing Scab Red.

POSING THE BASIC GUARDSMEN

The first things to think about as you assemble a new set of models are their poses. The most basic part of the pose is the position of the legs on the base.

Below, the model is positioned toward the back of its base with most of the space to the front. This position helps to create a sense of forward motion and helps balance the weight of the model.

Example: By making the initial decision to set the model further back on the base, the illusion of speed is generated.

The design of the models means that the weapon arms fit comfortably in only one position. This position makes matching up the gun arm with the supporting arm easier. It's a good idea to attach the weapon arm first and then the supporting arm straight away. By using polystyrene cement, you give yourself a little time to adjust the arms if they don't meet perfectly. To get an idea of what the different arms look like on a finished model, take a look at the photos of models throughout this section of the catalog, in White Dwarf magazine, or on the Games Workshop web site.

One thing to keep in mind when putting the models together is to keep the pose natural. A good way to check this out is just to stick the parts of the model together with Blu-Tac before you go ahead with the gluing. This step gives you a chance to see how the model will look before you start gluing. You could even try taking up a pose yourself to get the feel of how a real person would stand. The models above show two very naturalistic poses.

HEROES OF THE 24TH MACHARIAN

The Macharian 24th PDF was the inspiration for this Veteran squad. This regiment from one of the planets in the Cadian sector is known for its devotion to Solar Macharius, their planet's namesake.

The squad consists of the decorated heroes of the Macharian 24th. Although their weapons are very personalized, their uniforms are still standard. The main additions are the Imperial Scripture embroidery and purity seals. These additions show that these troops are the most devout followers of Imperial Scripture in the sector and have proven their faith in battle.

All kinds of plastic and metal components were used with the Sergeant (shown below) as well as purity seals made from green stuff. The hair, made from an Ork shoulder pad, reflects the extreme purity and devotion of the Sergeant.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH IMPERIAL GUARD

- A. The Hellhound is a good match to the Chimera – both vehicles have comparable weaponry for the most part and both are good at anti-personnel firepower. The Hellhound's higher side armor can shield the Chimera's more vulnerable flanks.
- B. A large mob of Conscripts can tie up enemy units in hand-to-hand combat for many turns, as long as you ensure that an officer is nearby to lend his Leadership (ideally, the company standard would be nearby as well in case you need a reroll). Once the Conscript Squad has done its job and you are ready to open fire on the enemy warriors, you can revert to the Conscript's normal Leadership of 5 and they are very likely to run away and leave their opponents exposed to your guns.
- C. If you are using Doctrines for your Imperial Guard force, Close Order Drill and Iron Discipline are both very valuable choices. Close Order Drill increases a unit's Leadership and Initiative, both of which are very handy in close combat – at Initiative 4, a unit of 10 Guardsmen has a chance to fight back against even such formidable foes as Space Marines and Orks. Meanwhile, the Iron Discipline doctrine will let your forces regroup even if under 50%, meaning that your precious heavy weapons and special weapons troopers have a greater chance of participating in the battle even if they need to run away once in a while.
- D. The Imperial Guard has an unusual structure for its troops known as the Infantry Platoon. A single Infantry platoon can contain up to six heavy weapons and even more special weapons. Although not cheap, each special and heavy weapon is surrounded by plenty of grunts, meaning that your opponent has to chew through quite a few of your men to silence your best guns. A canny Imperial Guard player often fields as many heavy and special weapons as he can in order to maximize his firepower while leaving his opponent with several difficult choices – no matter which unit the enemy targets, there are still plenty more where that one came from. Manpower and firepower are the bywords of Imperial Guard might!

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST IMPERIAL GUARD

- A. Hellhounds are still only AV12 on the front and sides, not especially difficult to crack with lascannons or hunter-killer missiles. Also, you should keep in mind that immobilizing the Hellhound is nearly as good as blowing it up, as the Inferno cannon has a relatively short range of 24".
- B. Any large Infantry unit can be dealt with by template weapons, ordnance, or massed volleys of firepower. Conscripts can be tough to dislodge when they are in cover, but any reasonable amount of anti-personnel firepower (you should not waste lascannon shots on these 4-point soldiers) will cut down their numbers to manageable levels, cause them to flee, or wipe them out.
- C. Close Order Drill means that the Guardsmen have to be base-to-base in order to receive the doctrine's benefits. What this means for you is that the Guardsmen are in perfect flamer and ordnance formation! Any template weapon will reap massive benefits from firing at Close Order Drill troops, so feel free to cut loose with frag missiles and flamers when faced with these ordered firing lines.
- D. One of the best ways to eliminate the manpower advantage of the Imperial Guard is to cut down on their Leadership. If you can eliminate the officers, the rank and file troopers won't last long in close combat or against massive casualties. An especially nasty trick is to use a unit that effects leadership in a wide radius, such as Necron Panahs, and wade right into the middle of the Imperial Guard lines. Soon enough, you should see the Guardsmen (and their many, many heavy weapons) fleeing away from you.

THE INQUISITION

We are at war with forces too terrible to comprehend. We cannot afford mercy for any of its victims too weak to take the correct course. Mercy destroys us; it weakens us and saps our resolve. Put aside all such thoughts. They are not worthy of Inquisitors in the service of Our Emperor. Praise his name, for in our resolve we only reflect his purpose of will.

— Inquisitor Enoch, Castigations of the Last Days

Waging a covert war for over 10,000 years, the vast Imperial institution known as the Inquisition has thousands of divisions and subdivisions. Some of them take to the field of battle when forces threaten the continued survival of the Imperium of Man. Noteworthy among them are the Ordo Malleus, or Daemonhunters, and the Ordo Hereticus, or Witch Hunters.

The Inquisitors of the Ordo Malleus work to destroy the physical manifestation of Chaos itself, the Daemon. An Inquisitor has at his disposal every member of the Imperium and will not hesitate to commandeer local troops at a moment's notice. Such is the influence of the Inquisitor that he can call upon the Space Marines of the Adeptus Astartes or even the feared Grey Knights and lead a force of the Imperium's finest warriors against Humanity's foul nemeses, wherever they appear.

While the Daemonhunters protect the Imperium from outside enemies, the Ordo Hereticus defends Humanity against threats from within: witchcraft, heresy, and mutation. The Witch Hunters keep a close watch on many other Imperial organizations, from the Adeptus Arbites, to the Astropaths, to the Inquisition itself. It is a brave man who crosses a Witch Hunter, as simply opposing a member of the Ordo Hereticus can bring accusations of heresy and witchcraft. The Chamber Militant of the Ordo Hereticus is the virtuous and pious Adepta Sororitas, the Sisters of Battle. This ancient order of warrior women is dedicated to the Emperor and the Imperial creed and includes the best and bravest warriors a Witch Hunter can call upon.

Fighting Style

The armies of the Ordo Hereticus and Ordo Malleus possess so much variety that they can bring to bear any number of different methods to gain victory. The Grey Knights of the Daemonhunters, while few in number, combine hard-hitting assault capability with an impressive amount of firepower. The Adepta Sororitas, by contrast, can field a massive force of fast-moving troops with devastating short-range firepower. Inquisitorial forces can also call upon Imperial Assassins and Death Cultists to add another type of hand-to-hand combat ability. No doubt, versatility is the greatest strength of the Inquisition, and there is no limit to the combinations of units you can use to smite the foes of the Emperor.

Collecting an Inquisition Army

At the core of the Daemonhunter army is a collection of elite and incredibly skilled individuals who excel in every battlefield role. Even the lowest ranks of the Grey Knights are the equal of the strongest units of other armies. Grey Knights are well equipped, which means that both their ranged and close combat capabilities far outstrip those of their brother Space Marines. A Daemonhunter army can also call on allies and inducted troops. From lethal Death Cultists, to mighty Dreadnoughts, to unpredictable Daemonhosts, the army list presents an entire spectrum of the Imperial war machine. If you're looking for an elite, diverse force, then a Daemonhunter force may be the army for you.

The armies of the Ordo Hereticus can call upon both the zealous forces of the Ecclesiarchy and the well-armed Adepta Sororitas, also known as the Sisters of Battle. The warrior women of the Sisters of Battle form the mainstay of the military forces of the Ordo Hereticus. Battle Sisters armed with bolters, wearing power armor, and possessing frighteningly powerful faith can handle nearly any challenge. In addition, the Ordo Hereticus can call upon highly trained units of Inquisitorial Stormtroopers to lend aid with special equipment and armored personnel carriers. The Ordo Hereticus has other, even more dangerous assets. They include Arco-Flagellants, normal humans who have been transformed into cybernetic killing machines as punishment for past heresies; the Sisters Repentia, Battle Sisters who seek atonement by fighting with righteous and unbridled fury; and Celestian Squads, Battle Sisters who have proven themselves above and beyond the call of duty.

These diverse forces can be tailor made to fit almost any strategic and tactical style. Collecting a Daemonhunter or Witch Hunter force will be a rewarding experience for both the hobbyist and the gamer in you!

Tom Schudde's Inquisitor Acolyte won first place at the 2004 Baltimore Games Day Golden Demon painting competition.

This Sister of Battle Banner Bearer by Will Hahn was a Runner Up at the 2004 Los Angeles Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition.

This Witch Hunter army incorporates a number of different elements from the Inquisition's arsenal: Grey Knights, Sisters of Battle, a Dreadnought, and an Inquisitor with his Henchmen.

ADDING INQUISITORIAL FLAIR TO YOUR VEHICLES

While the stock Rhinos and Chimeras available are perfectly fine for inclusion in your Inquisition forces, a few Inquisitorial details here and there can't go too far wrong.

The accessory sprues from various characters in the Inquisitor range are great for little icons and details to add to your vehicles.

Inquisitors Covenant and Eisenhorn come with sprues that include a number of appropriate symbols, and vehicle-sized purity seals can also be made out of putty and thin plasticard.

Shown below is a template that you can use to make an icon for your Inquisitorial Chimeras. Simply copy the template, transfer the shapes to plasticard or cardboard, and cut them out.

HEAD SWAP

One of the biggest complaints among Sisters of Battle players is that as the majority of the range is made of metal figurines, thus, larger armies tend to be a bit repetitive, because the same model must be used over and over. One of the best ways to change the look of a figure is to replace the head.

While doing a head swap on most miniatures is rather easy, the design of the Sisters' armor makes this conversion a bit difficult to accomplish. Use a saw and cut across the top of the armored collar. This step serves two purposes: First, of course, you get rid of the old head. Secondly, it is much easier (and safer) to drill on a flat surface rather than a curved or irregular surface.

Now that you have a flat area, drill a hole in the center of the stump. Start with your smallest bit and gradually progress through the sizes until you make a large enough hole. To enlarge the hole you may need to use a routing bit in a motorized rotary tool. If you don't have one, you can also carefully carve out the excess with a hobby knife. While it might seem tempting to begin with the largest bit, it is better to progress through the sizes gradually. With a rotary tool, it is safer to progress from smaller to larger bits, and doing so also gives you more control on the location, angle, and depth of your hole.

You may need to clean up the area with a needle file to make everything neat and smooth.

Amazon heads from the Mordheim range make perfect Sisters of Battle heads. Cut off the topknot. To hide the spot where the topknot was removed, use green stuff and sculpt some extra hair. Some Elven heads from the Warhammer range work well as Sisters of Battle heads too.

MAKING FIRE

As part of the holy trinity of Bolter, Flamer and Melta, you might find yourself wanting to represent the fiery wrath of the Emperor! To make your flames, start with an armature to build around. The armature will help your flames maintain their shape as they cure and will help you to shape them while the green stuff is still soft. The easiest way to make an armature is to use a small bit of wire or paperclip. Use pliers to shape the wire into approximate a flame shape and then glue the armature into the barrel of the weapon.

Once the glue on the armature is set, use a teardrop-shaped blob of green stuff to make the general shape of the flames.

To give it that blazin' look, make a series of parallel wavy lines to create individual tongues of flame. If you start at the bottom and work your way to the top, you can make very convincing flame effects!

The Immolator boxed set includes the Witch Hunter Devastator (99510108004), shown in the HQ section.

CREATING INQUISITORIAL HENCHMEN

While the Daemonhunters and Witch Hunters ranges both provide ample figures to represent your Inquisitor and retinue, you may find yourself wishing to field a wargear selection that is not currently represented in the miniatures range or perhaps you wish to do a conversion for the sheer joy of it.

Here are a few examples of converted Henchmen that show how you are not limited to just one range when it comes to source material for your conversions.

A Mordheim Chaos Cultist has been converted to make a vicious-looking Henchman, perhaps a Warrior for a radical Daemonhunter?

By pairing the converted Gun Servitor and Sage in a mini-diorama, this conversion conveys an effective representation of how these Henchmen might interact.

This Missionary has traded in his staff and chainsword for a censer and scroll cases, while the Crusader below makes use of Bretonnian blitz.

As you can see, the only thing limiting your conversions is your imagination. If you can visualize it, you can probably find the blitz to make it. A quick perusal of this catalog will probably provide enough ideas to make the craziest Henchmen you can find!

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH THE INQUISITION

- A. A Canoness with a jump pack, eviscerator Mantle of Ophelia and Cloak of St. Aspira can be a real headache for your opponent. She can boost into combat with nearly any enemy, burn a faith point for an invulnerable save, and cause all sorts of havoc. A Canoness is not to be underestimated in combat and can kill quite a few enemy models. If she is slain instead, you can celebrate: You've just gained 2 more faith points due to the Martyrdom rule.
- B. Seraphim with inferno pistols can charge into assault and then use the Hit & Run rule to end up next to a tank after the Assault Phase. During the Witch Hunters player's turn, the Seraphim can double-tap their inferno pistols and easily kill the tank. A somewhat riskier move is to get behind the tank, fire the inferno pistols only once, then follow up with a charge (Seraphim are equipped with Krak grenades!) if the pistols fail to destroy the vehicle.
- C. A squad of Dominions armed with multiple flamers can use divine guidance to cause an impressive number of casualties on any foe regardless of how good the enemy's armor save might be. Since Dominions must take a transport vehicle, an Immolator is usually a very good choice and can provide even more fiery death to your opponent.
- D. A Dreadnought armed with twin-linked lascannons and a missile launcher can hide behind terrain and step out during the 1st turn to hunt enemy tanks. A lack of ability to deal with armored vehicles is one of the weaknesses of the Grey Knights. Thus, this Dreadnought tactic neatly solves the problem and provides some extra hand-to-hand power in a pinch (especially since Grey Knight Dreadnoughts have Weapon Skill 6 and count as 10 models for outnumbering!).
- E. An Inquisitor armed with a psycannon and three Gun-Servitors (two with heavy bolters plus one with a plasma cannon) can add impressive firepower to any force for a reasonable point cost. In addition, the Inquisitor can take more items (such as the Emperor's Tarot to help you take the 1st turn or Mystics to attack enemy Deep Strikers) to improve his overall usefulness.
- F. A squad of Inquisitorial Stormtroopers armed with melta guns or plasma guns and mounted in a Rhino can be very useful in a drive-by capacity. The unit can get into position quickly (thanks to the Rhino) and fire the special weapons from the top hatch at nearby enemy tanks or squads. One way to add surprising hand-to-hand capability to such a unit is to upgrade one Stormtrooper to a Veteran Sergeant and give him a thunder hammer.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST THE INQUISITION

- A. It's nearly impossible to ignore a Canoness with a jump pack – so squish her early on and just accept that you'll be giving your opponent some free faith points. On the other hand, killing the Canoness gives you over 100 Victory Points and reduces the number of things you need to devote your attention to during the game, so taking her out is still a good idea.
- B. Seraphim should be a priority target when playing against any Witch Hunter opponent. Heavy weapons should be able to thin out a Seraphim Squad, and a dedicated hand-to-hand assault unit can usually handle what the Seraphim dish out. Just keep in mind that the Seraphim can and usually will be jumping away from you after the combat is over thanks to their Hit & Run rule. Also, you can keep your tanks away from your hand-to-hand units if you know your opponent is likely to field some Seraphim with inferno pistols.
- C. If you destroy the transport vehicle early on, it won't be too tough to single out the Dominion Squad for destruction. Heavy weapons or hand-to-hand combat will usually net you some Victory Points for each dead Dominion and keep those flamers from roasting your units.
- D. One of the main weaknesses of a Daemont Hunters army is a lack of anti-tank firepower. For the most part, Dreadnoughts and Land Raiders are the true threats to tanks. If your tanks eliminate these units first, you can rampage nearly unchecked through the rest of the army. However, make sure to keep your eyes open for inquisitorial Stormtroopers with melta-guns or multi-melta Gun-Servitors.
- E. The Inquisitor and his retinue may be well-armed, but they are still vulnerable to massed firepower. One good battle cannon shell or a few volleys of heavy bolter fire should eliminate the majority of the Inquisitor's resources.
- F. Rhinos aren't too tough to destroy, especially if the Stormtroopers are shooting out the top hatch (the vehicle then counts as open-topped). As long as you don't ignore the easily underestimated Rhino full of Stormtroopers, you shouldn't be surprised by it later on in the game.

NECRONS

Despite the staccato bursts of big shootas and the bellowing war cries of the greenskins, the Necron Warriors advanced silently across the barren plains. Here and there, the great fusillade of the Orks would drop or dismember one of the mechanical monstrosities, but more often than not, the mechanical warrior would rise out of the dust and continue to march closer.

On the flanks, Destroyers and Heavy Destroyers skimmed over the desert floor, swiveled their cannons, and discharged arcane green bolts that ripped through Ork Dreadnoughts with relative ease. Looming over the oncoming forces was a mighty Monolith, an immense pyramid crackling with incandescent energies.

For the only time in his short and brutal life, Ork Warlord Gruzgutz felt something akin to the human emotion of regret. If only those weedy Grots hadn't disturbed that cursed tomb...

Across the galaxies, something ancient and sinister stirs in the darkness. The skeletal warriors of the Necron race have lain undisturbed and dormant for millions of years, but the horrors are awakening. No longer living, Necrons long ago traded their mortality for metal shells and eternal servitude to the star-born gods, the C'Tan. Now, legions of undying warriors are moving once more and seek domination of all that live.

Fighting Style

Necrons can withstand a tremendous amount of damage thanks to their high Toughness, excellent armor, and most of all, the We'll Be Back! rule, which allows the mechanical beings to self-repair. Nothing is more demoralizing to a foe than to have all the Necron casualties from the last round stand back up again ready for more battle. However, remember that this implacable nature alone will not ensure victory.

To win the game, a Necron player must do more than receive the enemy's fire and must deliver his own killing blow as well. The Necrons are unique in that they use deadly Gauss technology that can take out vehicles and strip any foe down to its constituent atoms. While the bulk of a Necron army is not fast, there are numerous squads, like Wraiths, that can Deep Strike or move quickly or other squads, like Flayed Ones, that can Infiltrate to disrupt the enemy. Destroyers and Heavy Destroyers can provide long-range support, and Necron players should not overlook the Scarab Swarms that can tie up enemy forces. While an enemy shifts to counter each of these individual threats, the Necrons move forward to bring more weapons to bear.

Collecting a Necron Army

We always suggest starting a new army by fulfilling the requirements the Standard Missions Force Organization chart. A Necron Lord (HQ) and two units of Necron Warriors (Troops) is a fine start and an imposing center to any army. Bulking up on additional Necron Warriors is always advisable, as they can destroy vehicles, are formidable in hand-to-hand, and help keep the army from Right: William Nicholson made this Necron Lord complete with Resurrection Orb for his 2002 Dallas GT army.

Phasing out - a cataclysmic event that causes the army to disappear mysteriously when its numbers drop below 25% of its original total.

Necron commanders have a variety of choices to enlarge the army. Parahs are anti-psykers and are equipped for hand-to-hand combat. Immortals are tougher and provide more firepower than Warriors. Flayed Ones are close combat specialists that Infiltrate the enemy and literally skin them alive. Fast Attack options include the scuttling Scarab Swarms, the floating Wraiths, and the heavily armed Destroyers. Necron players must make a few tough decisions as all the heavy support choices are excellent. The Tomb Spyders can aid Necrons in their self-repair ability and also create Scarab Swarms on the battlefield. Heavy Destroyers wield the mighty Heavy Gauss Cannon. The Monolith, in addition to being a huge and impressive model, is a valuable (if ponderous) transport craft that allows Necrons anywhere on the battlefield to vanish and re-emerge from the Monolith's porta-

Carefully chosen and used together to support each other on the battlefield, the Necrons are nigh unstoppable and will soon have whole galaxies (or at least all of your opponents) quaking in their boots.

BURNISHED METALS

Here are three different ways to create a metallic look for your Necrons. Whether you choose traditional silver or some other color scheme, you'll find these techniques useful.

BURNISHED SILVER

Prime your model black and drybrush it with Boltgun Metal. Then, thin some Boltgun Metal paint and begin building up the highlights by painting them directly on the model. The next highlights should be Chainmail and then Mithril Silver. If you want a darker color, mix black or dark blue into the Boltgun Metal before you begin drybrushing.

BURNISHED GOLD

Prime your model black. Next, drybrush your Necron with Brazen Brass and then Shining Gold. Thin down a bit of Shining Gold and begin building up the highlights by painting them directly onto the model. The next layer of highlights should be Burnished Gold. Next, add a little Mithril Silver to the Burnished Gold to get that burnished metal effect. Be careful not to add too much silver, as it will make the metal look grey rather than providing a nice shine. Remember to thin your mix.

BURNISHED COLOR METAL

Many players like a burnished metal look for their Necron Warriors. Burnished metal is highly polished, and one way to simulate its appearance is to mix Mithril Silver into your base metal color. Add a bit more Mithril Silver for each highlight. Thin your metallic paint slightly and pull the brush toward the area you wish to highlight.

NONMETALLIC METAL

Creating a metallic look using flat colors takes a little more time, but the outcome looks fantastic! Here is a nonmetallic Necron from Jason Phillips's 2002 Los Angeles Grand Tournament army. For this effect, start with a very dark base color, highlight up very quickly, and finish with a small final highlight of white.

SPEED PAINTING NECRONS

Necrons are a great army to paint quickly, because drybrushing is a fast and effective way to highlight metal. Follow these steps to get a tournament-ready army in no time!

STEP 1

After cleaning and assembling your models, spray them with Chaos Black primer (not shown). When dry, spray them with Boltgun Metal.

STEP 2

Paint the model with three different nk wash colors. Apply each to random sections of the model and allow the washes to run together. The following inks were used on this model: Brown, Black, and Dark Green. Each was diluted slightly with water, and a drop of Gloss Varnish was added to give the model more shine.

STEP 3

Once the model dries, drybrush it with Boltgun Metal. Next, pick out the eyes and gun tubing with Snot Green.

STEP 4

Highlight the eyes and gun tube with Scorpion Green. Then, paint Shining Gold on the chest icon, glue the rod in place, and finish the base of the model.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH NECRONS

- A. Necron Destroyers are horrifically efficient at killing enemy infantry, and their jetbike movement makes performing this role even easier. One interesting tactic to use with Necron Destroyers is to Turbo Boost 24" into cover with a unit of Destroyers and line up for side shots on tanks or in such a way as to ignore the cover behind which your opponent has positioned his vulnerable troops.
- B. The Veil of Darkness is an excellent tool to get your expensive Lord out of close combat and to move him and a nearby unit (ideally, a group of tough, well-armed Immortals) into position for a devastating barrage of firepower on an unsuspecting enemy unit. The Veil is also great for attacking units that are in cover (or even out of sight altogether) or out of range of your other units. Do not use the Veil if doing so would put your precious Necron Lord in range of too many enemy guns.
- C. Scarab Swarms can Deep Strike down into the enemy's formation and cause all sorts of disruption. Since they are fearless, they can also tie up a valuable assault unit or draw heavier guns away from your valuable Necron Warriors. At 12 points each, Swarms are an affordable distraction that your opponent will likely either under- or over-estimate. Add in some disruption fields, and the Swarms can handle Sentinels, War Walkers, and occasionally even Dreadnoughts (or at least tie them up in combat for turn after turn).
- D. A Necron Lord with a Destroyer Body and a Resurrection Orb is ideal to keep your Necron Warriors around even in the face of overwhelming firepower or power weapon attacks. The speed and durability of the Destroyer Body can bring your Lord's Resurrection Orb wherever it is most needed and give you the opportunity to add the Lord's own hefty assault power to any developing close combat to make the results rise dramatically in your favor. Add in a warscythe and a phase shifter, and the Lord can take on enemy HQ models in hand-to-hand (and even stand toe-to-toe with a Space Marine Chaplain) and can assist in a Wrath assault.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST NECRONS

- A. When the Destroyers move far away from the Necron lines, it's a good time to move those jump infantry models into assault (or if you are playing Tau, hit the Destroyers with a truckload of burst cannon shots).
- B. Using the Veil of Darkness to move around a large group of Necrons can be dangerous because the scatter distance can move the target point close to impassible terrain or enemy models. Keeping some assault units nearby can help make this tactic a lot more risky for the Necron player.
- C. Sometimes, it's best to light fire with fire. If you find Swarms making your life difficult, one of the best ways to handle them is to go ahead and assault. If you can outnumber the Swarms and win combat, the Swarms will take extra Wounds (because they are Fearless) and will go away that much faster. The sooner you drive off the Swarms, the better! Remember that template weapons cause double Wounds on Swarms. Thus, even a simple flamer can exterminate these annoying vermin.
- D. Try to kill the Necron Lord as early in the game as possible. If it's not possible to do so, keep in mind that the Lord, while a scary opponent, has only 3 Attacks. It's possible to swamp him with large groups of warriors (such as an Imperial Guard Infantry Platoon, Grots, or Termagants) to tie him up in combat for a number of turns. If the Lord is on a Destroyer body, tying him up in combat is even better, as he can't use all that lovely jetbike movement he paid for! In general, one of the best things you can do in a fight against Necrons is to attempt to reduce the army to 25% or less of its original numbers and force the army to disappear per the Phase out rule.

ORKS

With guttural howls, Mekboy Krudz and his Burna Boyz stormed past the broken remnants of a mob of Slugga Boyz and charged the trench. With several ominous whoosshes, great gouts of oily flames shot into the hastily dug Imperial positions. The blackened and horrible things that still moved and screamed in the trench were loudly dispatched by slugga fire.

For a single moment, the entire squad paused in a very un-Orky fashion and twisted nozzles, adjusted goggles, and tapped fuel tanks. Assured that their gear was working, the Mekboy led his boyz down the trench and towards the bunker that had caused the Orks so much trouble.

"Dem 'Oomies is gonna pay," growled Krudz.

Orks are the most widespread of all alien races known to the Imperium of Man. Orks are savage, barbarous, and so totally warlike that their thirst for battle and conquest is unquenchable. Orks don't negotiate – they fight and they like it that way.

Fighting Style

Ork Warbosses have long been accused of using unsubtle, sledgehammer tactics. These charges are undeniably true, but then again, so is the bloody evidence of their success. Even basic Orks are fearsome hand-to-hand opponents. The fact that Orks are relatively cheap points-wise means that there are usually a large number of them. While a frontal assault by overwhelming numbers is an obvious place to start, a cunning Ork Warlord can make an infinite amount of adjustments to this theme.

For instance, an Ork mastermind with a fondness for mechanized movement can easily invest in lots of Trukks to speed his force across the board. Dreadnoughts and Killer Kans make awesome support for an infantry advance, and the potential of facing as many as nine Killer Kans on the battlefield has caused many an Ork opponent to quake in his boots. Screens of Ork bikers and Grois can soak up a lot of enemy firepower and allow large Boyz mobs to advance with a minimum of losses, and a Warlord can trim the foe down before assaulting by holding lots of shooty stuff like plenty of big shootas, a few pieces of Groi artillery, and a motley assembly of Wartraks. There are many brutal tactics to try, but remember, the best ones are the ones that result in your foe dripping off the end of your choppas! Waaagh!!!

Collecting an Ork Army

We always suggest starting a new army by fulfilling the requirements of the Standard Missions Force Organization Chart. For Orks, this means a Warboss for the HQ choice and two Troops choices – pretty much an ideal situation for getting started and forming the center of your army. Expanding the Ork army after you've collected and painted your HQ and two Troops choices is easy. Ork armies have everything a Warboss could want: rock-hard infantry, screening troops, lots of fast attack options, and plenty of heavy support. Having a range of models will allow the Ork player to change his forces from battle to battle. For one game, he can field high numbers of hand-to-hand fighters to swamp an enemy. For the next, he can go with more speed or firepower.

A few specialized mobs fielded alongside a healthy number of Ork Boyz can add lots of punch to an army. Burna Boyz can field an extraordinary number of flame-throwing burnas, which can also be used as power weapons (no armor save!) in combat. Skarboyz are crusty veteran Orks who pack close combat attacks with extra strength, while Stormboyz use Jump Packs to close the gap with the foe more quickly. For heavy support, it is tough to beat the walking menace of Killer Kans or Dreadnoughts, but Big Gunz provide some wicked options, like the always-hitting Zzap guns or the far-reaching shells of a Lobba. Orks can be battlefield scavengers too, and troops like Lootas may make use of enemy heavy weapons and even Looted vehicles from other armies. Even a Basilisk or Land Raider can turn up in an Ork force.

With so many effective and fun-to-play choices, it won't be long before you are building up your own Ork Waaagh! (the Orky word for massive invasion)

Andrew Cromwell won the Slayer Sword at the 2004 Baltimore Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition with his Ork Big Mek.

Characteristically, a Mekboy will exhibit the kind of ambition usually seen only among Nobs. Although he can never aspire to lead a whole warband, the Mekboy will gather other Mekboys as followers and gain in power and stature.

ELITES

ORK FLESH

Even though all Orks are green, they don't all have to look the same! Below are some different ways to paint your greenskins.

Tip: Try mixing up different greens and browns and then add lighter shades to create your own skin tones.

BASECOAT: CATACHAN GREEN

For a basic Ork color, begin with Catachan Green and add Goblin Green to it for the first two highlights. Add some Rotting Flesh to the green mixture for the final highlight.

BASECOAT: DARK ANGELS GREEN

To create darker Orks, use Dark Angels Green and add Bad Moon Yellow for the highlights. For each highlight, simply increase the amount of Bad Moon Yellow that is added to the green.

BASECOAT: 50% DARK ANGELS GREEN 50% BESTIAL BROWN

After the basecoat is mixed, add Camp Green for the first two highlights. For the final highlight, use straight Camp Green for a more defined look.

BASECOAT: 50% SNOT GREEN 50% GRAVEYARD EARTH

This lighter green uses Rotting Flesh as the highlight ingredient. Add an increasing amount of Rotting Flesh to the Snot Green/Graveyard Earth mix for each of the highlights.

DIRT SCRAP PILE

Start by cutting out a base from hardboard and sanding the edges down. Create a hill shape out of insulation foam and glue it in place on top of the hardboard.

Cover the base with white glue and sand. This layer will protect the foam from the super glue and spray primer.

Take bits and pieces from various models and glue them into place with super glue. Stack them to look random and disorganized. Make multiple layers of bits to create a disheveled look.

Once the scrap pile is built, prime it with black spray primer and then paint it with slightly watered-down Bestial Brown paint. Add some areas of Scab Red throughout the pile. Drybrush with Boltgun Metal and use Chestnut Ink to "stain" random areas. Finish up by gluing static grass to the base.

ORKY VEHICLE AND WEAPON DETAILS

CHECKS

To create checks, start by painting two straight lines with a fine detail brush and thinned

Chaos Black paint. Paint another line in the center of them to create three evenly spaced lines.

Make a grid by carefully painting lines that are perpendicular to the original three.

For the checkered effect, paint alternate squares Skull White.

Fill in the rest of the squares with Chaos Black.

Begin by painting two parallel lines with thinned Chaos Black. Paint a zig-zag pattern in between these lines.

Carefully fill in one set of triangles with a color of your choice (we used Sunburst Yellow).

Finish by filling in the rest of the triangles with a different color (we chose Skull White).

GLYPHS

Choose a glyph and paint it onto a model with thinned Chaos Black paint. Remember, Orks aren't the best artists, so it's okay if the glyph is a little sloppy.

Fill in the area with another color but leave the edges black. Here we used Codex Grey, but a darker shade of your army color would work well too.

Using a lighter color, start from the top (the teeth points) and paint streaks downward (toward the base of the teeth). We used Skull White.

PAINTING RUSTY METAL

Many of the Ork models are equipped with metal weapons and have various metal bits. Most Ork metal is rusty since they obtain it from scrap piles and never take very good care of it. Here is an easy and fast way to paint metal with rusty spots all over it.

Start by priming the model black and apply a watered-down coat of Tin Bitz. Drybrush the model with Boltgun Metal and use heavier strokes in small, random patches (steps not shown).

Use Chestnut Ink for the basecoat of the rusty patches. Next, apply watered-down Bestial Brown over the Chestnut Ink patches.

Once dry, use undiluted Bestial Brown to strengthen the appearance of the rust. Finally, drybrush Vermin Brown over the rust spots for a finishing highlight.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH ORKS

- A. The major advantages of an Ork army are numbers, mobility, and determination. Ork armies can field massive mobs and severely outnumber most other armies (Tyrannids being a notable exception). Orks are also extremely mobile – the vast majority of their weaponry can be fired on the move, and the army includes both cheap transports and effective bikes. Orks also rarely fail Morale Checks – their Mob Size Check ability means that Orks will rarely ever run away. If you keep these factors in mind and play aggressively, your Ork army should be able to leverage these advantages into a real chance for victory. Try not to get too distracted by the shiny tanks. Dreadnoughts, and big gunz – you need plenty of Boyz to win!
- B. Orks normally aren't very resilient when faced with most ranged weapons. However, a few pieces of kit can produce a fairly resilient force of Orks. Mekboyz can carry kustom force fields to protect the Boyz on foot, and Warbikes can cruise along in the front lines to provide a cover save to all the units behind them. Add a big unit of Grots, and your Orks can withstand a great deal of shooting while they head toward the enemy!
- C. Most 40K players properly respect choppas and know that Orks excel in assault. You can pull out a nasty surprise, however, by fielding a full-size mob of Flash Gitz that has the more dakka upgrade and four big shoolas. This unit can put out more than enough firepower to make up for the Orks' poor accuracy and can put a crimp in the plans of an opponent who was expecting your Orks to assault exclusively.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST ORKS

- A. One way to slow down an Ork army is to neutralize its advantages. To whittle down numbers, use template and blast weapons. To reduce the effects of the Mob Size Check, you can use many units who can affect enemy Leadership (such as Necron Pariahs, Culexus Assassins, and some psychic powers). To cut down on the Orks' mobility, destroy transports and put Warbikes on your priority list of targets.
- B. Although the kustom force field and the Warbikes do provide some protection, it is not enough to withstand concentrated fire. Focus on taking out the Warbikes and the mobs with the Mekboyz first, and you will find it much easier to deal with the rest of the army once they're gone. In addition, template weapons ignore cover saves. Armies that can field quite a few flamers (such as the Witch Hunters) can have a field day frying Orks regardless of kustom force fields or Warbike interference.
- C. The Flash Gitz can be a bit problematic especially for armies with low armor saves like Tyrannids or Imperial Guard. Although it may seem counterintuitive, this unit makes a good target for an assault. All those expensive guns will go to waste if they're tied up in close combat! Alternatively, consider driving a tank in front of these Orks to block off their line of sight to your other, more vulnerable units. The Flash Gitz will have a hard time taking out any vehicle with AV 12 or more.

SPACE MARINES

Sergeant Peterson surveyed the rubble and carnage, took off his helmet, and scratched his head in amazement. For 3 days, the 3rd Imperial Guard Militia Regiment had been held up by rebel forces embedded in the trenches and thick cover of sector 317. Several assaults had been launched, all resulting in heavy casualties and a complete failure to penetrate enemy lines.

Just as the 3rd Regiment prepared for another seemingly hopeless attack, they were told by command to hold. Instead of the expected artillery barrage, two squads of Ultramarines arrived in their Rhino Transports. It was the first time Peterson had seen Space Marines, and the rumors all fell short of reality. In unspoken coordination, one squad supplied covering fire while the other squad advanced. In perfect order, the two squads advanced into the Rebel's most fortified positions. Enemy fire washed over the 7'-tall power-armored giants but bounced off like gentle rainfall. In a few moments, it was over. Just like that, the Space Marines remounted their vehicles and went off on further missions. As the grisly evidence at Peterson's feet proved, there were no rebel survivors.

Space Marines are genetically modified super soldiers that were first made in the dark and distant past by the Emperor himself. Equipped with power armor, extra organs, enhanced reflexes, superhuman strength, and more, the Space Marines are Humanity's finest warriors. Organized by Chapters, each of which has varying degrees of autonomy, Space Marines are deployed to the most deadly battle sites of the Imperium.

Fighting Style

A Space Marine army is capable of fulfilling any battlefield mission. By mixing squad selection, weapon choices, and equipment, a Space Marine force can defend, attack, stand back and shoot, rapidly advance, or any combination imaginable. Indeed, Space Marines are entrusted with all sorts of specialist missions such as raiding behind enemy lines, capturing vital positions, and defiant rearguard actions.

Some Space Marine Chapters are renowned for a particular battlefield trait or fighting style. The White Scars are famous for their hit-and-run style of attacks, while the Blood Angels are feared most for their close assault prowess. To find out more about famous Space Marine Chapters and their histories, look for Codex army books and the Index Astartes series.

Brother Captain Finnegan painted by Matt Verzam won third place at the 2004 Chicago Golden Demon painting competition.

Collecting a Space Marine Army

The best way to begin collecting an army is to get a few core Troops choices and a leader. These models will not only fulfill the compulsory selections from the Standard Missions template but will also give players a solid army core on which to build. Space Marines are an ideal army to build, whether you are a new Warhammer 40,000 player or an aged veteran of many battles. The army is compact and endlessly adaptable. Troops like Space Marine Tactical Squads can be upgraded with a few weapon options (like a lascannon to take out enemy armor or a heavy bolter to wipe out massed troops). You can also add a Transport in the form of a Rhino or Razorback. Likewise, a Space Marine Hero can take to the field of battle on his own (a great option for beginning armies) or can be accompanied by a Command Squad complete with Apothecary, Techmarine, and Standard Bearer.

When it comes to enlarging a Space Marine army, there are simply too many great choices. Players who favor bringing the attack to the enemy quickly can look to Fast Attack choices like Assault Squads (with jump packs), Bike Squadrons, or Land Speeders. Heavy Support comes in the form of heavy weapons upgrades (Devastator Squads) or a wide range of lethal support vehicles like a Predator Tank, Vindicator, Land Raider, or Whirlwind missile launcher. All Space Marines are fantastic, but their Elite selections are truly awesome. Dreadnoughts are great support for infantry, and Terminators are even more heavily armed and armored than standard Space Marines.

The Space Marine line of Citadel Miniatures is widely adaptable, with plenty of models and options usable by any Chapter (including ones you've made up yourself) as well as specific models to fulfill particular Chapter roles. Forward for the Emperor!

CHAPTER AFFILIATION

Throughout this section, you'll find icons next to some products. They indicate that the model was designed to fit in with a specific Chapter. With a little conversion, however, any of these models can be used in any Space Marine army.

Joe Ortiz's Iron-Father won second place in the Warhammer 40,000 Single Miniature category at the 2004 Chicago Golden Demon painting competition.

Codices

The Codex is the essential tome of knowledge and starting point for the Space Marine commander. There are specialized books for three Chapters – the Blood Angels, Dark Angels, and Space Wolves – and two on major events in the history of Warhammer 40,000.

SPACE MARINE BACK BANNERS

The back banners that Space Marines wear indicate in one visual stroke with which Chapter and squad they are associated and may tell of a storied incident from the Chapter's past. In any case, these banners really add impact to the look of your army.

The new command sprue contains a plastic bit with a banner cast onto it. However, you may want to create a more personalized look for your officers by creating your own banners. Here are some helpful tips on how.

Start by drawing your design and outline on a piece of paper (or photocopy the template shown here and draw your design on it). Draw lightly so the design will be easy to cover with paint. Cut out your banner and attach it to a piece of plasticard or cardboard for stability.

When you've painted the colors onto the banner, either paint the outline with a fine detail brush or trace it with a fine technical marker (pick one up at an art or craft store).

Carefully cut out your banner tabs first, paint the back a solid color, and attach it to the banner pole by folding the tabs over and using white glue to attach the tabs to the back of the banner. If you use a hobby knife (as in the picture) for precise attachment, be sure to use the flat side of the blade instead of the point. Be extra careful not to glue the banner to the banner pole itself.

Once you finish one banner, the rest will only get easier. Remember practice is the key. Try using brass rod to create larger banner poles so you can make larger and more ornate back banners for your army's special characters. Let your imagination go!

TRANSFERS ON SHOULDER PADS

Waterslide transfers are an excellent way to give all of your Space Marines identical markings without going through the painstaking and time-consuming process of painting each one by hand.

Cut out a transfer from a sheet (packed in with most Space Marines boxed sets) and hold it by the paper with a pair of tweezers in a small cup or saucer of water for about 30 seconds.

Then, using a pair of tweezers and a brush, slide the transfer off its backing paper and onto your model. Use the corner of a tissue to dab away any excess water from the model.

To avoid wrinkles forming in the transfer as it dries, there are a couple of methods you can use. One of them is often called "burnishing" – gently use the handle of a paint brush to rub out the wrinkles while the transfer is drying. Or you can use a special chemical solution (the one we use has the brand name "Micro-Set") that actually warps the transfer to conform to the curve and to prevent wrinkles.

PURITY SEALS

Many of the Emperor's Finest proudly wear Purity Seals into battle as signs of their virtue and undying devotion to the Imperium. Want to make your own? Here's a quick run through telling you how.

Take a very small ball of putty and place it on a piece of plasticard or a spare base. Use the flat end of a drill bit (dipped in water to prevent sticking) to make a circular indentation in the putty. Let it cure and harden for 4-5 hours.

Gently pop the purity seal loose and glue it to the selected location – shoulder pad, greave, belt buckle, glove, weapon, etc. Let it dry and paint it with Chaos Black. Paint and highlight it with your chosen purity seal color. In this case, we used Red Gore as basecoat and then highlighted with Blood Red and Bad Moon Yellow.

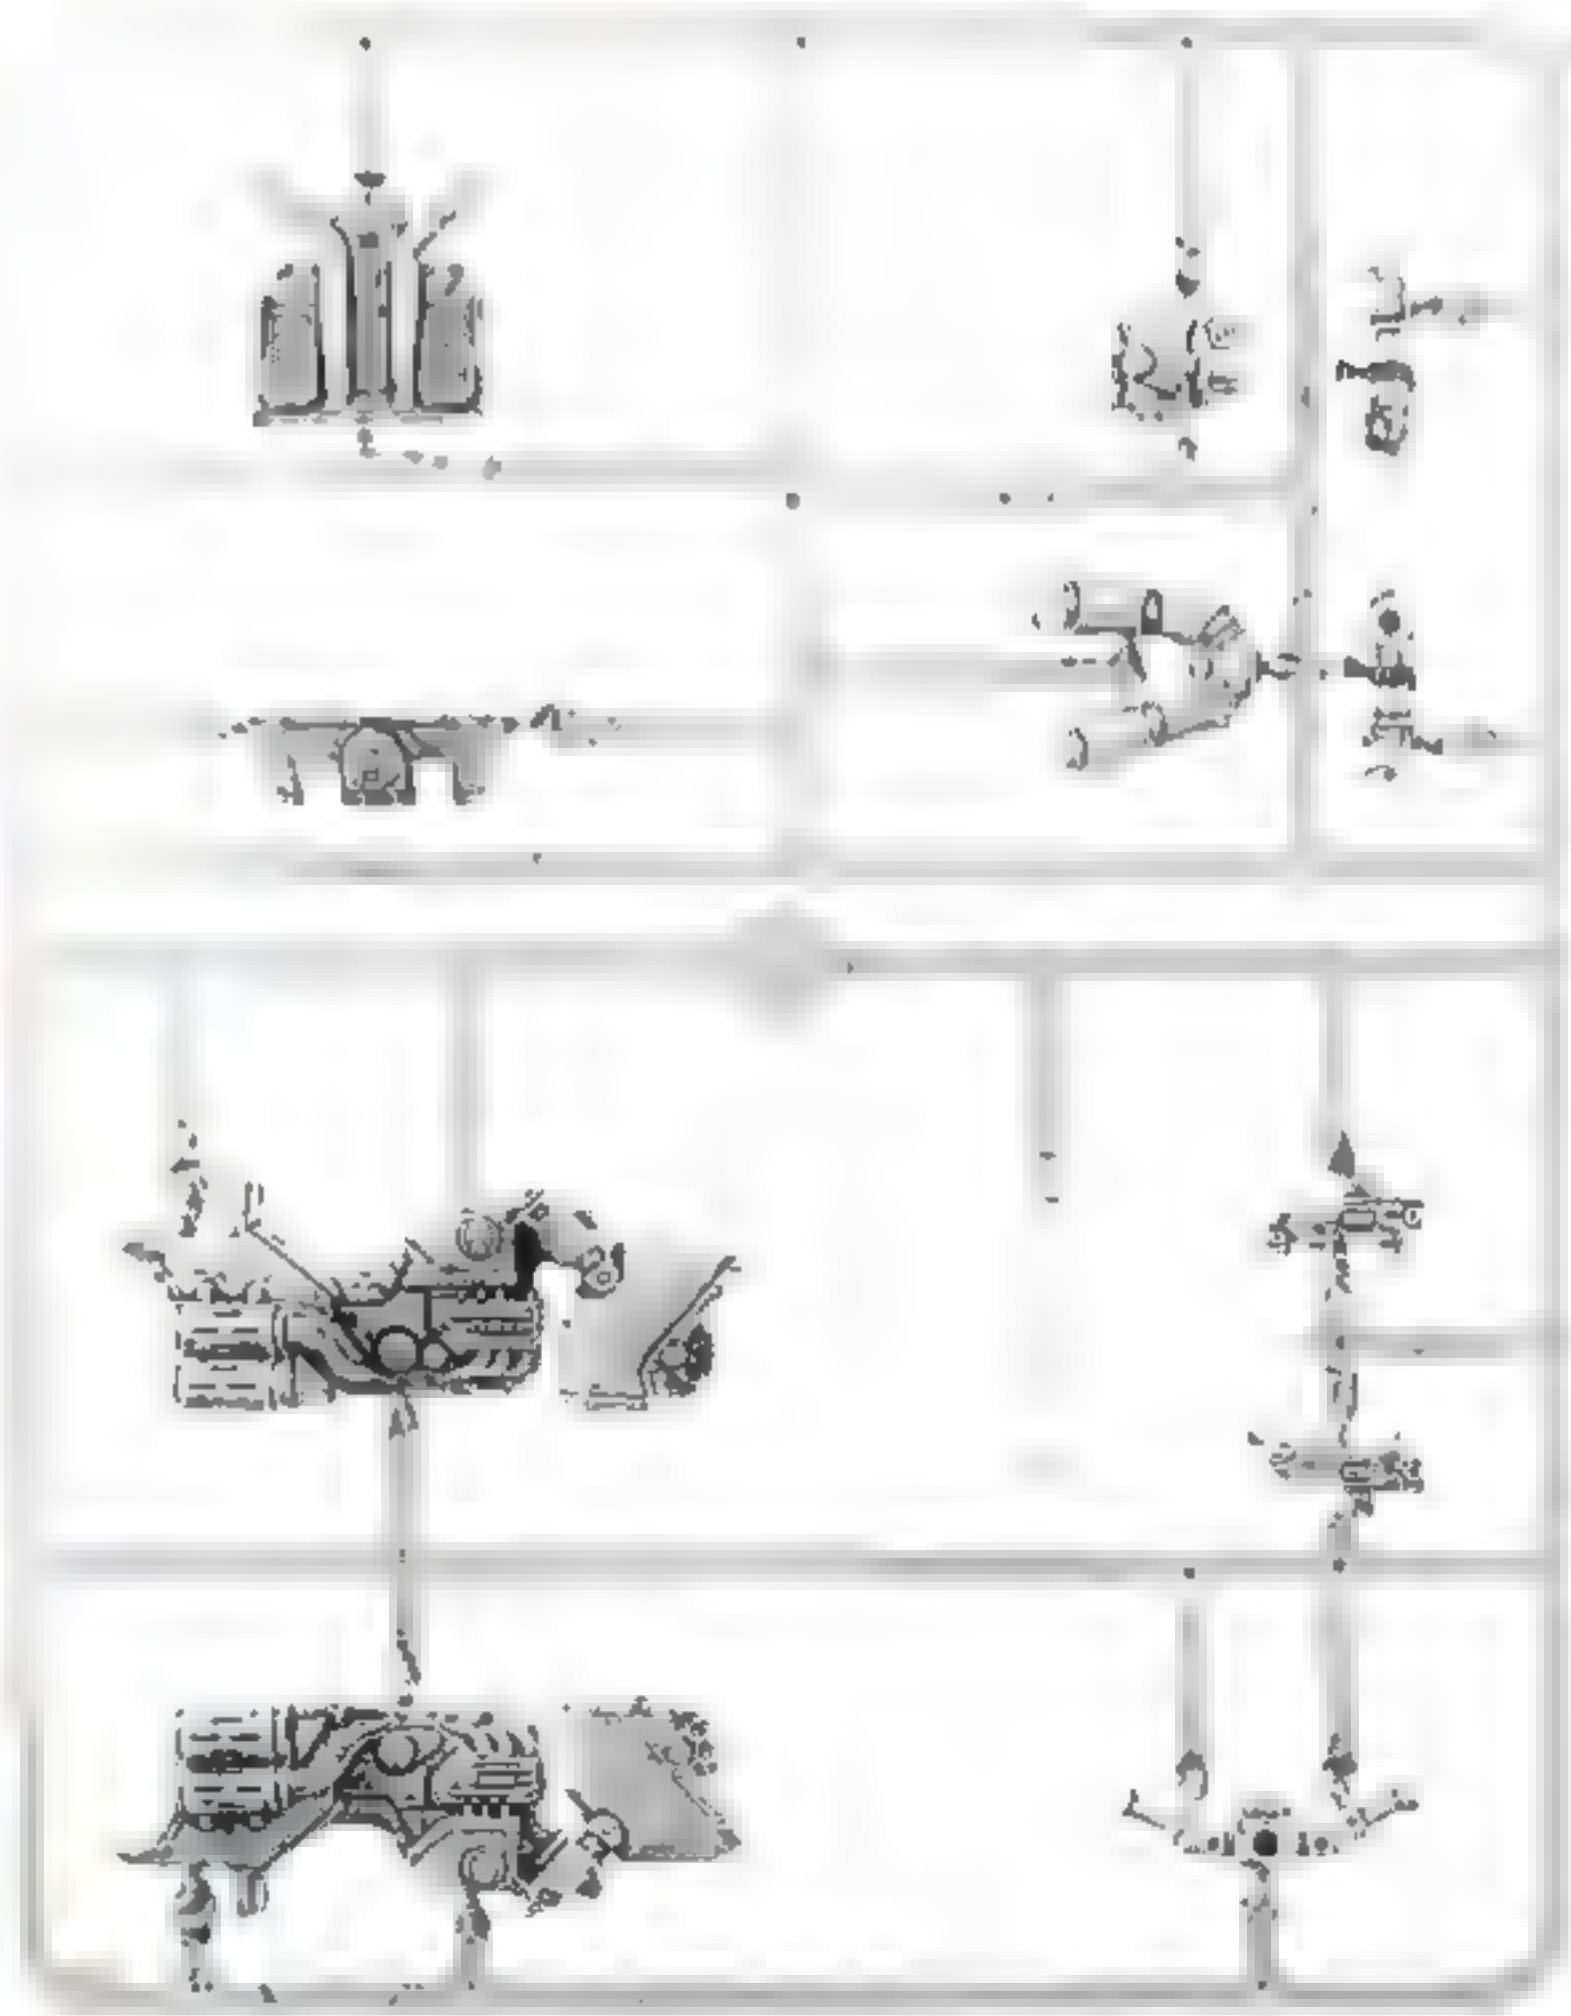

Draw a trapezoid on a piece of paper. Thin down Snakebite Leather and paint a very light coat to give the paper the look of parchment. Highlight the edges with Skull White. Use Chaos Black to paint squiggly lines with a fine detail brush to represent writing. Carefully cut out the parchment (inside the pencil lines) with a hobby knife. Then hold the parchment with a pair of tweezers and carefully apply super glue to the top end. Affix the pieces of parchment to the bottom of the purity seal.

SQUAD BADGES

The different types of squads in a Space Marine Company (e.g., Tactical, Devastator, and Assault) are often distinguished by badges and markings on the shoulder pad or elsewhere. Some Companies also use numbers to separate the troops when more than one squad of the same type is in the same Company. Markings generally adhere to a common visual theme, but there are many variants when it comes to marking individual squads. Here are some examples of squad badges.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH SPACE MARINES

- A. A Chaplain with a jump pack can lead an Assault Squad into battle and make the unit Fearless in addition to giving it the ability to reroll misses on the charge. Another version of this very powerful unit would involve the Chaplain leading a Veteran Squad with lightning claws, a power weapon, and a Veteran Sergeant with a power fist. The Veteran Squad could take the Furious Charge skill for even more close combat ability.
- B. Scout Bikers can achieve a charge on the 1st turn with the Scouts pregame move. Another good use for Scout Bikers or a Bike Squadron is to give a teleport homer to the Veteran Sergeant. The bikers can move quite far with the Turbo Boost rule or the pregame move. Thus, the Veteran Sergeant can guide in a Terminator Squad nearly anywhere you want.
- C. Against certain armies a Librarian with Fear of the Darkness can be devastating. The ability to make multiple units take a Morale Test at -2 to their Leadership means that even other Space Marines could be sent running. Giving the Librarian a jump pack or a bike to keep up with units as they fall back. As long as the Librarian (or any other enemy unit) is within 6", falling back units cannot regroup. Cunning deployment of Whirlwind Castellon missiles can also help get more bang for your buck as well.
- D. Alternatives to Devastator Squads. If you have used all your Heavy Support choices on things like Vindicators and Whirlwinds, are Techmarines and Gun Servitors. A squad of four Gun Servitors armed with Heavy Bolters can unleash 12 Strength 4 shots, enough to put a dent even in a well armored unit. For more shooting capability, arm the Techmarine a Storm Bolter and give the unit a Razorback equipped with a Heavy Bolter.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST SPACE MARINES

- A. Toolled-up squads intended for assault are an excellent target for your heavy weapons. Another option is to face this squad with one of your own that is likely either to be wiped out or to run away. In either case, the Assault Squad or Veterans Squad will then be exposed to your fire.
- B. If Scout Bikers use the pregame move to approach your lines, you should quickly be within rapid fire distance. Scout Bikes are not as durable as other bikes and are great targets for autocannons and heavy bolters. If you think that the teleport homer is going to be a factor, deploy your units where the Terminators won't have much room to appear in once they Deep Strike.
- C. Low-Leadership armies will always have a hard time with Morale Checks, but many have ways to circumvent their low Leadership with things like Vox-casters, Tau Ethereals, and Mob Size Checks.
- D. While Gun Servitors have the Ballistic Skill of a Space Marine, their Toughness and Save leave a bit to be desired. Return fire on the Gun Servitor unit or a unit with decent close combat skill will likely eliminate the Gun Servitors. A few low-AP shots or a power weapon will help to eliminate the Techmarine. After the Servitors are gone, he is rather less fearsome.

HOW TO PAINT SPACE MARINES

Praise the Emperor! How to Paint Space Marines is THE essential reference for any Space Marine player! This book is chock full of great hobby tips as well as examples of paint schemes and heraldry to make great and unique Chapters of your own.

CHAPTERS OF THE FIRST FOUNDING

Under the Emperor's directives, 20 genetically modified super beings were created. These Primarchs as they came to be known, passed their genetic imprint to make the first 20 Chapters of Space Marines. These original 20 Chapters are still referred to as the First Founding Chapters.

TAU

Shas'o Vior'la Kais, Fire Warrior Commander, watched as the Gue'la began the long trek up the hillside. Their crude, armored vehicles lumbered forward on clanking metal tracks, dismounted warriors advancing before the machines. Kais felt sorry that he had to do this – the Gue'la could not know the folly of this attack. The Tau had claimed this world as their own. Its use had been decided, and its first colonists were already allocated from members of the Fio caste. The settlement of this world was as indisputable as a sunrise. Kais was already in the process of removing the Gue'la outpost from the planet. The Ethereals had decreed that the planet be cleared, but with typical Gue'la stubbornness, they had refused to bow before the inevitable.

The Tau inhabit an area of space near the eastern fringe of the galaxy. They are a young, dynamic race with highly advanced weaponry and technology. Though less than 2,000 years old, their fledgling empire is rapidly expanding into space and beginning to encounter the elder races of the galaxy. In galactic terms, their empire is small, based around a densely packed globular cluster of stars, which enables the Tau to travel between them without many of the dangers normally associated with warp travel. The Tau empire also encompasses several alien races who have been subsumed into the empire voluntarily or whose services are bought through trade agreements.

Tau civilization is based around a rigid system of castes, each relating to the four elements of nature – fire, water, air, and earth. These castes dictate each Tau's role within society: warrior, bureaucrat, pilot, or worker. Their rulers form a mysterious fifth caste, called the Ethereals, who bind the other castes together. The Tau empire is underpinned by the concept that it is only right and noble for the individual to set aside his own desires to work for the greater good of the empire. Overall, the Tau are very good at actualizing this ideal.

Michael Anderson's Kroot Shaper won third place at the 2003 U.K. Games Day Golden Demon painting competition.

Jason Thompson's Crisis Battlesuit Pilot was a runner up at the 2004 Chicago Games Day Golden Demon painting competition.

Collecting a Tau Army

The Tau are a very stylish and powerful army with many specialized troops at their disposal. Their main strength lies in the different types of battlesuit-equipped warriors. These warriors are hardened veterans, and their battlesuits are capable of mounting a fearsome array of firepower. In addition, their battlesuits include thick armor which makes it very difficult for most basic troopers to take down a battlesuit-equipped Tau. If you're looking for an army that can pack a heavy punch while being able to soak up the enemy's return fire, then the Tau are the force for you. Tau technology is highly advanced and includes many exciting devices and upgrades that can be added to the battlesuits to enhance their ability to deal death and receive punishment.

Tau Fire Warriors are courageous fighters with solid leaders. If a member of the Ethereal caste accompanies them, their confidence and self-belief will keep them fighting in the face of insurmountable odds. The Tau dislike close combat and prefer to destroy their enemies at long range with high-tech weaponry, because the Tau are neither strong nor tough. When the fighting gets close and bloody, the Tau call upon their Kroot allies. The Kroot are ferocious carnivores who are capable of holding their own against most opponents.

A fully painted Tau army looks very striking on the tabletop and suits painters who want the best of both worlds. On the one hand, you have the clean, elegant lines and bright colors of the Tau Fire warriors in their battlesuits and grav-tanks, while on the other you have the Kroot, with their barbaric, feral feel and large areas of flesh to paint. Even very basic painting techniques will quickly produce a battle-ready force and give you the chance to build a playable army quickly and easily. With your army, you can expand the frontiers of the glorious Tau empire. May the Ethereals guide you.

PROTECTING THE DETAIL ON AUN SHI

Paint Shining Gold on the metal jewelry and hair braids. Apply a wash of Brown Ink to these areas. When the ink dries, apply a final highlight of Mithril Silver.

Paint Brazen Brass on the armbands, coat edging, bands on the halberd, and the various glyphs. Apply a wash of Brown Ink to these areas. Finally, when the ink is dry, apply Mithril Silver highlights to these areas.

Paint the blade of the weapon with Boltgun Metal and highlight with Chainmail and then Mithril Silver. Choose some markings from Codex Tau and then draw two thin pencil lines with a ruler directly on the weapon shaft. Next, draw lines the same distance apart onto a piece of paper and a mock up of the inscription. By laying out the markings beforehand, you ensure that the lettering will fit neatly on the model. Carefully paint the letters on the model. Start with the central letter and work your way out toward the ends.

MAKING A KROOT ENCAMPMENT

Although the Kroot prefer to lurk in trees and other hiding places there are times where this is not possible, and they must camp. To begin making your Kroot encampment, print out the templates for the tents from our web site http://us.games-workshop.com/games/40k/tau/terrain/tau_kroot_encampment.htm

Glue or pin the template to a sheet of thin cardboard and cut out the tent along the solid lines. Cut holes for the tabs. Next, score the dotted lines to create folds by lightly applying pressure with your modeling knife to cut halfway through the cardboard. Rescore any fold lines that won't bend easily

Use white glue to stick your tent together. Glue the main tent structure by putting glue on the tab and folding the tent. Next, glue the internal wall (the triangle bit) into place about a quarter of the way into the main tent structure. Finally, glue the doorway into place. Repeat the process for the rest of your tents. We strongly suggest that you base the tents on pieces of plasticard, corrugated cardboard or foamcore so that they are more sturdy

FINISHING OFF

First, you may want to add a little flock to the base for more detail. For the main color of the tents, spray them with Besta. Brown followed by Bubonic Brown from a distance. For the worn down, muddy areas around the tent entrances, drybrush with Bubonic Brown followed by Bleached Bone. Then drybrush the base with Goblin Green for the grass.

Finally, to add detail to the tents, paint some glyphs onto them. Use simple geometric patterns of Kroot Warriors.

You can draw these glyphs freehand right onto the tent panels with a black Uniball pen. Above are some sketched practice glyphs.

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH TAU

A. Upgrading your Fire Warrior squads to be bonded is especially good when there is also an Ethereal on the table. The bonded upgrade gives a unit under 50% of its original size the chance to rally, and an Ethereal lets a Tau player reroll all Morale Checks. Thus, a Fire Warrior squad has the option of trying to fail such a check and then fleeing from shooting losses of 25% or a lost Assault Phase. If the squad survives, it still has a chance to rally and engage the enemy once more. The bonded upgrade is even more important to small units of Crisis Suits or Stealth Suits, since these squads have small numbers to begin with and will often find themselves under 50% of their starting numbers. Occasionally, you'll want to fail the Morale Check in assault even if it does result in your unit being wiped out. As a result the assaulters will be open for your storm of retributive firepower! All in all, an Ethereal gives you a more reliable opportunity to control the results of an assault on your lines – an excellent thing to have as a Tau Commander.

B. If the team leader of a Stealth Suit team selects the drone controller upgrade, any drones added to the unit share the stealth capabilities of a Stealth Suit for free. In addition, the weaponry on the Drones matches the range of the Stealth Suits' burst cannons – the Drones will add some additional firepower to the unit as well as the chance of pinning the enemy if they cause any casualties. A particularly effective combination involves a unit of Pathfinders using markerlights to help guide the Stealth Suits' burst cannons. Since the markerlights help the burst cannons hit on a 2+ and ignore cover saves, there's an excellent chance of wounding every model in the unit and potentially removing special weapons, heavy weapons, or even the squad's leader in one volley! Another great use for a markerlight is to guide in the submunitions round of a Hammerhead's railgun. The markerlight hit will allow the submunitions to ignore cover saves, making this tactic even better against Eldar protected by a Warlock's conceal power or Orks under the cover of a kustom force field.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST TAU

- A. Although the counter for this tactic is very basic – kill the Ethereal – it's a good idea to keep the basics in mind from time to time. Eliminating a Tau Ethereal has many benefits, among them the fact that Tau units will not be able to reroll Morale Tests. In fact, once the Ethereal is dead, most of the Tau army will have to take a Morale Check or Fall Back! When fighting the Tau, slaying the Ethereal (if there is one present) should be among your highest priorities. If you want to keep a unit of Tau from fleeing in the Assault Phase, make sure to keep at least one model in base-to-base when removing casualties if at all possible. As long as you have one model in base-to-base contact, you will get a chance to run down the unit if it flees. Another option is to turn off any power weapons or power fists in your assaulting unit to try and minimize casualties during your Assault Phase. This option might seem counterproductive at first, but consider that if you do cause enough casualties to remove all Tau in base-to-base contact, the Tau can potentially flee (and with an Ethereal, they are likely to do so) and leave your assaulting unit vulnerable in the following Shooting Phase.
- B. Although Stealth Suits can be difficult to target with weapons (especially during a mission using the Night Fighting special rule), ordnance and ordnance barrage weapons are a good way to knock several out of the fight. In addition, Pathfinders are not particularly difficult to kill – every markerlight you eliminate is one less to trouble you for the rest of the game. Lastly, you can always present the Stealth Suits with an armored vehicle (such as a tank) that their burst cannons can't destroy.

++++++Imperial Report: Mining Expedition, Galvin Sector

++++++Last Transmission: 000011051968

Routine probes picked up unusual readings last week. We assumed they were meteors, as the Sentinel Defense Stations showed no signs of damage or xeno alert. A few days later, we received reports that the orbital range defense stations were off-line. Last report: malfunction/internal structural damage. The crew was unreachable. That night, everyone could see the multi-colored streaks standing out against the triple mineral moons that brought us to this region. The falling objects descended into our atmosphere and landed to the north. No word of our northern mining colonies could be reached. I alone saw the vidscreen transmission before all signals were lost. Although blurred and horrible, I recognize the multi-armed creatures. I send this last transmission to warn others. They are coming. Look to the skies.

Tyson Koch's Reaver Tyrant placed first at the 2004 I.A Golden Demon painting competition

The Tyranids are remorseless aliens that descend from the depths of space onto civilized planets and consume the indigenous populations. These alien creatures take many forms, but all share a psychic bond that allows them to act per the direction of the hive mind. This group consciousness directs all Tyranids. Indeed, without this guidance, some of the smaller species are mindless and instinctive. However, the larger and more complex creatures are known to make decisions and respond with a greater degree of intelligence. Unlike most races, the Tyranids make no use of technology or equipment. Instead, all their devices, weapons, and even starships are bio-engineered and grown from living organic material. The Tyranid swarms are always on the move through space. They relentlessly seek out new worlds to strip of their bio-mass to fuel the aliens' own insatiable conquests.

Fighting Style

Tyranid armies, thanks to their variety of troop types, bio-engineered weaponry, and biomorph upgrades, can perform a number of battlefield roles and employ various tactics. The one universal fear for opponents of a Tyranid army is being overwhelmed and ripped to pieces by razor-sharp claws.

The best Tyranid attacks involve the coordination of disparate elements. Waves of small but vicious broods of Hormagaunts race to engage the enemy in hand-to-hand combat. The Hormagaunts are supported and driven forward by more powerful creatures of the hive like Tyranid Warriors. At the same time the assault is launched, infiltrators leap out to sow confusion and panic. Flights of Gargoyles, flapping on bat-like wings, enter the fray, and larger and more monstrous creatures, like Hive Tyrants, Carnifexes, or Zoanthropes, tower over the hordes. While the foes of the Tyranids rush to counter each new threat, the distance between the two armies is closed, and the brutal feeding soon begins.

Collecting a Tyranid Army

The best place to start building a Tyranid army is to fulfill the compulsory choices from the Standard Missions Force Organization Chart. These two Troops choices and one HQ pick will form the center of your army, no matter how large or small, a force you choose to construct. Tyranid players have three alternatives for their HQ choices: a single Hive Tyrant, the fearsome Broodlord, or a Brood of Tyranid Warriors. It's easier to start playing and learning how to use your force with the Tyranid Warriors choice, and you can save the awesome Hive Tyrant with all its upgrade possibilities for a time when your force grows a bit larger. Tyranid players are overloaded with great Troops choices. Termagants and Hormagaunts are always needed, and with Brood sizes ranging from 8 to 32, it's easy to start with a smallish group and gradually expand in size. As your Tyranid army expands, you can add more powerful troops. Genestealers make fantastic shock attack troops. Raveners and Gargoyles can get to the enemy in a hurry. Lictors can infiltrate the foe, and the brutal ferocity of a Carnifex is hard to pass up. For even more tactical options, many of the Broods have a Mutable genus, that is, the ability for a player to add special mutations and adaptations to the entire unit to make them faster, more deadly, or otherwise adapted to fight more effectively. Remember, somewhere in the cold depths of space, Hive Fleets are drifting closer, intent on consuming all before them.

MAKING A TYRANT CAPILLARY TOWER

Capillary towers are huge, living structures that gather the DNA soup from the reclamation pools dotting ravaged planets.

1. Cut a 2" x 12" rectangular shape from a piece of 2" insulation foam. Make sure the ends of the rectangle are cut at an angle. Then draw two circles on both ends and curving lines on two opposite sides of your tower.

2. Following the curved lines on your rectangle, cut out the basic shape of your tower with a knife with a retractable blade or foam cutter. Round off the edges of your tower by cutting the circles on both ends and then rounding down the tower.

3. To create the "flange" at top of your tower, cut out small divots but leave a lip at the very top. Later you will carve out a hollow on the top. To finish off rounding your tower, pick up a file or sandpaper and wear down the uneven peaks around the edges. Keep working until you get a nice even curve.

4. Now comes the tricky part! You'll need a steady hand. Carefully add a few "vening holes" to add a bit of detail to the tower's edges. You can add foam shapes to the side of your tower for additional texture. Carve out the main hole in the top of your tower with a hobby knife.

Cut a 8" circle of hardboard with a jigsaw. Glue your foam tower to this base. Add some foam rocks and dunes made from spackling, and you're ready to start painting! For the unabridged version of this article, check out the Games Workshop web site at <http://www.games-workshop.com>.

PAINTING TYRANIDS QUICKLY

Here, we'll show you a few techniques you can use to paint your Tyranids and get them ready for battle quickly. These techniques are simple to master, and you can achieve excellent results very easily.

There are any number of different painting styles you can use on your Tyranids, and each one is an equally valid method. There's no right or wrong way to paint your models, so use whichever method you find works best for you. You can paint your models with spray cans or drybrushing to achieve different but equally impressive results in your broods.

We'll also show you how to paint flying models and how to apply the same color scheme to a variety of different models.

DRYBRUSHING

To complete this model we used a technique known as drybrushing. To drybrush your model, dip your brush into the highlight color and use a cloth to wipe most of the paint off of the bristles. Next, lightly draw the brush across the raised areas and edges of the model.

1. Undercoat your Gaunt with Bestial Brown.
2. Highlight it with Bubonic Brown.
3. Finally, apply the last highlights by drybrushing with Bleached Bone.

SPRAY CAN

Another method you can use to paint Tyranids quickly is to use light dustings of spray paint.

1. Spray the Gaunt with a basecoat of Bestial Brown.
2. Use a lighter quicker spray of Bubonic Brown to lighten the raised areas of the model.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH TYRANIDS

- The Tyranid army really benefits in many ways when you take large broods. Using numbers to your advantage will help ensure you outnumber your opponent in assault. Don't fret at the large number of casualties you take in opening turns as you cross the table to engage your opponent – play aggressively, keep the pressure on, and don't get timid as you press the attack. Try to bring lots of broods – when setting up, if you have more units than your opponent, you will be placing several of them after he's done deploying and thereby gain a great tactical advantage.
- Tyranids have the capability to make almost any brood Leadership 10 or ignore the effects of Morale checks altogether. Synapse Creatures, when properly protected, can keep a Tyranid army advancing when even Space Marines would pull back. This ability can be critical in order to reach the enemy in the face of ordnance blasts, sniper fire, and psychic powers – all of which are often found on the battlefields of the 41st millennium.
- Speed is the Tyranid player's friend, especially in scenarios where you are claiming table quarters or objectives. Keep some speedy broods like Gargoyles and Hormagaunts tucked away ready to pounce in the last turns of the game just for this purpose – even basic Termagants can use the Fleet special rule to get into position quickly.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST TYRANIDS

- There are many ways to reduce the numbers of enemy units. Some of the best include heavy weapons fire, rapid fire weapons, and ordnance. When facing an army with many large units of models, sometimes the best response is to concentrate your own army on one side of the table. This way, you can put the maximum amount of your firepower on the units closest to you while forcing the units further away to take more time to reach your lines.
- Concentrate on the Synapse creatures. If you can take out enough of them, it can cripple the Tyranid advance. Pour on the massed firepower! When outside of Synapse range, Tyranid creatures fall back towards the nearest Synapse Creature, potentially creating a cluster of models perfect for templates.
- Although the "big ones" – Carnifexes, Tyranid Warriors, and Hive Tyrants to name a few – are often a favored target for heavy weapons fire, it is often more advantageous to focus your deadliest attentions upon the speedy parts of a Tyranid army. Once you eliminate the fastest Tyranids, you can begin to pick off the rest to avoid being overrun.

Bring It to Your Tabletop

Warhammer is the game that allows you to bring all the excitement of fantastic battles right onto your tabletop. You take command of rank after rank of battle-hardened warriors and maneuver them to victory.

There are over a dozen different kinds of armies, from the hordes of the rat-like Skaven to the shambling Undead who rise from the grave to fight again. Every army has different abilities, troop types, and access to a vast assortment of unique monsters, magic, war machines, and more. Keen-eyed Wood Elf archers defend the forest, while cold-blooded Lizardmen try to reclaim their world with the aid of enormous reptile monstrosities. Even better, even the same army type can be assembled in countless different ways. One Dwarf army may rely on well-armored infantry, while another tries for large batteries of war machines. In the end, the battle is won by the general who makes the best moves on the tabletop.

More Than a Game

Warhammer is not just a challenging game to test your tactics but also an entire hobby. Players can build armies, paint models, create new terrain, devise scenarios or special missions to play, and get involved in an ongoing league or campaign. Some hobbyists get involved in all the different aspects, while others settle on a few or even just one particular part. The following pages are all about getting started with the game and building your army.

There is nothing like playing a game with your own army. Over time, you can collect, paint, and assemble units into a mighty force. Then, you assume the role of general and lead your forces to victory (or curse the dice that betrayed you!). Win or lose, Warhammer is always fun.

All Levels of Gaming

The Warhammer rules allow great scope for gaming. Games can range in length from a quick half an hour skirmish with a dozen or so models per side to massive battles between dozens of players, each commanding his own sizable army. The objectives of each game can be as simple as "wipe out the other side" to complicated scenarios or ongoing campaigns that last days, weeks, or even years.

Players can build "official" armies with the Warhammer Armies books, or they can happily design or "make up" their own additional rules, models, monsters, and more. The only real limit is your imagination and the amount of hobby time you can find.

Is There a Right Way to Choose an Army?

Before we get too deep into the prospect of selecting an army, it is worth noting that there is no single right way to choose one. Pretty much anyway you end up with an army is a right way, and the only wrong way to collect an army is when you don't end up with a force you can play with!

However, the following advice may help players who can't make up their minds.

Getting Started

Some lucky players know immediately which army they want to collect. Perhaps they have seen some games in action or spoken with an experienced friend, or maybe the gaming club they hope to join has no representatives for a certain army type. Other prospective players have no idea or perhaps have ruled out a few choices but are no closer to making an selection. This page and the next can help you reach a decision about which army to start.

Getting all the information you can about the armies that you find appealing is always a good first step. This catalog is an excellent start, and the Games Workshop web site is also a valuable resource.

There may be a number of criteria for player's choosing their armies, but here are some of the ones we talk about most often: style of play, background, and the miniatures. Each of these topics deserves closer inspection.

Background

Warhammer has a rich and well developed background. Each army has its own history, realm, and goals. Many players can't get into an army unless they think the background is equally cool. In a sense, the Warhammer world is an ongoing story, and players can get involved in the tale by playing games.

For example, the Dwarfs used to be a very prolific and powerful race. After a long (and some would say misguided) war against the High Elves, a great eruption of Chaos overcame the land. The earthquakes and volcanoes damaged or destroyed many of the Dwarfen mountain realms, and still more were invaded by tunneling bands of Skaven and Night Goblins. All these calamities dealt the Dwarfs a blow from which they have never recovered. Although still powerful in certain strongholds, the Dwarfen race has but a shadow of its former glory.

Still, glimmers of hope remain, and the fire of revenge burns brightly in every Dwarf. Revenge, loyalty, and bitterness are all common themes to a Dwarf! One by one, the Dwarfs' ancestral homes will be reclaimed, or so the Dwarfs vow.

Each section that details a Warhammer army in this catalog begins with some background information that will give players a taste of what the army is all about.

Style of Play

Each army in Warhammer is different and will be better at different things on the tabletop. Matching up the army's style with what a player enjoys most is the goal. If no-holds-barred blitzing offense sounds good to you, perhaps a mortal Chaos army would fit? If lots of magic and raising Undead sounds appealing, then Vampire Counts may be for you. Superior numbers, backstabbing, and nefarious war machines are deep in the black heart of any Skaven General!

It is possible to achieve some or even all of these tactics with the same army, but every force has strengths and weak points.

As an example, an Orc & Goblin army can be very diverse and may be built around infantry (Big Uns and Black Orcs), cavalry (Wolf Riders and Boar Boyz), war machines (Rock Lobbers, Chariots, and Bolt Throwers), magic (spells of the Big Waaagh! are very potent), wacky special weaponry (Night Goblin Fanatics), and more. Some wily commanders even choose several of these options when assembling their force. No matter what the greenskin warlord chooses, it tends to be a bit unreliable. Orcs & Goblins suffer from Animosity and low Leadership.

In this catalog, players can find out more by reading the Fighting Style section listed with each army.

Finding out More

Once you've found an army or two that really capture your interest, it's time to find out more. The Games Workshop web site is ideal for this sort of research, and you'll find information about every army. Finding and talking to a local gaming group is always a great idea. After all, the members may be some of the opponents you'll be squaring off against with your new army in the future. Try asking for times when players meet at your local Rogue Trader Independent Retailer or GW Hobby Center.

Miniatures

Many players choose armies based strictly on the look of the model range. Since collecting and painting play such a large part in the Warhammer hobby, choosing a force based on looks is a sensible option. After all, the more you like and enjoy the models, the more you'll have fun in the collecting, painting, and modeling aspects of the hobby.

This catalog is ideal as it allows players to ogle the entire range of models for each army.

The Army Book

Once you've decided on an army, the appropriate Warhammer Armies book is the next logical step. The Army book will go into detail about the force and allow players to build armies far beyond the description in the basic rulebook.

Each Army book contains a complete army list, with descriptions of every unit, war machine, weapon type, and magical item available to the force. Additional background and history are included as are the profiles for some special characters and the special rules for your army of choice.

Collecting Models

The easiest way to start collecting your army is to buy and paint the most eye-catching models in the range first. This desire is understandable. However, though a hero on a Griffin, a Steam Tank, and Wizard may be formidable, they are not an army! Thus, it makes sense to balance the force as you go.

The army lists in each Warhammer Armies book are divided up into four basic sections: Lords & Heroes, Core troops, Special troops, and Rare troops.

In the Warhammer part of this catalog, under Collecting an Army at the start of each force's section, we list a few suggestions about how to begin purchasing each army. No matter what size game you are playing, the normal minimums are a character model (to lead your forces) and at least two Core choices. For players just beginning, a force like this one is always a great place to start. In Warhammer, Core troops tend to take the form of plastic regiment sets. These enable players to gather a small horde quickly and easily, and relatively affordably.

The ideal goal of each veteran player is to have lots of choices. A standard tournament-style game involves armies of around 2,000 points and can include 0-2 Rare units. However, the ideal army has more than 2 Rare units! This range of choices allows players to switch their armies or to gear up for tough opponents. Having the ability to take two Giants in an Orc army, for instance, is very threatening!

There are plenty of armies to choose – from the Lord of the Steam Tank of Lustria to the armies of the frozen and mountainous Ogre Kingdoms. There is an army for you that is both aesthetically pleasing and tactically flexible!

Choosing an Army

Each Warhammer Army book is set up in the following order: Lords & Heroes, Core, Special, and Rare units. That is also the order in which the catalog will present each type of model for each army in the current range.

Lords & Heroes. These models represent individual characters and can include such personalities as Generals (or Warlords, Lords, Daemon Princes, or whatever leads your particular army), Heroes, Wizards, and specialty characters unique to each army (like Warrior Priests in the case of the Empire).

Core Troops. Core units represent the most common warriors in any army. They usually form the bulk of the force and will often bear the brunt of the fighting. Every army must field at least a few Core units.

Special Troops. These are the best of the army's warriors as well as certain war machines or Charlots. These troops tend to have the best arms and armor and are available only in limited numbers.

Rare Troops. Rare troops are so called, because they are very scarce compared to ordinary warriors. This category includes uncommon monsters, unusual war machines, and unique units of extraordinary power.

Troops are categorized into Core, Special, and Rare units. The number of each type of unit available depends on the army's points value as indicated on the chart below.

Army Points Value	Core Units	Special Units	Rare Units
Less than 2,000	2+	0-3	0-1
2,000 or more	3+	0-4	0-2
3,000 or more	4+	0-5	0-3
4,000 or more	5+	0-6	0-4
Each +1,000	+1 minimum	+0-1	+0-1

In some cases, other limitations may apply to a particular kind of unit, and these are specified in the Warhammer Armies books. For example, the Furies entry in the Hordes of Chaos Army book lists 0-1, meaning that you can have a maximum of one of these units in your army, regardless of its points size.

BEASTS OF CHAOS

Riding at the head of the column, Captain Schmidt cursed his bad luck and scanned the still forest for signs of trouble. Like a clerk checking off his inventory, Schmidt ran down his list of troubles: the merchant convoy was late on its journey from Middenheim to Hochland; he and his men were in a particularly black part of the Drakwald forest; and the air was bitterly cold, making the trek even more unpleasant. To make things bleaker still, small flurries of snow fell from an ever-darkening sky.

Rising above the growing wind, the stamp of horses, and the huddled talk of worried merchants, a horn braved from the forests, its unwholesome sound echoing through the woods. To the front, Schmidt could pick out dark figures working their way quickly through the forest. From the rear of the column came the sounds of steel on steel, panicked shouts, and the bestial grunts of inhuman opponents. There was no time to set up a formation, and already the foe was among the horses and baggage.

"Beastmen ambush! Draw your swords and form up on the road," shouted Captain Schmidt. Something immense was hurtling through the forest, uprooting great trees, and cracking through vast branches as it came.

This Pestigor unit by White Dwarf Graphic Designer John Shaffer took top honors at the 2003 Stuff Golden Demon competition

Deep within the dark heart of the most twisted and dangerous forests of the Old World reside the countless hordes of Beastmen, the true children of Chaos. These wild herds are made up of beast-headed and bloodthirsty creatures. Striking without warning, the barbarous beasts are a plague on the civilized world. Who knows what evil eyes watch from the dark woods, and who knows when the next murderous raid will be launched?

Fighting Style

The Beasts of Chaos form a varied army with some powerful (and disturbing) units at its disposal. With fearsome abilities in close combat and few missile troops, the goal of every Beasts of Chaos army is to close quickly with the enemy. Special Ambush rules and deployment allow some units to enter from any table edge — always a worrying factor for your opponent. However, even if the Beasts of Chaos are not advancing upon flanks or rear, the army moves quickly (Movement 5 at the worst!) and, with the Raiders special rule, may easily navigate through terrain without penalty. You can't hide behind terrain or in the woods against an army that flows through scenery as quickly as the Beasts of Chaos do. Once in combat, the Beasts of Chaos are tough and are supported by a hard-hitting and gruesome creatures like Chaos Trolls, Centigors, Minotaurs, Dragon Ogres, and more. Swift Tuskgor Chariots and Warhounds of Chaos are ideal for menacing flanks, or they can be the first to charge for frontal assaults.

Collecting a Beasts of Chaos Army

For players intent on building a Beasts of Chaos army, the best starting place is a Beast Herd. Not only does this unit fulfill one of the minimum number of Core troops for an army, but Beast Herds are also the mainstay of the army. For additional Core choices, players may choose from Warhounds of Chaos (speedy flanking units), Tuskgor Chariots (very hard-hitting), or a Bestigor Herd (limited to the number of Beast Herds). Larger Beasts of Chaos armies will also want more Beast Herds, as the more of these invaluable troops you have, the more that can Ambush. The other requirement, besides Core troops, is a leader. Beasts of Chaos may go with Beastmen Lords or Heroes, Doombulls (a Minotaur Hero), or Beastmen Shamans.

When enlarging a Beasts of Chaos force, there are a number of fantastic options. Centigors are fast and make ideal flanking units. Small but brutish units of Chaos Trolls, Chaos Ogres, Dragon Ogres, and Minotaurs can all deliver potent and relatively speedy charges. The ancient Dragon Ogre Shaggoth is extremely points-heavy but is its own maelstrom of destructive and Terror-causing power. Chaos Giants may be selected, and Spawn make interesting and Unbreakable options as well.

There are many options and ways to tailor the Beasts of Chaos for your specific tactical needs, so sound the Brayhorn and gather your warherd.

Joe Hill took home top honors for the Warhammer Single Miniature in the 2003 UK Golden Demon Competition with this Beastman Shaman

The army shown here is a 1,000-point force. This army is a good indication of where to start if you are looking to collect a Beasts of Chaos army. It consists of a Wargor, a Battle Standard Bearer, two 20-strong Beast Herds, 20 Pestigors, 10 Warhounds of Chaos, and 2 Chaos Spawns.

This 80-page rulebook contains background, painting and modelling tips, and complete rules for fielding an army comprised solely of Beasts of Chaos. This valuable book is also a supplemental guide to Warhammer Armies: Hordes of Chaos.

While Beastmen can be mutated into other forms depending on the power of Chaos they're devoted to, there's always a need for Truegors (the name for Beastmen with no further mutations) in any Beasts of Chaos army. And if you're looking to assemble a herd of cloven-hoofed minions of the dark gods, the best way to start out is with the Chaos Beastmen Regiment boxed set. It contains enough plastic bits to make 20 Beastmen, and they can either be equipped with a hand weapon and a shield or go completely aggressive with two hand weapons. Either way, you'll be on your way to an army in no time flat.

PAINTING BEASTMEN FLESH

Begin with a Bestial Brown undercoat. Paint and drybrush the fur in your desired colors. Next, mix up a 75/25 mix of Bestial Brown and Bleached Bone. Apply this mix over the majority of the skin but leave a slight amount of the Bestial Brown showing through in the most recessed areas. For the next highlight make a 50/50 mix of Bestial Brown and Bleached Bone and apply the highlight a bit more sparingly than the previous coat. The final highlight is a 25/75 mix of Bestial Brown and Bleached Bone. This highlight should be applied only to the most raised ridges and pronounced muscles.

Apply a basecoat of a 50/50 mix of Liche Purple and Tanned Flesh. This basecoat will yield an interesting color for your flesh. Apply a highlight of straight Tanned Flesh. Leave the basecoat color in the most recessed areas. Apply a second highlight of straight Dwarf Flesh. Again, make sure a hint of the previous highlight color shows on the flesh areas. Apply the final highlight of Elf Flesh on top of the Dwarf Flesh you just painted. Paint thin lines to suggest musculature and blend the highlight color on the larger areas (like pectoral muscles/shoulders) for added realism.

Start with a Chaos Black undercoat. The first highlight should be a 50/50 mix of Scorched Brown and Codex Grey. Add more Codex Grey for successive highlights. The final highlight should be straight Codex Grey. This approach will produce dramatic shading that will look great on the tabletop.

PAINTING HORNS

Here's a rather quick way to paint horns. All three methods discussed here begin with a Chaos Black undercoat. Begin by drybrushing the entire model Scorched Brown. Next, paint the horns Bubonic Brown. Apply a Chestnut Ink wash over the horns to give depth. Paint Bubonic Brown on the raised parts of the horns. Highlight with Bleached Bone on the tips of the raised areas.

This method takes a more time but has an attractive, rich appearance. Drybrush the entire model Scorched Brown. Paint the horns Bestial Brown but leave the recessed areas dark. Mix up equal parts of Bestial Brown and Bubonic Brown and paint the raised areas. Add Bleached Bone to your mixture from step 2 and paint the raised areas. Highlight with Bleached Bone on the tips of the horns.

For cracked, weathered horns, try this method. Drybrush the model Scorched Brown. Paint the horns Bestial Brown. Decide where your cracks will be. They can be put anywhere except for raised areas. Follow your pattern with Bubonic Brown but leave a small amount of Bestial Brown showing. Highlight the Bubonic Brown areas with Bleached Bone.

MODELING FLESHY BANNERS OUT OF PUTTY

Roll chunks of green stuff into cylinders, place them inside a plastic bag, and smash them flat between two books. Next, take a hobby knife and segment the surface so it appears like pieces of flesh sewn together. Drawing lines with repeated stippling motions will yield the best results.

After the putty has dried, remove the flattened pieces of green stuff and draw out your banner shape with a magic marker. Use the lines as a guide and cut out the shape with a hobby knife.

To attach, drill holes through the banners into the banner pole with a pin vise. Glue a section of paper clip to the banner pole, put some super glue on the back of the banner near the hole, then slip the banner over the paper clip.

Painting the flesh sections different shades will help strengthen the patchwork appearance. Runes, markings, and hand prints can then be painted inside of each section for an extra level of detail.

CONVERTING CHAOS CENTIGORS

Begin by snipping the buckler forearm off of the Centigor's left side behind the wristband. Next, cut the forearm from a left arm off of the plastic Beastmen sprue. Pin the arm in place and smooth the join with modeling putty.

Simply glue a plastic Beastmen shield to the plastic arm. You can leave the shield off until painting is complete. The shield should hide any rough cutting done to remove the Centigor buckler arm in the previous step.

Kroot accessories are great additions to your Centigors. The knives in particular are an easy way to model the throwing axe upgrade available to the unit.

An example of a completed conversion.

BUILDING A HERDSTONE

Begin by gluing three equal-sized pieces of insulation foam together with white glue. Toothpicks pushed through the layers should hold the pieces together while the glue dries.

When the glue dries, shape the foam with a hobby knife. Cut away from yourself and change the direction of your cuts often to make an interesting shape.

Glue the foam to a foamcore base and fill the gaps with spackle. To simulate rocky texture, paint the piece with textured paint and then drybrush the herdstone with your colors of choice. Greys work well.

Adorn the base of your herdstone with trophies, skulls, weapons, and other bits. You may want to paint these separately and then glue them on after you've painted the herdstone. For added detail, you could paint runes and hand prints along the bottom of the herdstone to represent the devotional markings Beastmen would make on their monolith.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH BEASTS IN CHARGE

- A Use the Ambush rule to get your Beasts behind war machines, archers, Thunderers, or the like, and then go nuts behind enemy lines. If you have a really fast unit (such as Warhounds – shown in the Hordes of Chaos section – or Centigors), you can line up an Ambushing unit to sandwich an enemy between two of your regiments. Warhounds can also help negate enemy rank bonuses.
- B Run a unit of Warhounds of Chaos next to a hard-hitting unit of Gors or Bestigors. When you get close to the enemy, single out a unit you do not want to engage with your heavy hitters. Use the Warhounds' movement to place them in front of the enemy, while the Gors or Bestigors aim themselves toward your target.
- C A Bray-Shaman with the Staff of Darkoth, a Power Stone (to help cast the Wild Call), and the Lore of Shadows can march 10", cast Steed of Shadows to move another 20" toward the enemy, and then help an Ambushing unit get the charge right from the start with the Wild Call. This combination can be a little tricky to use but difficult to defeat.
- D The Foe-render upgrade for Gor and Bestigor units is invaluable and gains you a bonus in both Attacks and Leadership for the unit. As Unit Champions go, few are more potent than the Foe-render. Thus, you can gleefully challenge away (as long as you're not facing a real monster of a character)! Don't forget to take advantage of this impressive Champion and challenge as often as possible, if you think you can win.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST BEASTS OF CHARGE

- A Targeting the General is a great idea if there are Ambushing units around. If you can kill the General before he sounds the Brayhorn, all the units waiting around to Ambush your rear lines are considered destroyed!
- B The Beasts of Chaos list is very versatile but for the most part, contains lots of tough troops with little armor. Massed ranged fire (arrows or blackpowder weapons) can have a great impact on the Beasts' ability to hurt you, as will war machines. Nevertheless, perhaps the best tactic you can use against the Beastmen is to avoid fighting on their terms – shoot from range, attack the flanks and rear whenever you can, and remember that their Leadership isn't all that high either. Even light missile fire from bows and longbows works well against hordes with Ungors in them.
- C Judicious use of Dispel Scrolls can counter the Bray-Shaman's spellcasting. You can also position skirmishers to try and anticipate Ambushing units.
- D In combat against Beast units with a Foe-render, be sure to allocate an attack on the charge to try and eliminate the Unit Champion. Destroying this model as soon as possible is good for enemies of the Beastmen. If the Foe-render falls, the unit's Leadership and its number of attacks will be reduced.

BRETONNIANS

Baron Pierre d'Artaud's heart swelled with pride as the various Knights of the Realm gathered under his war banner. These noble and honorable warriors were duty-bound to defend this land. They had heeded his warning of the invasion and had mustered from the surrounding villages and keeps. If the invading Orcs were to enter this realm, they would do so here where the hills opened up into fertile farmland. And here is where the Baron's forces would meet them.

The morning breeze rippled multicolored heraldry, and the bright pennants danced in the wind. Two dozen knights were forming up into three equal-sized units. On the flank, the young Knights Errant paced, impatient for the day's glory. It was with less pride that the Baron's eyes fell upon the Men-at-Arms, although they still displayed the honor of their masters in their house livery and stout shields. Still worse, gathering at the back, the Peasant Bowmen shuffled into place in the battle line, and the Baron thought their demeanor and carriage rather disheartening. The more he looked at the Bowmen, the more the Baron felt quite sure that some of these same scruffy men were the ones who had been pilfering game from his lands.

However, this disdain soon passed. Their trespasses were forgiven, for they too had answered the summons to battle. No one could invade Bretonnia and live to tell the tale. Today was not a day for recriminations, but for glory.

Bretonnia is a human realm second only in size to her eastern neighbor, the Empire. Bretonnia is most famous for the quality and nobility of her Knights, and indeed, these powerful warriors form the basis of most Bretonnian armies. While the manners, grace, and gallantry of the Knights are legendary, so too are the ignorance and general dirtiness of the common peasants and simple farmers.

Fighting Style

Not surprisingly, a Bretonnian army is almost always organized around its units of Knights. These powerful units are fast and hard-hitting and have an armor save that is the envy of almost every other army in the game. A Bretonnian army wants to send as many Knights galloping toward the foe as it can. Some enemies may have a few war machines, magic items, or elite troops that can regularly dent the heavy armor of the Knights, but few foes can field enough of these Knight-slayers to account for more than a unit or two. So take more than a few units! Grail Knights are the hardest hitting. Pegasus Knights are the most mobile, and the Knights of the Realm and Knights Errant cost the fewest points. Protected by the Lady of the Lake and their sacred vows, Bretonnian Knights aim to ride over anything that dares to stand in front of them.

While the majority of the strike force is invariably made of Knights of some form, the Peasant Bowmen and Men-at-Arms also serve a useful (if secondary) purpose: Guarding flanks, peppering the enemy with missile fire, and the like are the roles of these more lowly warriors. Other more specialized units, like the Mounted Yeomen or the Battle Pilgrims with their Grail Reliquae, can perform admirably on the battlefield as well. And don't leave out the devastating peasant-crewed Field Trebuchet, which can give Bretonnia's foes something besides Knights to worry about. But remember, these non-Knight units can be useful, but they'll never replace a lance charge by a beautifully painted unit of Knights!

Collecting a Bretonnian Army

Core units are always the way to start collecting an army, and with Bretonnians that leaves you with quite a few choices. Knights are essential to any up-and-coming Bretonnian Duke, and most players will want a few of these valorous units at the minimum. There are many levels of Knights, each with its own advantages. Knights Errant are the unproven youth seeking to earn their honor in battle and are slightly lower in points cost but still a valuable unit. Knights of the Realm are more proven and have a higher Weapon Skill and Leadership value than the more Impetuous Knights Errant. As Knights Errant and Knights of the Realm are both Core choices, it is possible to field lots of these potent units.

After filling up a few Core choices, many choices remain. Questing Knights are harder-hitting still, and at the top of the chart are the mighty Grail Knights, whose thunderous charge can break any enemy unit. One unit of Pegasus Knights may also be selected, and this unit adds the mobility of flying to the awesome offensive powers of the Knights! Leave room (but just a little) for some supporting cast of Men-at-Arms and Peasant Bowmen. They are sometimes effective, and they'll make your Knights look even better!

PAINTING LEATHER ARMOR

While Bretonnian Lords and Knights may have very ornate and well-crafted suits of armor, Bretonnian Peasants have rather poor-quality protection. They may have armor of canvas, heavy cloth, or leather stitched or quilted in a pattern. Since the Peasants' masters usually provide their underlings with arms and armor you could choose to paint your Peasants' armor in the Lord's colors. Otherwise, here are two ways to paint brown leather armor.

Begin with a Chaos Black undercoat (Left). Paint a basecoat of Dark Flesh on the jacket (Right). Paint a basecoat of Vermin Brown. Basecoat both yokes with Scorched Brown.

(Left) Highlight with a 50/50 mix of Blood Red and Dark Flesh. (Right) Wash the armor with Black Ink. Highlight the yokes with a mix of Bleached Bone and Scorched Brown.

STEP 3

PAINTING SHIELDS

By painting a common motif on your army's shields, you can tie your Bretonnian models together. Almost every model in the army can have a shield, and those who do not will often have some sort of icon or trinket that resembles a small shield. As such, you can use a common shield motif to bring your army together. Here are some tips for painting Bretonnian shields.

EXAMPLE 1

Step 1. Prime the shield with Skull White spray primer and paint one half of the shield Golden Yellow and the other half Snot Green. Paint the Golden Yellow side first. If you make a mistake, Snot Green will cover over the Golden Yellow easier than Golden Yellow will cover Snot Green.

Step 2. Highlight the edge of the green side with a 50/50 mix of Snot Green and Scorpion Green. Highlight the edge of the yellow side with a 50/50 mix of Golden Yellow and Skull White.

Step 3. Apply fine highlights of Scorpion Green over the green and Skull White over the yellow.

Step 4. Finally, paint the metal rim of the shield Chaos Black and then Chainmail. Leave a small line of Chaos Black showing to provide some definition between the face and the rim of the shield. Finally, add heraldic devices.

EXAMPLE 2

Step 1. Here's another way to paint a shield with different colors. Start with a shield primed with Skull White. Paint the top half with Blood Red and the bottom half with Enchanted Blue.

Step 2. Highlight the red area with Blazing Orange and the blue area with a 75/25 mix of Enchanted Blue and Skull White.

Step 3. Add fine highlights of Fiery Orange for the red half of the shield and a 50/50 mix of Enchanted Blue and Skull White to the blue half of the shield.

Step 4. Paint the rim of the shield Chaos Black and then Chainmail. Leave a small line of Chaos Black showing to provide some definition between the face and the rim of the shield. Next paint the heraldic device. For a more complex or larger device, draw your design on a piece of paper first or even on the shield itself to get an idea of how you want to design and then paint the symbol.

PAINTING A PEGASUS

Pegasus Knights are powerful elite troops that appear in many Bretonnian armies. However, because of the complexity of the model, some painters may be intimidated by the Pegasus itself, which requires a greater level of attention than a Knight's horse. Below, we detail an easy way to paint the Pegasus model.

STEP 1

After priming the model white, paint the skin, hair, and leathers Codex Grey. Don't attach the Knight to the Pegasus until both have been painted.

STEP 2

Highlight with Fortress Grey by painting the raised areas of the Pegasus skin. Use Fortress Grey to drybrush the wings, tail, mane, and hair above the hooves.

STEP 3

Blend a 50/50 mix of Fortress Grey and Skull White and highlight the model in the same way. Paint the skin and drybrush the textured areas.

STEP 4

Use Skull White for the last highlights. Paint the mane and cloth armor the same way you would on a normal steed, though Pegasus Knights will tend to have more elaborate and ornate heraldry.

BRETONNIAN HERALDRY

Probably the most visually striking element of a Bretonnian army is its colorful and diverse heraldry. Shown below is an example of one player's nontraditional take on the heraldry of a Knightly hero and how servants of the Knight would display the hero's heraldry.

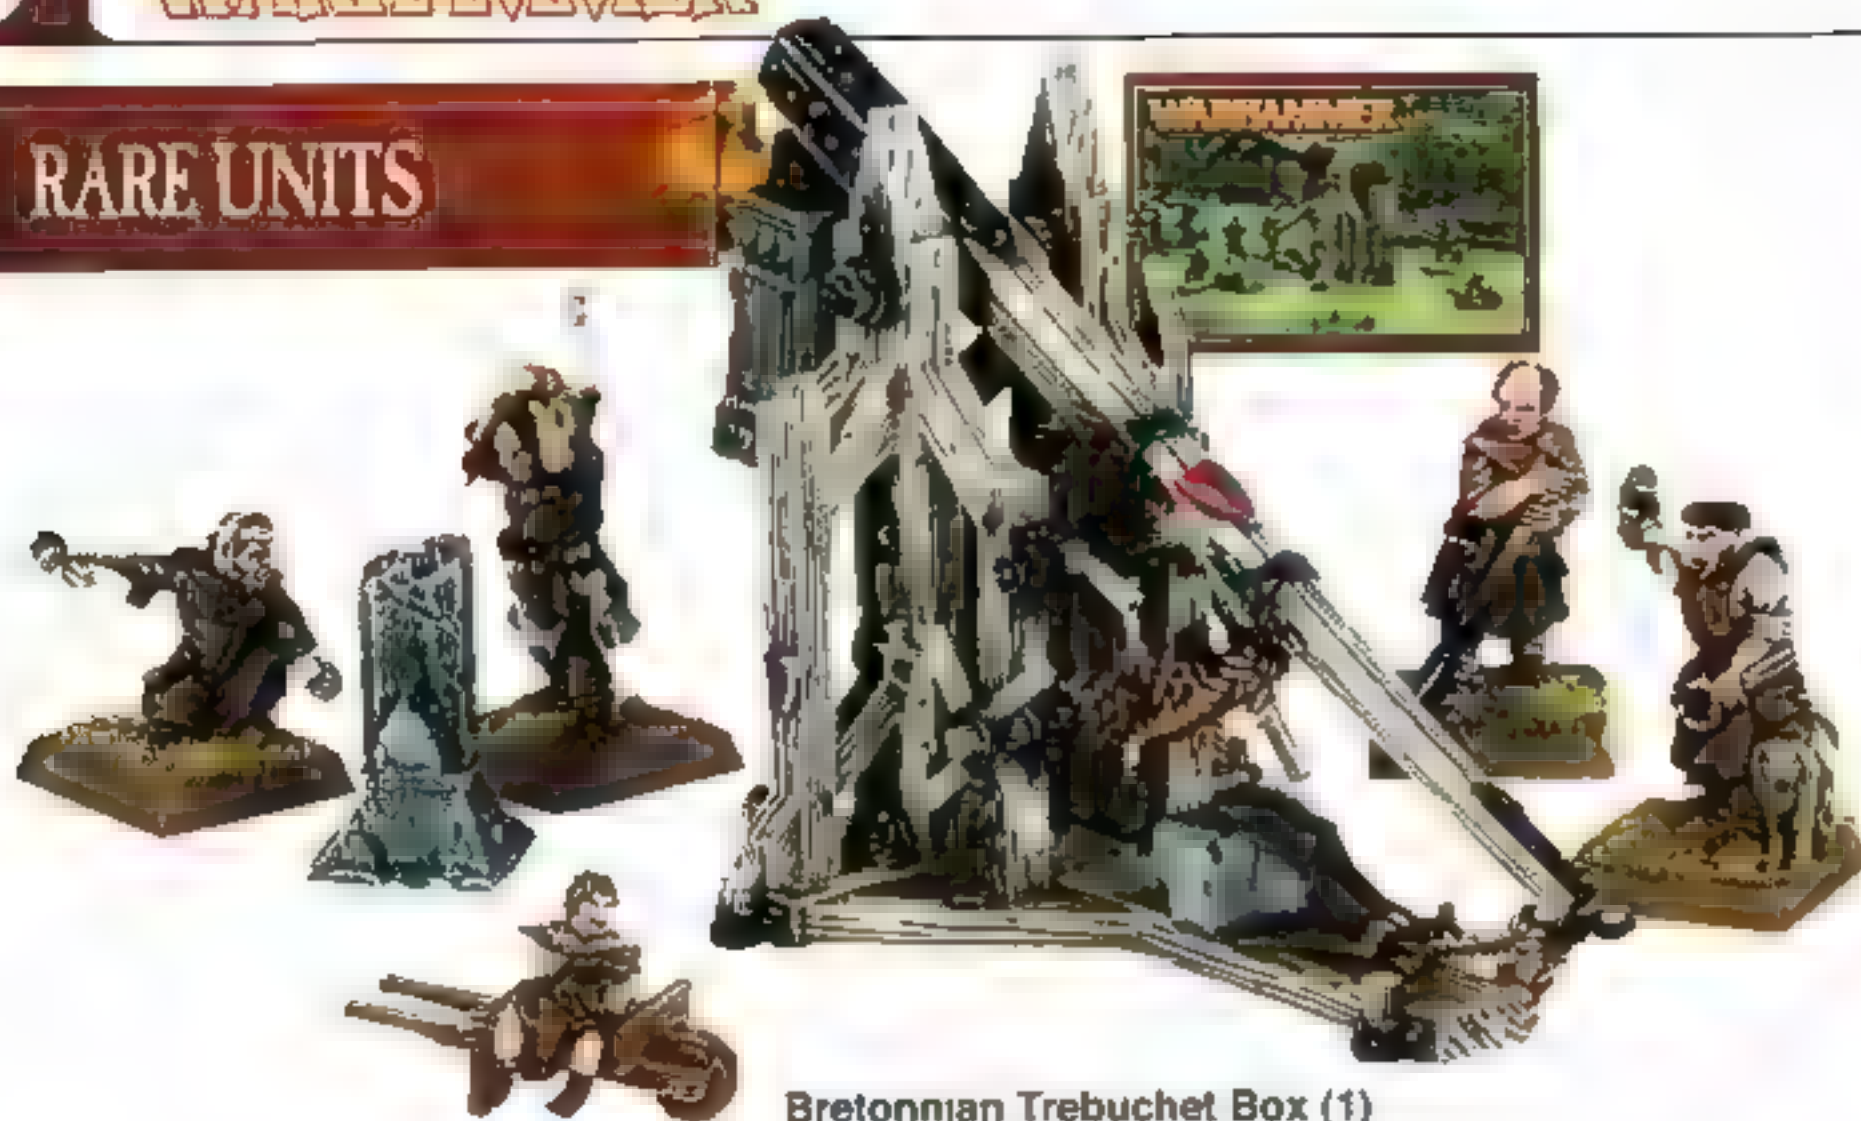

This hero represents a Hermit Knight, a solitary guardian of a grail chapel whose charge is, appropriately, a key. The field colors of green and blue represent the forest of the Knight's realm and the lake by which the shrine resides, respectively. The checkerboard pattern was added to represent the unstable mental health of the Knight, which is undoubtedly the result of years of seclusion. The Knight's shield has been decorated further with devotional parchments and a resting messenger bird, which is present in case the Knight should have to send a message to civilization.

The Knight above and the Man-at-Arms to the right serve the Hermit Knight and thus display a simplified version of his heraldry. Using similar heraldry on your models will help unify your army.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH BRETONNIANS

- A. A Bretonnian Lord with the Virtue of Confidence, the Armor of Agilulf, and the Gauntlet of the Duel makes for a fearsome duelist. This Lord can challenge nearly any enemy character and come out victorious. The Gauntlet ensures that no challenge can be refused, the Virtue allows for rerolls to hit and to Wound, and the Armor gives the Lord a Weapon Skill of 10 (which means that he will hit almost every foe on a 3+). Duelist Lords work best when they tear apart the enemy champions and characters in challenges and lend the full overkill bonus to combat resolution.
- B. A unit of Knights of the Realm led by a Paladin Battle Standard Bearer with the Banner of the Lady and the Virtue of Discipline can be nearly unstoppable! The Banner of the Lady prevents enemy units from claiming bonuses to combat resolution from ranks, while the Virtue of Discipline similarly prevents them from taking the bonus for outnumbering. The Knights, of course, are potent enough to add plenty of combat resolution themselves from their ranks and the Wounds they cause in combat!
- C. A unit of Questing Knights with the Valorous Standard close to the Battle Standard Bearer is the next best thing to being Unbreakable. Questing Knights are normally able to reroll failed Psychology Tests, and the proximity of the Battle Standard will allow them to reroll Break Tests as well. The Valorous Standard gives them the best two dice of 3D6 for any Leadership roll.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST BRETONNIANS

- A. A duelist Bretonnian Lord can be difficult to deal with, but some ways to handle this particular character include tying him up with delay tactics. Swarms, Unbreakable units, or "tarpit" units of Stubborn troops can keep this Lord away from your more valuable champions and characters. Alternatively, you can face him with a unit in which there is no one to accept a challenge!
- B. This unit of Knights has a lot of expensive abilities. Hitting it with an Unbreakable or Stubborn unit minimizes the impact of those abilities! Additionally, you can hit a unit of Knights like this one with war machines and magic missiles to thin down the numbers to a manageable level.
- C. These Questing Knights may be very brave but they will automatically flee when outnumbered by a Fear-causing unit. Anything in your army that causes Fear or Terror can still have an impact on these Knights – try to use a large unit to swamp into the Knights and see them off handsomely.

DARK ELVES

Far across the Great Ocean to the west of the Old World lies the vast continent of Naggaroth. It is a harsh and rugged wilderness above which dark clouds gather to unleash terrible storms upon the land. Beneath the massive mountain ranges lie a huge network of underground caverns through which the Dark Elves sail their dread Black Arks to launch surprise raids on the distant kingdoms of the Old World and further afield to Nippon and Cathay. But the principle target for Dark Elf invasion is the magical isle of Ulthuan, the majestic homeland of all Elvenkind, from which the Dark Kindred were exiled millennia ago.

Long ago, the Elven realm was split in a horrendous and merciless civil war. The Dark Elves, or Druchii as they called themselves, had their kingdoms destroyed and so retreated to the lands of Naggaroth. From these bleak and desolate lands, the Dark Elves still plot revenge against their fair High Elven cousins and dispatch their black armadas to take slaves and wreak havoc across the whole of the Warhammer world.

Fighting Style

The Dark Elves are a fast and highly skilled race and may field many specialized elite units in their army. There is nothing a Dark Elf army does poorly, except perhaps fighting in long drawn-out battles of attrition. With excellent Ballistic Skill and the dreaded Crossbowmen and Reaper Bolt Throwers, Dark Elves can wear down or even wipe out many enemy units through missile fire. Yet most Dark Elf players choose a more direct method of slaughter, that is, using elite troops like Witch Elves, Cold One Knights, or Executioners to slice through enemy ranks. Harpies, Shades, and Dark Riders are ideal at slowing down enemy advances or in joining in an attack by hitting the enemy's sides or rear

This Dark Elf Repeater Bolt Thrower was painted by Noel Myer, a 2004 Chicago Golden Demon winner.

Collecting a Dark Elf Army

Players who wish to start collecting a Dark Elf army would do well to begin with some Core troops. This is the best place to start, as not only will such units fulfill the army requirements, but two Core selections will form the natural center of a player's growing army. Dark Elf warriors may be equipped with spears or with repeater crossbows. Defensive-minded Dark Elf players will want lots of both spearmen and crossbowmen, while seriously offensive minded players may wish to add other Core selections like the Fast Cavalry Dark Riders or a few units of Corsairs.

Dark Elf generals looking to expand their armies are presented with a surprising number of wicked options. Small units of Shades can act as Scouts ahead of the main force, while Reaper Bolt Throwers are meant to sit back and rain death upon the foe from afar. Although unarmored, Witch Elves are subject to Frenzy and use Poisoned Attacks. Furthermore, the Cauldron of Blood, a powerful and evil artifact, can drive all Dark Elves, particularly Witch Elves, into an increased state of battle fury. The hitting power of Cold One Knights is undeniable, as are elite units like the Executioners or Black Guard, Cold One Chariots or massive War Hydras are also great options to put some hurt onto your foe. Character models allow more chances for Dark Elf personality to seep into an army with choices like Assassins, Sorceresses, and Beastmasters.

Prepare the slaves for sacrifice and remember to show no mercy.

These Harpies were painted by Scott Goldstein for his Dark Elf Army, which won him the Players' Choice and Best Appearance awards at the 2003 Seattle Grand Tournament.

Deploying the warriors with spears in the front of the army to prepare for hand-to-hand combat allows the crossbowmen in the back to shoot away at the enemy.

This 80-page rulebook contains painting and modeling guides, background, and the full rules for the Dark Elves. Using this book, you can build a mighty legion and destroy all who challenge you.

Much of the Dark Elf army is raised from the population of the cities. Among the ranks march wives and sisters, beautiful but deadly maidens who fight with the fury of Daemons. Some prefer the repeater crossbow, while others prefer the long heavy-bladed spear. Each Dark Elf Warrior Regiment Box includes enough bits to field a unit of spearmen or crossbowmen 16 strong.

Once you have your Core units completed, add some specialist units such as a regiment of Executioners.

After starting your Dark Elf army, you may want to add a few specialist units to complement your current Core units. The model shown above to the right is from a regiment of Executioners. These Dark Elves are elite dealers of death, wielding custom long blades that can deliver a Killing Blow to their enemies. Other units, such as Witch Elves and the fearful Black Guard, are also good choices to complement your Core units. If speed is essential to your army, you can also boost your ranks with Chariots and Cold One Knights.

PAINTING DARK ELF BANNERS

Here are some examples of Dark Elf banner imagery you can create for your army. First prime the banner and paint the background and highlight with your colors of choice.

STEP 1

Paint the design of the runes (left) with thinned Chaos Black. For the serpent (right), paint an S-shape first, then carefully add in the tongue, horns, and spines on its back.

STEP 2

Use thinned Skull White to complete the runes. Paint the serpent with several layers of thinned Blood Red. Take care to leave a small black line around the edges on both.

STEP 3

Highlight the serpent with thinned Blazing Orange.

STEP 4

Highlight the serpent with Golden Yellow. Add a small black dot to suggest an eye. Adventurous painters might want to try adding a fully painted eye to their banners.

PAINTING COLD ONES

The scales and skin on the Cold Ones come in a variety of colors. Here is an example of a green and brown color scheme that you can try. For more color schemes and ideas, check out the Colors of War pages at the back of the Dark Elf section.

STEP 1

Prime with Skull White spray and paint the model with a slightly thinned layer of Snot Green. Wash the model with Dark Angels Green.

STEP 2

Paint highlights of Snot Green all over the model.

STEP 3

Paint the scales Cataphan Green. It's a matter of choice whether you paint the scales individually and leave the skin color showing in between the scales, or paint the entire area the color of the scales. We chose to do a combination of both. Our scale color covers the scales and skin at the top of the Cold One. At the bottom of the model, the scale color covers only the scales.

STEP 4

Apply a 75/25 mix of Cataphan Green and Camo Green as the first highlight on the scales.

STEP 5

Paint a final highlight of 25/75 Cataphan Green and Camo Green on the edges of the scales.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH DARK ELVES

- A. The Dark Elves can create an army with an insane amount of maneuverability. A Lord on a Black Dragon and a Beasimaster on a Manticore give you two Terror-causing Flyers, while Dark Riders, Shades, and Harpies can all add to the number of units you can zip around the battlefield. Some opponents (e.g., Dwarfs and artillery-heavy Empire armies) can find a Dark Elf army like this one extremely difficult to fight. Few other armies are as mobile.
- B. Executioners can take on many opponents thanks to their Killing Blow ability. Even tough opponents like Chaos Warriors will fall when the great weapons of the Executioners begin to swing. Consider placing these Druchii at the center of your lines where you can quickly maneuver to engage enemy units.
- C. If you deploy the Cauldron of Blood in a forward position, you can extend the range of its Red Fury ability to cover most of the battlefield.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST DARK ELVES

- A. Deploying your army defensively in a corner is one way to counter a mobile army. Just hunker down, sit tight, shoot as much as possible, and swarm the Dark Elves when they reach your lines.
- B. As long as the Executioners don't get to charge, they'll be swinging last due to their great weapons. In addition, shooting can reduce the numbers of these fairly expensive models before you have to deal with them in combat.
- C. The Cauldron of Blood is a fairly expensive proposal. It's a 205-point unit that won't be fighting unless you charge it. Models with high Toughness can generally ignore its effects and concentrate on killing the rest of the Dark Elf army. Another tactic is to deploy in the corner and avoid the effects of the Cauldron's Red Fury ability.

DOGS OF WAR

Special Offer Only Section (excluding
Rugard's Armored Ogres, Golgag's Mercenary
Ogres, and Mengu Manhide's Manflayers)

Captain Pugnio watched the battle in the valley below with a certain amount of cool professionalism. His force, which amounted to several hardened units of Pikemen, a smattering of Crossbowmen, and a particularly ferocious group of Ogres, had offered its services to both sides in the fighting below.

The Dwarfs had been too penny-pinching cheap and were hoping to win the battle against the ratmen by themselves and keep their stubby little hands on all their gold! The Skaven, on the other side, had been shrewd negotiators until it turned out that all they had for trade at the moment were glowing green rocks – certainly of no use to my treasure-seeking fighters, thought Captain Pugnio.

Still, if the Dwarfs suddenly gave the signal (by waving a red flag), then Pugnio's Dogs of War were hired. If the Skaven gave the signal (by waving a blue flag), then also, Pugnio's lads were being paid to fight. As the battle swayed back and forth in the valley below, Pugnio was fairly certain that the third option was going to be the best. Let those fools whittle each other down and then fall on them and destroy them all. The only problem, thought Captain Pugnio, is where to sell those cursed glowing rocks.

The Warhammer world is a violent and turbulent place, where realms are constantly beset by attacks. The Dogs of War are literally roving armies for hire, self-sword mercenaries who will risk their lives for profit! Some of these Dogs of War are merely cutthroat bandits, but others are professional fighters from faraway and exotic lands. Tilea, one of the kingdoms of the Old World, is especially famous for producing mercenaries, although bands of warriors come from many races and countless realms from around the Warhammer world.

Using Dogs of War or Building a Dogs of War Army

The Dogs of War are unique in that a player may build an entire Dogs of War army or just add a unit or two of the mercenaries to bolster an existing force. There are such an amazing selection of both troop types and models to choose from that we recommend this army to more experienced Warhammer players. Veteran players will find it challenging to get the most out of such a disparate group of individual units.

Players with existing armies that want to throw a monkey wrench into their foe's plans should consider adding a unit of Dogs of War. Potent Regiments of Renown like Golgag's Ogres can be a nasty surprise when they turn up in your Empire army! Likewise, cannons, pikemen, cavalry, or missile troops for armies that can't normally field such weapons can shock your opponent into making bad moves!

Take a look at the Dogs of War Army List and Regiments of Renown options in the downloads available at <http://us.games-workshop.com/games/warhammer/gaming/dogsowar/default.htm>.

TERMINOLOGY

Terminology. "Dogs of War" is a generic term used to describe mercenaries. The Dogs of War army list is full of generic troop listings (like Pikemen or Ogres). "Regiments of Renown" is a phrase used to refer to famous or especially well known units (like Pirazzo's Lost Legion or Golgag's Ogres). It is possible to make an entire Dogs of War army without any Regiments of Renown, and likewise, a player can make an entire Dogs of War army with only Regiments of Renown. Existing armies may "hire" either (or both) generic Dogs of War or Regiments of Renown to join their cause.

Dogs of War Disclaimer

The Dogs of War army does not have a current Army book but does have a well prepared army list available at <http://us.games-workshop.com/games/warhammer/gaming/dogsowar/default.htm>.

This army list allows players either to field an entire army of Dogs of War or to "hire" a few units to join an existing army. There are some restrictions (e.g., Dwarfs can never fight alongside greenskins), which are fully described in the downloads.

PAINTING WOOD GRAIN

By using the following techniques, you'll be able to re-create the look of wood grain on the Galloper Gun and more. We recommend using your finest detail brush and thinning your paint to make the process easier.

STEP 1. After priming black, paint Scorched Brown onto the wood detail. Take care to leave small black lines between the wood grain.

STEP 2. Paint slightly thinned Dark Flesh on top of the Scorched Brown. Again, take care so that the small black lines and the base color show.

STEP 3. Highlight with Bestial Brown. Make sure to leave black lines and some of the base colors showing.

STEP 4. Finally, apply very thin Bubonic Brown lightly as a final highlight.

PAINTING LEOPOLD'S GEM

Leopold's Company wears leopard skins as cloaks. The base color can be achieved by mixing yellows, oranges, and browns. Follow the steps below for colorful leopard skins and accurate spotting for your entire regiment.

STEP 1

Prime the model black and then apply a 1/1/1 mix of Golden Yellow, Blazing Orange, and Bubonic Brown to the leopard skin.

STEP 2

Apply a 2/1/1 mix of Golden Yellow, Blazing Orange, and Bubonic Brown as the first highlight on all the high areas. Don't worry about trying to highlight each sculpted hair on the skin, because the spots will make such highlights irrelevant.

STEP 3

Add more Golden Yellow to the mix for the next highlight.

STEP 4

Paint straight Golden Yellow onto the very edges of the highlights. As you can see, this step makes the skin appear very vibrant.

STEP 5

Paint black spots of varying size all over the skin. The spots should get smaller and fade into obscurity on the paws, head, and tail.

STEP 6

Apply a 25/75 mix of Chaos Black and Codex Grey to highlight the spots. Simply dab the color into the middle of each spot.

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH DOGS OF WAR

- A. Pikemen are a great addition to a Dogs of War army – they fight in 4 ranks, strike first, and get +1 Strength against charging enemy cavalry units, chariots, or monsters. If you are facing a cavalry-heavy army (such as High Elves or Bretonnians) Pikemen regiments are an excellent way to go.
- B. Dogs of War Dwarfs are a heck of a buy. For 14 points each, you can get the toughest, bravest crossbowmen in the Warhammer world backed up by heavy armor and a shield.
- C. The Regiments of Renown are too numerous and varied to be listed here individually, but there are many that work very well for a Dogs of War army. Some, like the Giants of Albion, are available only to a Dogs of War army. Regiments of Renown not only add more troops to your forces, they also include Hero-level characters who do not take up a Hero slot in your army and some special rules or magic items of their own. All in all, it's gold well spent.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST DOGS OF WAR

- A. Pikemen can be outmaneuvered, and any attacks on the flanks or rear make a mockery of the pikes' special rules.
- B. Dogs of War Dwarfs may be an excellent buy, but they are still very slow. Shoot them with missile fire and outmaneuver them.
- C. If Regiments of Renown are messing with your battle plan, just remember that nearly any army (besides Bretonnians, that is) can take Regiments of Renown of its own! Fight 'fire with fire'!

DWARFS

No matter who charged – the Boyz, Boar Boyz, or even the huge Giant – nothing could break the Dwarfen center. Fragments of broken Orc units were scattered here and there, and many were in full retreat. Still, the army would escape, as there was no way those cursed beardslings could march over open ground before the Lobbers squished them to jelly.

Just at that moment, with a tremendous crash, part of the hillside slid away to reveal a dark tunnel. From out of the dust, making their way through the rubble, an angry unit of Dwarfs with great picks and fire in their eyes emerged into the light.

Shortly afterward, sitting atop the greenskin corpses and the smashed timbers of the war machines, Burek Ironhelm and his unit of Miners paused to take off their helmets and extinguish the candles affixed on top.

"We were almost too late," said Burek, while he lit his pipe. "I knew we were supposed to take the LEFT tunnel."

Dwarfs are well known for their short stature, shorter tempers, and long beards. It is often said (although rarely to their faces) that Dwarfs are as tough and unyielding as their mountainous homes. An ancient race, the Dwarfs once ruled the lands, but long gone are those glory days. Now, many centuries later, the Dwarfs have dwindled but still persevere. Undaunted and unforgiving to enemies of the past, the Dwarfs constantly struggle to rebuild and reclaim their kingdoms of yore.

Fighting Style

Dwarfs make doughty warriors, and their high Leadership, Armor, and Toughness make them determined troops who give ground only begrudgingly. Most Dwarf Generals place their trust in rock-hard infantry blocks, occasionally punctuated by Crossbowmen or Thunderers, as well as a few prized war machines. While all Dwarf Warriors are formidable, the center of the line is often held by elite units. Hammerers are the personal bodyguards of the King. Longbeards are battle-hardened veterans, and Ironbreakers are equipped with nearly impervious magic armor. Any of these units, particularly with the addition of a character or two, can break enemy charges as a rocky cliff breaks the surf. The Dwarfs might be worn down, but it's gonna take a while.

Dwarfs are relentless and seldom tire, but they are not fast. Knowing that they will not surprise and outmaneuver most enemies, veteran commanders often rely on defensive formations and the mutual support of infantry units. There are many variations, but in general the Dwarf way is to take the enemy's best charge, stand firm, and then unleash a furious counterstrike.

Collecting a Dwarf Army

Our best suggestion about beginning a Dwarf army is to start with your Core choices. As well as fulfilling any minimum requirements, a few Core units are the perfect center for an army, no matter how large you choose to build it. Dwarfs have plenty of Core choices but with the ability to upgrade to heavy armor and shield (with an impressive 3+ save in hand-to-hand combat), Warriors are a great start. For shooting, there is an age-old Dwarfen debate. Some favor the longer range of the Crossbowmen, while others prefer the better armor penetration of the Thunderers. Also, don't overlook the Scouting ability of Rangers and the amazing Underground Advance rule for Miners!

When players are looking to expand their armies, no Dwarf force should march out of the mountains to war without at least one of the superlative Infantry Special Units of Hammerers, Longbeards, or Ironbreakers. In addition to being a colorful unit to paint, Slayers make unbreakable anchors to secure a flank or battle line. As the Dwarfs are great builders and technically advanced, war machines often play a large role in Dwarfen battle plan. Choosing from Cannons, Bolt Throwers, Stone Throwers, Gyrocopters, Organ Guns, or Flame Cannons, Dwarfs have a plethora of destructive options. While employing no Wizards of their own, Dwarfs do have Runesmiths (great for defensive magic) and access to plenty of magical Dwarf Runes that may be used to upgrade weapons, armor, war machines, and more.

The history of the Warhammer world is rife with heroic stories of outnumbered Dwarfs holding out against superior numbers. It is now time for new Dwarf Generals to carve their names into legend.

GETTING STARTED

The Dwarf army is deployed for battle to take full advantage of its defensive capabilities. With solid units of Warriors and Ironbreakers to the fore and powerful artillery units in the rear, these stout soldiers can break even the most determined opponents.

This 32-page Army book contains painting and modeling guides, background, and the full rules for fielding an army of Dwarf warrior and their mighty war machines.

SLAYER TATTOOS

After you complete the painting on your Slayer model, it's time to add his tattoos. Tattoos can be anything – ferocious monsters, swirls, runes, and more. The only limit is your imagination.

STEP 1

Thin down some Chaos Black and use it to paint the tattoo carefully on his skin with a fine detail brush.

STEP 2

Fill the tattoo in with Ultramarines Blue. Take care to leave a black line around the edge. Note – if you don't want a black line border skip Step 1 and start here.

STEP 3

Carefully add a few thin lines of Ice Blue for the highlights on the tattoos.

PAINTING DWARF RUNES

Painting runes on Dwarf war machines can add a level of extra detail that makes the models stand out from other war machines on the table. Following are a few instructions on how to paint runes.

STEP 1

After painting the war machine, choose a large, reasonably flat area where it will be easy to paint the fine details of the rune. Select the rune that you want to paint from Warhammer Armies: Dwarfs. Paint the rune design in Chaos Black. Paint wide, almost exaggerated lines so that they can be easily painted over in the following steps.

STEP 2

For the next step, use a color of medium brightness such as Ultramarines Blue and trace the inside of the rune. Leave a bit of black on the outside of the rune to give it a bit of depth and make it stand out on the war machine.

STEP 3

Use a bright metal color such as Burnished Gold or Mithril Silver (Burnished Gold was used here). Apply a thin line through the center of the second color. This step makes your rune stand out from the rest of the machine and easier to see. Choose a color that contrasts with the metal of the machine. Since the barrel of this Cannon is a grey metallic color, bright gold was used to accent the rune.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH DWARFS

- A. Dwarfs have top-notch missile troops and artillery in spades. Dwarf Thunderers are some of the best missile troops in the game. They are excellent at short range and are just as good as Dwarf Warriors in combat. The use of runes can make unpredictable war machines a lot more reliable and deadly. Don't be afraid to load up on this stuff!
- B. Dwarf units tend to be small and thus can be vulnerable to large units of Fear-causing Undead. To combat them, stock up on runes and field Troll Slayers. Also, a few Runic Standards can negate the advantage of Fear. You can use the Master Rune of Fear (75 points). Also, the Rune of Courage makes a unit Immune to Psychology for 50 points. You can also use the same rune on a second banner along with the Rune of Battle (+1 to combat resolution for 25 points). Having two Standards with the Rune of Courage is allowed as long as one of them has a second Rune.
- C. The proper combination of runes can make a Dwarf Lord a very powerful opponent. Few other Lord-level characters can dish out or take as much damage, and you can find several rune combinations that can add a bewildering array of versatility to your Lord over several battles.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST DWARFS

- A. Dwarfs are slow and expensive and have neither great magic nor cavalry. Exploit these disadvantages as much as possible! Take fast moving units to outmaneuver the Dwarfs, outnumber them, and fry them with spells. If you have a regular Dwarf opponent, notice his patterns and come up with effective counters. If he never fields Runesmiths, it's magic time. If he deploys poorly, use lots of cheap fast troops to get the flank bonus and negate ranks. If he takes few war machines, take missile troops to shoot the Dwarfs to death.
- B. You will almost always get the charge against a Dwarf army, so make it count. Stack a unit of cavalry with a few heavily armed characters and head for the weak side (avoid Troll Slayers!) of the Dwarf line. With average rolling (and maybe an accompanying unit charging in the front) you should rout the unit, destroy them in the pursuit (Dwarfs roll 2D6-1 to determine flee distance) and slam into the next Dwarf unit. Dwarfs are slow to react – so father, rinse, and repeat.
- C. Dwarf players will often overinvest in their Lord-level characters. While such characters can be very powerful in hand-to-hand combat, they are also slow to maneuver and thus very easy to avoid. If you suspect (or, even better, can use magic items to ascertain for certain) that a Dwarf Lord or Hero is loaded with runes, avoid him like the plague and pick on the more vulnerable units instead.

THE EMPIRE

Master Engineer Gunther Hoffman tensed his grip on the telescope and resisted the urge to rap the youngest member of the cannon crew on the head. Instead, the Engineer attempted to put that energy to good use. "Why, young Heinrich, have I not bludgeoned you with my telescope for not loading the Great Cannon correctly?" asked Gunther sternly.

Heinrich pulled himself off the ground, where he had thrown himself after the gunpowder flash, and attempted to wipe his blackened face with his cap. The instructor leaned forward fruitlessly in anticipation of an answer. "Because..." Gunther suggested, hopelessly staring at the vapid young trainee. After a painfully long moment, the Engineer answered his own question. "Because it is a finely tuned instrument and must be handled with respect!" Gunther continued to stare down at the youngster and said, "You swab the barrel first, then load. Swab, then load. As you and the rest of the crew clean out the outhouses and stables, I think you should repeat that to yourselves." With that last command, Gunther signaled for the rest of the class to gather around. "This may be an Artillery School, and this may be a class, but some day, this training is going to save your life and maybe the whole of the Empire. Now repeat after me the loading procedures from the beginning."

The Empire is the largest and most powerful realm of Men in the Warhammer world. It is a sprawling domain that encompasses great mountains, mighty rivers, and vast cities. Its citizens and soldiers are as different and varied as the governing city-states and provinces that make up the Empire.

Fighting Style

Empire armies cannot match the numbers of a horde army like Skaven or Orcs & Goblins, nor can they match the hardened elites of a Chaos army or High Elf force. Instead, Empire Generals must rely on the same attributes that carved out such a large realm in the first place: infantry, cavalry, and artillery all used in a coordinated fashion.

Above: Mike Anderson made this First Knight of the Temugen Guard for the 2004 Storm of Chaos campaign.

Right: Mark Tait's Lathor Huss won third place in the 2003 UK Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition.

War machines can thin down a horde, reduce enemy elites, or blast gaping holes into a monster of any size. Infantry can hold up enemy elites, while smaller units use the special Detachments rule to countercharge and take the foe on several sides. Cavalry charges are reserved for particularly hardened foes, striking the killing blow, or devastating flank charges. A veteran Empire general will quickly analyze the threat against his forces and countermove to put his troops in the best position to win. Sometimes, this process involves playing defensively and shooting up enemy advances; sometimes, it means closing quickly with the foe and overwhelming him with multiple units. Knowing the strengths and weaknesses of your army and your opponent's force as well as using terrain to maximum advantage are what will bring further glory to the Empire.

Collecting an Empire Army

Core troops are the best place to begin when starting any army, and for Empire, that means a lot of choices. Blocks of infantry like Halberdiers, Spearmen, or Swordsmen can form an ideal center. Archers, Handgunners, and Crossbowmen will make useful Detachments to thin down the enemy. Free Companies are a low-points way to bulk out a force and, when used as a Detachment, can offer valuable support to better equipped units. The hard-striking and well-armed might of the Knightly Orders may also be selected as a Core unit, although Knights are sure to draw an inordinate amount of the enemy's firepower and wrath.

When expanding to a larger Empire force, players have a plethora of fantastic choices. Greatswords add more punch than regular infantry, and Pistoliers are a Fast Cavalry option that can easily slow down or outflank a foe. Flagellants are angst-ridden prophets of impending doom, but their Crazed presence can easily hold and secure a flank. Empire war machines deserve special mention, as few things strike fear into an enemy the way a Helblaster Volley Gun does. The mere presence of a Volley Gun on the battlefield can cause the enemy endless worry and concern. Also, don't discount the fearsome barrage of a Mortar or the awesome killing power (D6 Wounds!) of the Great Cannon. Units may be augmented with characters like Warrior Priests, Engineers, or Wizards from the esteemed Colleges of Magic.

The Empire is constantly threatened by border wars, marauding Orcs, and the dread of Chaos to the north. Bandits and Beasts of Chaos dwell in the dark forests, and a new threat is always looming. Still, the Empire stands tall as a beacon of strength for the forces of civilization.

DETAILING YOUR MODELS WITH EMBLEMS

Here are two examples of emblems you can use on barding shields, banners, or anywhere else on your models. You can also try these techniques with emblems of your own design!

FLAMING COMET SKULL EMBLEM

Step 1. For a flaming comet skull emblem, start by cutting a plastic skull in half and gluing it in place. We tinted the skull red for visibility.

Step 2. Paint the surrounding area as normal and then paint the skull with Vornil Brown. Paint two wavy lines for the comet tails.

Step 3. Highlight the skull with Bleached Bone and fill the comet tails in to look like flames. Use the background color to fix any mistakes.

Step 4. Highlight the skull with Skull White and fill the flames in with a mix of Blazing Orange and Sunburst Yellow. Add details as desired.

BLAZING SUN EMBLEM

Step 1. After painting the shield Chaos Black, paint a circle and white lines with thinned Skull White.

Step 2. Starting at the tips, widen the lines with Skull White until they become rays. Paint in small wavy rays between the larger ones.

Step 3. Paint all of the white areas with Golden Yellow. Fill in any mistakes such as overlapping or jagged lines with Chaos Black.

Step 4. Highlight the rays and sun with a mix of Golden Yellow and Skull White. Continue to add Skull White for successive highlights until you're happy with the results.

PAINTING HORSE BARDING

Horse barding can be painted in a variety of colors. Here are two examples (metallic and golden) to get you started.

METALLIC

After priming black, paint all metal areas with Boltgun Meta and wash with thinned Black Ink.

After the previous step is dry, highlight the edges with Boltgun Metal followed by Chainmail and finally Mithril Silver on the highest areas.

GOLDEN

Basecoat the metal areas with Vornit Brown.

Highlight the armor by painting layers with increasing amounts of Skull White added to the Vornit Brown. In this case, we've done about seven to eight layers and applied a final small highlight of Skull White to the edges. You can stop at this point. However, if you want a richer golden color, move on to the step described below.

Glaze the armor with a mix of Yellow Ink and Flesh Wash. To apply a glaze, mix the two colors together with water to get a golden mixture. Dip your brush in the mixture and set the end of the brush on a paper towel or other absorbent material to draw off the excess moisture. Drag the brush lightly over the armor rather than saturating the area as you would when applying an ink wash.

MAKING UNIT MOVEMENT TRAYS

Many Warhammer armies consist of a number of large regiments, and the Empire is no exception!

LARGE REGIMENTS

For large regiments, take two Games Workshop movement trays and cut off one side from each

Glue the pieces to a piece of thin plasticard with super glue. Putty can hide the gaps

Paint your movement tray to match your unit

TEXTURED MOVEMENT TRAYS

For an attractive finish, texture the sides of your movement trays with glue and sand

Paint the tray as you would the bases of your soldiers. A bit of static grass finishes the job nicely

PLASTICARD & BALSA STRIPS

MAKING YOUR OWN BASE

Cut a piece of hardboard or thick plasticard to an appropriate size. Alternatively, you might try trimming off the edges of a standard movement tray and using it as your starting base. Glue a piece of 2" foam to the base with hot glue.

Shape the foam with a knife and sandpaper. Be sure that the foam is large enough to accommodate the war machine and crew.

Glue rocks and reeds (cut from a scrub brush and glued in place with hot glue) to the base. Next, cover the rest of the base with glue and sprinkle your basing mixture over it. Once dry, paint it black.

Highlight all the elements as you would if they were on a standard soldier's base. Add static grass and other bits for effect. The example below is made from a Chariot base.

DEVOTIONAL TALISMANS PURITY SEALS

Step 1. Purity seals are easily made from strips of paper and a small ball of green stuff. Glue the paper down and then press the putty into place.

Step 2. Prime and paint the model. For the seal, start with Scab Red for the wax seal and Bubonic Brown for the paper strips.

Step 3. Highlight the Scab Red with Blood Red and the Bubonic Brown with a Bubonic Brown and Bleached Bone mix and then Bleached Bone.

Step 4. Apply a fine highlight to the parchment with Skull White. Thin down Chaos Black and paint thin egged lines to represent writing.

SHIELDS

Step 1. Start with smooth plastic shield and some green stuff. After the parchment is scripted on, press two tiny balls of putty in each corner to look like nails.

Step 2. Paint the shield Scab Red, the parchment Bubonic Brown, and the nails Chaos Black.

Step 3. Highlight the Scab Red with Blood Red. Highlight the parchment by adding more and more Bleached Bone to Bubonic Brown for successive highlights.

Step 4. Highlight the shield with Blood Red. Apply a highlight to the parchment with Skull White. Thin down Chaos Black and paint thin jagged lines to represent writing.

Tzar Boris was instrumental in a revival of the Ursun bear cult that had been overtaken by worship of other foreign gods. Boris undertook the trial of initiation and went into the forests to tame a bear. He was found weeks later with a gigantic bear guarding his unconscious body. After Boris came to, he returned to Kislev with the bear. Boris named the bear Ursun (meaning bear-brother), and together, they fought many battles.

PAINTING KISLEVITE HORSES

Kislevite Horses often have war paint on them. Here is a simple and quick way to paint your Kislevite war paint.

STEP 1

Start by priming the model Chaos Black and then paint the coat of the horse Scorched Brown.

STEP 2

Drybrush the horse's coat with Dark Flesh. Don't worry about neatness at this stage.

STEP 3

Drybrush the coat with Varmin Brown. Apply this coat sparingly and leave the previous color showing through in the recesses.

STEP 4

Paint the manes, harnesses, and other details with Chaos Black. Next, drybrush the manes and tail with Codex Grey. Highlight the reins and straps.

STEP 5

Apply Red Gore to the underbelly and legs of the horse. Apply this color carefully. It may require a few coats for full coverage.

STEP 6

Drybrush the Red Gore areas with Blood Red. To finish, follow the drybrush with a final highlight of Blood Red with a little Blazing Orange mixed in.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH THE EMPIRE

- A. Perhaps the Empire army's greatest strength is its flexibility. You can throw your regular opponents for a loop by varying the type of Empire army you field: an all-cavalry force, a stand-and-shoot army, a "horde" army of all State Troops and Militia, or an artillery-heavy force. Though your opponents may know that they're preparing to play an Empire army they'll never be sure which Empire army will take to the field.
- B. While there are a number of great suits of magic armor in the Empire arsenal, it is often more effective (and sometimes cheaper) simply to equip your character models with full plate armor, a shield, and a barded warhorse for a 1+ armor save. Even though all this kit costs 36 points for a Lord and 24 points for a Hero, these points do not come out of the allotment that can be spent on magic items, which enables your characters to carry more powerful magic.
- C. If an Elector Count serves as your General, one unit of State Troops can carry a magic banner worth up to 50 points. It's often a good idea to equip a sizeable unit of Halberdiers or Spearmen with the Griffon Standard to double its normal rank bonus from +3 to +6. The Griffon Standard can turn a middling unit of State Troops into a real combat monster!
- D. Flagellants are flexible troops that can be used to tie up powerful enemy units, to guard weak flanks, vulnerable artillery and missile troops, and to defeat weak and middling enemy troops.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST THE EMPIRE

- A. If a regular opponent has a large collection of Empire models and tends to vary the composition of his force radically from game to game, you can counter by bringing a tournament-style force designed to take on a variety of types of armies.
- B. There are a number of weapons that do not allow armor saves that are perfect for attacking heavily armored Empire characters and Knights. When you're preparing to face an Empire army, particularly one you know to have a lot of heavy cavalry, it's a good idea to include Cannons, Stone Throwers, and Bolt Throwers. Also, many magic spells and weapons ignore armor saves and can be useful when facing Empire troops. Alternatively, models with high Strength – e.g., those with great weapons, cavalry with lances, Chariots, and Monsters – can reduce the saves of heavily armored troops.
- C. Once you learn that a unit has the Griffon Standard, do your best to flank it. When the unit loses its rank bonuses, the Griffon Standard becomes useless, and the unit will be likely to fold.
- D. Flagellants can be frustrating opponents, particularly when they tie up your most powerful units for multiple turns. Only engage them with powerful units that can dish out a lot of attacks and kill the Flagellants quickly. Do the math in your head beforehand and only engage with troops that can destroy the Flagellants in no more than 2 or 3 player turns. Troops with WS5 or higher are great for this task, as the WS2 Flagellants will require 5's to hit. Alternatively, if you have fast troops – like cavalry or flyers, you can lure the Flagellants toward your troops, and then run circles around the Flagellants and avoid them like the plague.

HIGH ELVES

We, the Asur, are a noble people, our long and proud history stretching back to a time when Men were still fur-clad savages. Living on our fair isle of Ulthuan, set in the center of the Great Ocean, we are far removed from the petty squabbles of the lesser races. Here, we are able to practice our magic and our arts, perfecting them for no reason other than the sheer joy of it.

We are a tall and slender people, slight of build and graceful of movement. Our armies, too, move with fluid grace as do our warships and steeds. All that we touch is elegant and finely crafted, for we are a long lived people and refuse to surround ourselves with ugliness and discord. During our long lives, we are able to perfect many skills, and our people are renowned for our highly skilled artisans, our fine craftsmen, the beauty of our art, and the melodious grace of our songs. All in all, we are a race that loves beauty and treasures skill, but our days are not all spent in idle pursuits.

Since the time of the Sundering, we have been a besieged and embattled people. Our cursed Dark Elf cousins are bent on nothing short of complete dominion over us, and their treacherous leader Malekith will not rest until he sits on the Phoenix Throne. To repel this unending barrage of piracy and raids, we must train constantly for war and remember the Golden Age before this hellish time of strife.

The High Elves are an ancient race that once ruled the Warhammer world. The High Elves are seafarers and powerful in magic, but the High Elves long ago retreated to their island homeland of Ulthuan. Noble or haughty, depending on your viewpoint, the High Elves live in self-imposed isolation. They fight to protect their home and preserve their way of life.

Fighting Style

In most aspects, the High Elves are a general's dream. They are fast, are skilled with sword and bow, have access to expert cavalry, and have a variety of elite units to choose from. High Elf armies are often outnumbered, and wise High Elf tacticians will try to avoid senseless frontal assaults or battles of attrition. After all, why use a sledgehammer when a rapier is what's needed?

High Elf armies are best when exploiting their flexibility. They can present an impregnable line of spears in defensive formation when needed or send out brilliant counterstrikes of fast-moving cavalry. A mass of Archers and a few Eagle's Claw Repeater Bolt Throwers can blunt even the most determined mass attack. Few foes can withstand the charge of units such as Swordmasters or Dragon Princes, especially when these charges are combined with supporting charges from speedy Tiranoc Chariots or Great Eagles.

Collecting a High Elf Army

The first step to collecting a High Elf army is to get your hands on a few Core choices. They will fulfill your minimum army requirements, and even the most basic of High Elven troops, the Archers (with BS4) and Spearmen (with WS4 and the ability to fight in three ranks!), are experts to rival the elites of other armies. Players who can't decide between Archers and Spearmen should consider Lothian Sea Guard – a unit that incorporates both weapon types.

Aaron Wilson entered this High Elf Model at the 2004 Chicago Golden Demon Painting Competition.

When expanding a High Elf army, it is well worth looking at cavalry (Silver Helms, Ellyrian Reavers, and Dragon Princes), especially if you are the kind of player who will put a premium on attacking and counterstrikes. High Elf elite infantry units (Swordmasters of Hoeth, White Lions, and Phoenix Guard) all have extra abilities that make them well worth their higher points cost. For instance, the Phoenix Guard not only have a higher Weapon Skill (5) but a so wield halberds (+1 Strength) and cause Fear.

When first assembling a High Elf force, some players are tempted to purchase one of each of the fantastic High Elf elite troop types. Such an approach may work, but it will result in a very small army. The way to decide which troops are best for your style of play is to get some Core troops painted and fight some battles. If you want a more defensive force, you may want to go for more Archers and Repeater Bolt Throwers as well as elite troops that will slow the enemy advance like Shadow Warriors (who Scout and Skirmish) or Ellyrian Reavers (excellent Fast Cavalry). Defensive forces can include Spearmen and a few harder units (Swordmasters or Dragon Princes) to counterattack as the enemy closes. Of course, if you build a large enough army, you can switch forces in and out to favor any playing style.

The High Elves have been rightfully feared over 5,000 long years of history. It is up to you to continue their legacy of excellence.

BOW STRINGS

STEP 1

After painting the model, use a pin vise to drill a hole through the hand from the top to the bottom of the middle finger.

STEP 2

Feed light colored thread (grey or white) through the hole.

STEP 3

Add a small drop of super glue to the bottom of the bow and draw the thread across it to secure it. When it dries, trim off the extra glue and thread with clippers or a sharp hobby knife.

STEP 4

Add a drop of super glue to the top of the bow and draw the thread across to secure it. Trim off the excess glue and thread when it dries. Paint a thin layer of varnish on the thread to keep it from fraying.

ARROWS

STEP 1

Drill a hole between the index and middle fingers of the model.

STEP 2

Cut a piece of fine wire (a small paper clip will work).

The wire should extend from the drawing hand of the model to just past the other hand holding the bow.

STEP 3

Dip one end of the arrow into super glue and insert it into the hole in the model's hand. Apply glue to the area where the arrow meets the other hand and secure it in place until it dries.

STEP 4

Paint the arrow any desired color and paint the tip with a light metal to represent the head. For extra detail, glue small paper strips to the end closest to the model's hand to represent the arrow's fletchings.

ELVEN STEEDS

Spotting can distinguish the Elven Steeds from the other horse breeds in the Old World like those of the Ellyrian Reaver's horses to the left. After painting a dark or medium basecoat on your Elven Steeds, you can add the spotting. We use a grey paint which helps the white and blue of the Elves' clothing stand out from the coats of their steeds.

STEP 1

To begin, stipple Fortress Grey spots in a light random pattern onto the steed's rump. To create the stipple effect, wipe most of the paint on the brush onto a tissue in a manner similar to drybrushing and then dab, rather than wipe, on the selected areas.

STEP 2

Create a 50/50 mix of Fortress Grey and Skull White and stipple inside the Fortress Grey spots that you applied in the first step.

STEP 3

For the final step, stipple a very small amount of Skull White in the very center of the spots.

You can also use this process on the front of the horse near the shoulders and base of the neck. Your steeds are now ready for their riders and any final details you need to apply.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH HIGH ELVES

- A. A High Elf army that combines the Banner of Sorcery, the Ring of Fury, and an Archmage (perhaps with a Mage or two for backup) can dominate the Magic Phase with a truly obscene number of Power Dice. High Magic (especially the Curse of Arrow Attraction) can then make a High Elf army very potent on the battlefield.
- B. A unit of Dragon Princes with the War Banner led by a Commander Battle Standard Bearer with the Battle Banner can be quite fearsome in combat. This unit can gain a bonus between +2 and +7 to combat resolution!
- C. High Elves armed with spears are a rather frightening prospect in close combat. Due to their martial training, High Elves with spears are able to fight in three ranks rather than two. Add another rank (or two) just in case and a command group, and you will have 4 points toward Combat Resolution before anyone fights! Lothien Sea Guard are especially good with spears, as they are also armed with bows. If they can Stand & Shoot as a charge response and then use their spears in the ensuing combat, they will have a decided advantage.
- D. High Elves can field potent cavalry contingents or even entirely mounted forces. Silver Helms are extremely flexible, and their wide variety of options allows them to be used as small, cheap units to sneak around into the enemy's flanks or even as hard-hitting and well-armored shock cavalry. Dragon Princes are great heavy cavalry and, even with their rhinoceros barding, can still charge as far as 18", which all but ensures that they will be able to get maximum use of their lances. Reaver Knights are a great for frustrating your opponent. Armed with bows they can use the Fast Cavalry rules to full effect and shoot in any direction, even after they have moved 18"! An especially devious tactic to use is to move them into a position outside of opposing units' charge arcs but close enough to prevent enemy march moves. Even if the Reaver Knights face away from the enemy, they can still shoot, thanks to the fact that they are Fast Cavalry!

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST HIGH ELVES

- A. Judicious use of Dispel Dice and Dispel Scrolls can bring a difficult Magic Phase under control. Also, keep in mind that an army focused on the Magic Phase has not invested a great deal of points in rank-and-file troops. If you concentrate on taking down the army piece by piece, a magic-heavy enemy force should fold in combat. Of course, you can always send a flying unit, chariot, or character to target the Mages directly!
- B. This unit of Dragon Princes is indeed very dangerous. However, Dragon Princes are still only Toughness 3 models. Concentrate your shooting on this unit (especially war machines) and you should be able to sort them out quickly.
- C. Spear-armed units can be a thorny opponent to face, though they can only fight in three ranks to the front. Get around to the side or rear, and only those Spearmen in base contact with the enemy can fight. Also, if the charging unit has a Unit Strength of 5 or greater, it will force the Spearmen to take a Panic test and negate their rank bonus.
- D. High Elf cavalry can definitely cause some headaches, but in the end, they are just Elves. As long as you can weather that first round of Strength 5 attacks, you will then face a group of Elves with a Toughness and Strength of only 3. In addition, cavalry units rely on their maneuverability. If you can slow them down, charge them before they charge you, or get in around their flanks or rear, the horsemen will be at a decided disadvantage.

HORDES OF CHAOS

For three weeks the army had marched, swelling in size as challengers were met, broken, and absorbed into the ranks. The edge of Troll Country drew near. The bleak and desolate lands were giving way to the wind-swept Eastern Steppes. The iron-will of Kalazak, Lord of Chaos, drove the army before him. All in-fighting and squabbling among different tribes or Chaos powers was quelled by his dark presence. No one knew what was beneath Kalazak's black armor, and no glint of eye or emotion could be seen from his horned helm. But the forces knew they were marching south, marching to war.

To the far north, past the desolations of Troll Country, lies the magic-swept land known as the Realm of Chaos. This cursed region is where the intense energy of Chaos warps and taints the surrounding northlands and the men and creatures who dwell there. It is here that the Chaos legions, both Mortal and Daemon, fight for the favors of the mighty gods.

Fighting Style

There are many variations and types of Chaos armies, but rest assured, none of them is friendly. Attack and devastation are always key ingredients for all the Chaos powers. Chaos armies can be composed of some of the most powerful close combat troops in the Warhammer game, and this fact, quite rightfully, causes much consternation for enemy generals. Whether a player chooses mostly Mortal followers of Chaos (Chaos Warriors, Knights, and Marauders) or a Daemonic host (with Daemons from any of the four powers), few opponents will relish meeting such troops in hand-to-hand fighting.

However, simply attacking with all-out savagery, even with some of the most ferocious fighters in the game, rarely wins the battle against a knowledgeable foe. Using coordinated attacks and supporting units can ensure that the superior Chaos troops can carry home the attack. Horrible Spawn can pin down the foe. Fast troops like Marauder Horsemen and Hounds of Chaos can threaten enemy flanks, and magic can soften up the enemy before the main attacks begin.

Collecting a Hordes of Chaos Army

Collecting a Chaos army is easy and fun, and there are a wide variety of troops to choose from. We always suggest starting an army with a few Core units. However, to start your Chaos force, you have to decide on a leader. A Mortal General (a Chaos Lord or Exalted Sorcerer) may choose any of the Mortal forces as Core troops but treats Daemons as Special choices. A Daemon General (a Greater Daemon, Daemon Prince, or Exalted Daemon) may select any Daemonic units as Core choices and any of the Mortal followers as Special. Chaos Warriors are a great place to start. They are powerful and paint up quickly, allowing players to get a force together in a hurry.

When a player expands a Chaos army, he or she has a huge number of choices to make. In fact, no army gives players as much choice as Chaos: Daemons of different powers, Spawn, powerful Chaos Knights, Chariots, Marauders and more. Up to one unit of Chaos Knights or Chaos Warriors may be upgraded to a unit of Chosen. These fiendish troops are favored by the Gods and gain an extra Attack and Chaos Armor. Best of all, all the troops from the Beasts of Chaos army list may be included as Special or Rare choices in a Hordes of Chaos army list. Thus, the tactical options of the Chaos army, as well as the painting and modeling variety, are second to none.

Darren Watson's Chaos Warriors of Khorne won second place in the Warhammer Regiment category at the 2004 Canada Golden Demon painting competition.

Even More Chaos!

In addition to everything in the Hordes of Chaos army list, Chaos players can mix and match troops and heroes from the Beasts of Chaos army list. Thus, it is possible to add a unit of Beastmen to screen your Chaos Knights or a solid force of Dragon Ogres or a Chaos Giant to beef up your army.

Whether a troop is listed as Core or Special depends on what kind of General (Beast, Mortal, or Daemonic) a player is using. Consult the Army books for a full description. Now, go out and conquer!

PAINTING A CHAMPION OF CHAOS

After applying an undercoat of Chaos Black, paint the Champion with a mix of two parts Chaos Black to one part Rega. Blue. Add small amounts of Fortress Grey to this mix for the highlight stages.

Use Brazen Brass to paint the trim and helmet. Highlight these areas with Shining Gold and then Mithril Silver mixed with Shining Gold. Wash these sections with Chestnut Ink and then again with thinned Brown Ink.

Paint the horns and skulls with a basecoat mix of equal parts Snakebite Leather and Chaos Black. Add Skull White to this mix for the highlights, and use pure Skull White for the final highlight.

Paint the fur cloak with a basecoat of Snakebite Leather. Add Skull White to Snakebite Leather and then apply this mix toward the outer edges of the cloak.

Give the cloak a basecoat of Scab Red and highlight with Red Gore and then Blood Red. Mix Blood Red with Fiery Orange for the penultimate highlight. Add a small amount of Skull White to this mix for the final highlight and then wash the whole cloak with thinned Chestnut Ink.

Use a basecoat of Bestia Brown to paint the flayed skin and pouches. Add an equal quantity of Dwarf Flesh to this color for the first highlight stage. For the final highlight stages, add small amounts of Bleached Bone.

Paint the metallic sections with a basecoat of Boltgun Metal and then highlight with Chainmail and then Mithril Silver. Apply shading with a wash of thinned Brown Ink. Mix Red Gore and Red Ink for the blood and then varnish the blood stains once the model is finished.

Texture the base of the model by attaching sand and static grass with white glue.

PAINTING CHAOS MARAUDERS

Undercoat your Marauder with Chaos Black Spray Primer

Paint the Marauder's skin with a basecoat of Vermin Fur. Give all the flesh areas a wash of Brown Ink to create shading. Once the ink dries, highlight the skin with Vermin Fur again, then Bronzed Flesh, and finally Bleached Bone. Add a final, light highlight of Skull White to add definition to the muscles and most raised areas.

Paint leather areas such as the breeches, straps, boots and wrist bands with a basecoat of Scorched Brown. Apply a watered-down wash of Black ink to the recesses of these areas. Touch up any areas where the wash overlapped with Scorched Brown. Finally apply a highlight of Snakebite Leather to the edges and raised areas near creases.

Apply a basecoat of Boltgun Metal to all of the different metallic areas. Apply a wash of thinned Chaos Black Ink to the rivets and recessed areas of the metallic surfaces. Touch up with Boltgun Metal where the Black Ink overlaps. Give all of the metal areas a final highlight of Mithril Silver.

Drybrush the fur on the back of the legs with Vomit Brown. Drybrush Codex Grey on the haft of the flail to bring out the woodgrain. Highlight any remaining black areas with Codex Grey.

Finish off the base by attaching sand with white glue. Once the sand and glue dries drybrush the sand with Codex Grey and then Bleached Bone. If you like, you can attach small clumps of static grass to your base with white glue.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH HORDES OF CHAOS

A. It's possible to create a Chaos army with a lot of points-heavy, powerful models like Archagon, Shaggotha, Chaos Gians, tricked-out Lords of Chaos, Lord-level Daemons, and the like. While these powerful models can be useful additions to your Hordes of Chaos army, too many of them can make for a weak force. Keep in mind that often the most effective elements of an army are fully ranked units with standards and high Unit Strengths. Make sure that a good percentage of your Chaos force is made up of such units. Use large, powerful models sparingly and only to support your big units, and you won't go far wrong.

B. Consider fielding a 10-strong unit of Chosen Warriors of Khorne with additional hand weapons and full command. Some players might be tempted to field a larger unit, but at 305 points, the minimum unit size of 10 is already a serious investment. Plus, this unit's effectiveness comes from the number of Attacks it can dish out and not its Unit Strength or rank bonus. These Warriors will make 4 Attacks each – the Champion will make 5. Thus, with a frontage of six (any wider becomes cumbersome and loses the rank bonus), the unit will make 25 Attacks at WS5 and S4. Very few things can stand up to that for long.

C. Horrors are interesting additions to a Chaos army, but they are vulnerable in combat and can lose a fair light to a bunch of one-armed Goblins. Thus, it's important to protect your Horrors and keep them out of combat with everything except the weakest of foes. Even weak troops in sufficient numbers can threaten Horrors and should be avoided. Always take as many Flamers as you can to accompany your Horrors. When an enemy unit threatens to charge your Horrors, interpose your Flamers in a straight line in such a way that the enemy unit would have to charge and fight them one at a time. While the enemy chews up your Flamers, move your Horrors to safety and possibly into position to blast the enemy unit with spells.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR DEFENDING AGAINST HORDES OF CHAOS

A. To fight large and powerful Chaos models tempt your opponent into using his big models to engage your fully ranked units with command. Even the most powerful Monsters and characters will have difficulty defeating a full unit. Most often, units will begin such fights with a 5-point advantage toward combat resolution (i.e., 3 for ranks, 1 for the standard, and 1 for outnumbering). Even the most powerful models will have difficulty overcoming this advantage. Above all, avoid situations in which the big models can attack your units in concert with a fully ranked regiment or another big model. Also, protect against flank charges to preserve your rank bonus.

B. Chosen Warriors of Khorne are always tough. However, Frenzy is a double-edged sword. Frenzied models must always charge targets that are in range. Thus, make sure to include a couple of low-point, highly maneuverable units to distract the Warriors. On your turn, move your distraction unit into the Warriors' charge range and, when the inevitable charge comes, flee. Try to set your distraction unit in such a way that the Warriors' failed charge will move them away from the rest of your army and/or into an inconvenient position. Repeat this maneuver as needed. Fast Cavalry units are ideal for distraction duty, but Skirmishers, other cheap cavalry models, Hounds of Chaos, cheap Flyers, and the like will also work well.

C. The "Flamer chain" defense is a difficult one to counter. You can approach the Horror unit with two units of your own from two different directions. Thus, only one unit will be delayed, or both units will be delayed for only a short time. Another option is to ignore the Flamer chain and move to engage another unit. Yet another is to target the Horrors with missile fire and spells: with only T3, there are a lot of ranged attacks you can make that can devastate Horrors. Finally, highly maneuverable units like Flyers, Fast Cavalry and Skirmishers can sometimes avoid the Flamer chain and charge the Horrors directly.

LIZARDMEN

Sotek reigns as the great serpent-god of the Lizardmen, and every temple-city venerates His supreme divinity with a blood-soaked pyramid. Some believe that this foremost deity is one of the Old Ones returned, though most see Him as a wholly different entity from the creators of the Lizardmen. The growth of the Cult of Sotek started among the Skinks, who offered up thousands of rat-spawn in bloody sacrifices in His name, before spreading across all the Lizardmen lands. His coming was predicted in the Prophecy of Sotek. The bloody god's emergence into the world would be signaled by the appearance of a two-tailed comet in the heavens, representing his forked tongue. This appearance in the skies is received with rejoicing and blood sacrifices of thanks among the Lizardmen, for they know that it heralds the reawakening of Sotek, who will strike down their foes with His anger.

Long before the rise of Elves, Dwarfs, or Men, the Lizardmen walked the Warhammer world. Cold and enigmatic, Lizardmen seek to restore the order of the world that was brought before their mysterious creators disappeared ages ago. Although Lizardmen rarely venture out of their steaming jungle homes in Lustria and the Southlands, the cold-blooded ones do not discuss their plans and mercilessly punish any who would stand in their way.

Fighting Style

Lizardmen are an incredibly diverse army with an amazing number of strengths. Thus, there are loads of troop combinations and tactics to try out. One thing the Lizardmen benefit from is the Cold-Blooded rule, which means that they have a greater chance of passing Leadership tests (primarily Break and Psychology tests). Whether you are building a strong infantry-based army to roll over the field or you are going for more of a line up full of speed and power with troops like monsters, cavalry, and skirmishing Skinks, being Cold-Blooded will cause your enemy no ends of problems.

Collecting a Lizardmen Army

We always suggest beginning any new army with several Core choices. Not only will they cover the minimum requirements for a fairly large game, but Core troops give players a strong nucleus from which to expand their forces. For Lizardmen, these Core choices often take the form of either Saurus Warriors or Skink Skirmishers. Both are suited for different roles, and both troop types excel at what they do. The Saurus Warriors are ferocious creatures that are strong, have multiple Attacks, and have a natural save with their Scaly Skin. All of these abilities make Saurus perfect infantry to secure the center of a battle line. Skinks are smaller and more agile, and their role in a Lizardmen army is that of skirmishers and light missile troops. Skinks are fast (Movement of 6), and their missiles count as Poisoned Attacks. Other Core choices include Jungle Swarms, which are ideal defensive troops that can tie up a flank, and Temple Guard, an elite unit of Saurus.

When filling out a Lizardmen army, players have even more fantastic choices. Kroxigors are the larger cousins of the Saurus and are bred for power and brute strength (they have S5 and wield great weapons and thus attack at S7!). Terradons are enormous flying creatures that can carry Skink riders deep behind enemy lines. Chameleon Skinks are masters of camouflage and may use their ability to blend into a background to infiltrate just where they can do the enemy the most damage. Salamander Hunting Packs offer a wicked ranged attack. Saurus Cavalry on vicious Cold Ones constitute a very hard-hitting unit, and the mighty Stegadon is a lumbering dinosaur with Skinks on its back.

The sheer power of a Lizardmen army is topped off by its leaders: Slann Mage-Priests and Saurus Oldbloods. Slann Mage-Priests are among the oldest and most magically powerful beings in all existence, while the Saurus Oldbloods are ferocious fighters that may be mounted atop Carnosaurs, enormous flesh-eating dinosaurs.

Anyone who dares to fight the Lizardmen or invade their jungle territory does so at a great peril.

Ben Bishop's "Stegadon on Parade" won the Slayer Sword at the 2004 Atlanta Games Day Golden Demon painting competition.

LIZARDMEN SHIELDS

It can be much easier to paint the Saurus and shields separately. First, prime the shields with Chaos Black while they're still on the sprue

STEP 1

Over the primer, drybrush the front of the shield with Scab Red and then Red Gore.

STEP 2

Paint the top half of each scale with Blood Red.

STEP 3

Add a highlight line around the top of each scale with Blazing Orange

STEP 4

Paint the metal areas with Dwarf Bronze and the bony spikes with Bleached Bone

STEP 5

Wash the metal and bone with Brown Ink. Highlight the bone with a 50/50 mix of Bleached Bone and Skull White and the metal areas with Shining Gold

STEP 6

When the shields are finished, carefully clip them off the sprue, and touch up the bare spots before attaching them to the model

Don't worry about the back of the shield too much, as it will not be seen when the regiment is assembled

Almost all of your Saurus models like this Saurus Lord on Foot, will carry shields

PAINTING SAURUS

STEP 1

Undercoat the model with black primer and basecoat with Enchanted Blue. Next, drybrush with a 50/50 mix of Enchanted Blue and Ice Blue.

STEP 2

Give the entire model a wash of Blue Ink. Add a small drop of Gloss Varnish to the ink to allow it to coat more evenly.

STEP 3

Drybrush the skin of the Saurus with your 50/50 Enchanted Blue/Ice Blue mix to lighten the color again. Basecoat the armored scales on the back of the Saurus with Regal Blue. Then, drybrush all of the scales with Enchanted Blue.

STEP 4

Add Ice Blue highlights to the skin of the Saurus. The skin is finished. All that needs to be completed are the details. Basecoat the spines along the back with Scab Red.

and paint the teeth and claws with Bleached Bone. Basecoat the spear shaft with Scorched Brown.

STEP 5

Highlight the red markings with Red Gore and then with Blood Red. Also, place a spot of Blood Red in the eyes with a fine detail brush. Highlight the spear shaft with a 50/50 mix of Scorched Brown and Snakebite Leather and then with straight Snakebite Leather.

STEP 6

Paint all the metal bits with Dwarf Bronze. Use Boltgun Metal for the blade of the spear. Wash the bronze parts, teeth and claws with Brown Ink.

To finish, highlight the spear tip with Mithril Silver, the bronze areas with Shining Gold, and the teeth and claws with a 50/50 mix of Bleached Bone and Skull White.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH LIZARDMEN

- A A unit of Saurus with the Blessed Spawning of Sotek and led by a Scar-Leader or Scar-Veteran with the same Blessed Spawning can dish out an amazing number of Attacks on the charge. Add in a Battle Standard Bearer with a War Banner or the Jaguar Standard, and few opponents will survive the Saurus' devastating charge.
- B A Saurus Scar-Leader or Scar-Veteran with the Charm of the Jaguar Warrior can move at high speeds. If such a Saurus were to follow a group of Kroxigor (who also move quickly), he could let the Kroxigor charge a unit in the front while moving to the side for a flank charge to support the Kroxigor – most likely hitting the target unit with a devastating number of high-Strength Attacks. The Saurus Scar-Leader or Scar-Veteran could take a great weapon, the Blessed Spawning of Sotek, or the Scimitar of the Sun resplendent for even nastier charges.
- C Jungle Swarms are a good way to protect your flank or offer a tempting target to your opponent's units (especially ones affected by Frenzy). While the Swarms hold off the enemy units, you can bring up hard-hitting units such as Saurus and Kroxigor to smash into the flanks of the enemy's formation. Because the Swarms have Poisoned Attacks, they may even manage to drag down some of your opponent's toughest models.
- D A Second Generation Siann Mage-Priest with the Plaque of Tepok and the Plaque of Dominion has a very good chance of ruling supreme in the Magic Phase. For even more utility, invest in a Skink Priest with some Dispel Scrolls to provide some more defense against enemy spells and to give your Mage-Priest better line of sight for his own magic.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST LIZARDMEN

- A There are many spells that can either slow a unit down or help pick off worryingly powerful characters like this one. In addition, you can aim your Cannons to draw a line through the Kroxigor and the Saurus hero, possibly turning both into bits of reptilian goo.
- B A unit that is extremely powerful on the charge has most of its power tied up in the gamble that it WILL get to charge. Obviously, the best thing you can do with a unit like this one is to avoid getting charged by it! Often, this tactic means attacking first by hitting such a unit with your faster-moving models, but you can also slow this unit down with Flyers (inhibiting the march move) and by whittling it down to manageable size with enough missile fire (Bolt Throwers are very good for this purpose).
- C One way to deal with pesky swarms is to shoot them. Jungle Swarms are skirmishers, however. Thus, another good method to handle these units are to send large regiments of cheap troops to hack the Swarms apart. Also, cavalry units can usually just outmaneuver the Swarms.
- D A Siann Mage-Priest can cast spells like no other mage in the Warhammer world, but he is also hideously expensive points-wise. Thus, if you kill him, you'll earn a massive number of Victory Points. It may cost you dearly to focus your efforts on taking the Siann out of the game, but once he's dead, the Victory Points you gain (especially if the Siann is also the Battle Standard Bearer) will be well worth it! Also, keep in mind that Dispel Scrolls are only 25 points each and will shut down even a Siann's magic.

OGRE KINGDOMS

Small bands of Ogres have long wandered the lands of the Old World and sold their services as brutal mercenaries. We always thought that tales of entire tribes of these creatures were fanciful tales told by witless traders addled by their own exotic opiates. I have begun investigations, and these wild claims appear to be unfortunately true. As the local scouts are now reporting, dwindling caravans on the trade routes and the promise of plenty of meat further afield have encouraged some of these Ogre tribes to spread. Now the denizens of the Dwarfen realms are beginning to face skirmishing armies of these brutes. It will not be long before these marauders reach our border with their sights set on the fertile lands of Tilea and the southern Empire beyond.

I beg of you, cousin, to help strengthen the bulwark between these ravaging beasts and your realm by supplying me with three regiments of your Halberdiers at your earliest possible convenience.

— Excerpt from a letter by Prince Dettel Johanssen of the Border Princes to Emperor Karl Franz

Might makes right is the one overwhelming belief of the Ogres, beaten into them from birth. The biggest, strongest, heaviest Ogres rise to dominate their tribes, often over the fresh corpses of their rivals. No matter though, Ogres also live to eat, and they'll eat anything. Defeated rivals, Rhinox meat, boulders, rusty metal, and Gnoblar soup all form part of an Ogre's diet. Ogres are very proud of their enlarged bellies, covered in fat and layers of powerful muscle, which they protect with distinctive gut-plates of ill-kept metal displaying the motif of the Great Maw – the Ogres' destructive god.

Fighting Style

Hard and fast are the two words that best describe the fighting style of the Ogre Kingdoms army. Facing an army full of Strength 4, Toughness 4, 3 Wound, Fear-causing monsters is a daunting prospect for any enemy. Add the fact that they can charge 12", and you have a brutal horde that is harder and faster than most.

The standard tactic employed by Ogre armies is "Chaaarge!" Most Ogre armies field small units of three or four Ogres, as a second rank is very costly (140+ points). Thus, the Ogres can't usually bring a lot of combat resolution to the fight, although their Bull Charge impact hits really help. To compensate for the lack of combat resolution, Ogre generals must maneuver flanking units into position for well-executed combination charges.

Gnoblar Fighters, while flimsy, bring their weight of numbers and really cheap rank bonuses (as little as 8 points per rank). Used in combination with their brutal masters, Gnoblars can boost the combat resolution for the Ogres and help break a unit in the 1st round of combat.

Yhetees, Gorgers, and Slavegiants can all be used to disrupt your enemy's battle line and distract him from the rapidly approaching Bulls and Ironguts. The more powerful models will often unnerve your opponent and force him to redirect units or missiles that would have otherwise concentrated on your main battle line.

Finding the balance between Characters, Ogre units, and the more specialized choices is the greatest challenge for any Ogre Kingdoms general. If all else fails, just remember to "Chaaarge!"

Collecting an Ogre Kingdoms Army

At first glance, it may seem to be a really easy feat to build an Ogre Kingdoms army, and to a great extent, that's true. With a handful (well, maybe 20 or so) Ogres, you can field a formidable army. It is important to begin with the compulsory unit of Ogre Bulls, a second smaller unit of Bulls, and a Hero of some description. The background of the Ogre Kingdoms will be a great guide in helping you develop a continuing theme for your army.

An Ogre tribe from high in the mountains might field more Hunters with full complements of Sabretusks geared to track down and drag back their prey, from cavebeasts to great mammoths.

An Ogre tribe from an area rich in herds of the ill-tempered Rhinoxen might field more Butchers, an obvious requirement for the carnivorous Ogres. You might also find more Gorgers, drawn by the scent of blood, in this type of army.

An Ogre tribe that trades with Chaos Dwarfs or regularly raids Empire caravans would field multiple units of Leadbechers and perhaps a Gnoblar Scraplauncher. A handful of Maneaters would probably be present too.

Whichever way you decide to build your army, never forget the most important thing. Might makes right!

For these latest additions to his Ironskin army, Dave Taylor chose to model the backs of his Ogres to look like the Great Maw.

MIXING OGRE FLESH PAINT

Mixing batches of paint before starting on an army will not only speed up your painting process but will keep the look of your army more consistent. Here is a fairly easy way to prepare your paints for your Ogres.

Take two empty paint pots and pour one part (a quarter of a pot) Shadow Grey into each one.

Fill the remaining three-quarters of the two mixing pots with Graveyard Earth.

Set one of the two basecoat pots aside. Take the other basecoat pot and pour half of the mix into an empty pot.

Mix one part Kommando Khaki into one of the pots. This pot is your second highlight color. Next mix one part Kommando Khaki and one part Bleached Bone into the second paint pot. This pot is your third highlight color.

For the final highlight color, pour the remaining Shadow Grey. Mix it thoroughly, then pour one part of the new Shadow Grey/Graveyard Earth mixture into the three-quarters-full Bleached Bone pot to top it off. When the paint in the Bleached Bone pot is mixed thoroughly, you'll have your final skin highlight color.

PAINTING OGRE FLESH

Apply a slightly thinned basecoat over all of the Ogre flesh areas. Be sure to get in all the cracks.

Apply the second skin color. It will be a subtle highlight and may require a few coats, cover all but the deepest recesses.

The third highlight color should start to define the raised areas more. Be sure to let some of the previous highlight show.

The final highlight should be reserved for the highest points.

PAINTING RUST EFFECTS

STIPLING

This method is highly controlled. The approach to stippling is similar to drybrushing.

Step 1. Begin by painting a basecoat of Dark Flesh.

Step 2. Stipple Vermin Brown paint over the basecoat. Use an old, short-bristled brush – like a large drybrush – and wipe most of the paint off of it. Rather than drag the bristles across the surface of the model as for drybrushing, dab the paint on to create random patterns.

Step 3. Complete the stippling effect with Blazing Orange. With successive highlights, build up some areas more than others to get a mottled effect.

Step 4. Once finished with the stippling, add tiny flecks of Chainmail to the edges of the model. This last step imitates the effect of rust being worn away to reveal the original metal beneath.

FLICKING WITH A PAINTBRUSH

This technique is simple. Just build up layers of paint by dipping an old toothbrush in paint and flicking it on. It's a lot of fun to do – messy, but fun. Warning: your work area will be covered in splashes of paint when you're through!

Step 1. Paint a basecoat of Dark Flesh onto the blade and let it dry.

Step 2. Flick a layer of Vermin Brown onto the blade.

Step 3. Flick some Blazing Orange onto the blade to finish it off.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH OGRES

- A. Having ranks with your Ogre units is more important than just having one more point for Combat Resolution. Additional ranks give you +1 Strength when you Bull Charge with an Ogre unit. Having another full rank also helps when it comes to either outnumbering the opponent or being outnumbered. Since Ogres cause Fear, any opponent that loses a combat to them will automatically flee if the Ogres outnumber them. With the small unit sizes of Ogres, a unit of three or four will have to take a Panic test if it takes just one casualty. Having your Bulls and especially your more expensive frontguts run away from the enemy after taking a single casualty can be crippling to your entire plan.
- B. Ogres are among the fastest non-cavalry units in the game. Aside from the usual benefits of charging, as long as the unit charged over 6" the Ogres will cause impact hits. Since these hits are "free," you should endeavor to get them as often as possible.
- C. Hunters with Sabretusks are great for protecting your flanks and mopping up units upon which the efforts of your other Ogres might be wasted. If a Hunter is able to reach lone enemy characters or war machine crews, he will usually be able to tear them to pieces if need be. The Hunter can sic the Sabretusks on one unit and shoot his Harpoon Launcher at yet another unit, which is sure to draw your opponent's attention away from the rest of your Ogres.
- D. Even though Ogres are the main thrust of the army, don't forget about the Gnoblar. They fill an important gap in the Ogre army as cheap units that can help win combats. Ogres will always lose out to infantry when it comes to outnumbering. Note that an Ogre unit in two ranks of four occupies the same amount of space as 32 Empire Spearmen. The Ogres will probably do more damage than the Spearmen. However, the Ogres are at a disadvantage with only one rank and a Unit Strength of 24 (the Spearmen have at least +3 Combat Resolution and a Unit Strength of 32). Gnoblar are cheap. Thus, if a player traded one Ogre for about 20 Gnoblar, against the same Spearmen, the Ogre player can get the +3 bonus from the Gnoblar ranks and a total Unit Strength of 41.

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST OGRES

- A. A unit of Ogres in ranks is a huge target, both in terms of shooting targets and close combat. War machine fire will surely cause plenty of damage to such a unit. A unit that large will also be rather unwieldy. Thus, creative use of terrain and units of Scouts, Flyers, or Fast Cavalry can be used to slow the Ogre unit to a crawl and set them up for a flank charge by a unit of Knights or a concerted charge by two or three units. If nothing else, with that many points in one unit, your opponent can't possibly have that many more troops on the table (unless all are Gnoblar). As such, eliminating the unit will garner a heap of Victory Points.
- B. Since Ogres are so fast, you may be able to take advantage of their speed in various ways to get the charge on them rather than being charged. In scenarios where you are given the choice, electing to take the 2nd turn could prove advantageous. The Ogres will move first, allowing you to charge them as they move closer. For shooting armies, deploying slightly back from the front line of the Deployment Zone could throw off Ogre players who are used to charging in the 2nd turn. Deploying as such will give your models more time to shoot the oncoming hordes of Ogres.
- C. Since Hunters cannot join units, they can be sent packing with a decent amount of shooting or a unit's rank bonuses and standard in close combat. Crossbows, handguns, great weapons, and other such weapons will make short work of a Hunter and Sabretusks.
- D. Gnoblar are cheap and have the stat line to prove it. While the minimum unit size of a Gnoblar unit is 20, at Toughness 3 and Leadership 5, any sort of Leadership-based test will send them heading for the hills. Units such as Screaming Skull Catapults, Banshees, Warfire Throwers, and Flame Cannons are great for getting rid of any lingering Gnoblar units you might come across.

Orcs & Goblins are war-like creatures that can be found throughout the Warhammer world. Only a powerful leader can unite the disparate mobs of greenskins from various tribes into a cohesive army. Once the internal bickering stops, an Orc & Goblin army is like a massive green tidal wave that crashes across the landscape and leaves only broken destruction and ruin in its wake

No other army in Warhammer can match the diverse (but all maniacal) troop types of an Orc & Goblin force. The challenge for the commander is to integrate the wide range of units into a single fighting force. Greenskins suffer from Animosity (a rule that forces models from the same army to fight each other) and have many of their own specialty troops and rules. As such, the army tends to stretch out of a commander's hands at some point in nearly every game. Wily generals learn to expect and exploit this battlefield madness rather than trying to control it

When working correctly, Orcs & Goblins throw an astounding assortment of threats of

For a little while, Orc Warboss Grugski Skullsplitta had everything going his way. His Boyz had reached the High Elf battle lines and really given them Skinnies a poundin'! The Night Goblin Spearmen were supposed to be right alongside the Boyz, but the little runts must'a run off. Of course, no one noticed this until the cavalry hit the Boyz in the flank. Despite chopping down two of the pointy ears himself, Grugski could not keep his Boyz from leggin' it.

Grugski had never seen his Boyz move so fast as they fled haphazardly to the rear. Wheeling to catch their escaping prey, the High Elven Silver Helms quickly gained ground. All would have been lost but for the timely intervention of the Trolls. The three enormous Stone Trolls, who were supposed to be on the right flank but instead had spent the majority of the battle shuffling stupidly along the empty fields, rose up and battered the oncoming High Elves. In amazement at the fury of the carnage, Grugski and his Boyz held up to watch the last Elf plucked out of his saddle and bitten in two by the inspired Trolls.

"Er, jus' like I planned it, innit?" Grugski suggested strongly to the banner bearer who was sneaking up to reclaim his spot at Grugski's side.

varying degrees at the foe. When facing large blocks of Orc Boyz, fast Goblin Wolf Riders on the flanks, and Night Goblins with their hidden Fanatics, the enemy has too many targets. Add in creatures like the tiny Snotlings, who are not hard-hitting but can tie up even the most powerful units, or a mighty Giant that can wipe out even heavily armored Knights, and you compound your enemy's plight. Serious threats like Charots, Boar Boyz, or Black Orcs are such a menace that often the enemy will concentrate on them, which allows the hordes to rampage unchecked. Successful greenskin Warlords have learned that there is no one sure thing. However, with enough weapons in the arsenal, something is going to get through and smash the enemy! Quantity has a quality all its own. If you can learn to laugh off horrendous casualties, you're well on your way to mastering the greenskin psyche

Collecting an Orc & Goblin Army

Core units are always great places to start collecting an army, and Orcs & Goblins have a vast selection of troop types to choose from. A few large blocks of Orc Boyz or Goblins (either Night Goblins with their specialty Fanatics or Goblins with their better Leadership) will make for an imposing center that doesn't cost many points. With an endless variety of ways to build an army, a greenskin Warlord must make some decisions. Overwhelming numbers, lots of fast-striking cavalry, war machines, and shock infantry are all options open to Orcs & Goblins, and it's possible to put a little of each element into a single force

Black Orcs and Boar Boyz are both formidable units that will be sure to draw a great amount of enemy fire! Trolls, with their ability to Regenerate, can pulverize enemy units as long as they overcome their own Stupidity! Savage Orcs are subject to Frenzy, and Squig Herds can tie up an entire enemy flank with bounding and biting creatures and Squig Hoppers

When it all works, you'll be the mastermind, but of course, even the best greenskin plans can all go wrong. Your own battle lines can end up mired with in-fighting while the enemy picks them off unit by unit. Unpredictability makes Orcs & Goblins both fun and frustrating. If you aren't prepared to see the total mayhem of your Goblin Fanatics whirling through your own troops, then perhaps Orcs & Goblins aren't the army for you

PAINTING TEETH, HORNS & CLAWS

From Snottlings to Giants, everything in the Orc & Goblin army has some type of bony or enamel body parts: teeth, nails, horns, or claws. Here's a quick way to paint them so that all the models in your army look ferocious and hungry!

STEP 1

To begin, prime the entire model with Chaos Black. This will be the base color.

STEP 2

Paint a layer of Bestial Brown across all the teeth, horns, and claws. Leave a small line of black around each of the edges.

STEP 3

Paint a layer of Bubonic Brown over the Bestial Brown. Paint the Bubonic Brown with a slightly jagged edge at the base of each tooth, horn, and claw.

STEP 4

Repeat Step 3 but use Bleached Bone instead of Bubonic Brown. You can stop here for a dirtier, nastier look for the teeth.

STEP 5

Add a final highlight with Skull White on each of the teeth, horns, and claws.

When painting the fur clothing on your Savage Orcs, try some exotic animal furs with stripes or spots!

TIPS

Search for some reference photos in magazines, in books, or on the internet and have them handy while you're painting. Animals to look for include zebras, leopards, cheetahs, tigers, giraffes, cows and more!

SNOW LEOPARD SPOTS

Step 1. First, paint the underlying fur with Fortress Grey. Drybrush the fur with Skull White as a highlight.

Step 2. Next, paint a large "U" with Chaos Black. Repeat them all over the fur.

Step 3. Finally, highlight the black spots with a 25/75 mix of Chaos Black and Codex Grey.

TIGER STRIPES

Step 1. First, paint the underlying fur with Blazing Orange over Dark Flesh. Drybrush the fur with Fiery Orange as a highlight.

Step 2. Using Chaos Black, paint a series of stripes on the fur.

Step 3. Finally, highlight the stripes with a 25/75 mix of Chaos Black and Codex Grey.

CORE UNITS

PAINTING WOLVES

Wolves are used throughout the Orc & Goblin army both as mounts and as beasts to pull Chariots. Try some of these techniques for painting the fur on your Wolves.

BROWN FUR

Step 1. After you prime the model Chaos Black, drybrush Scorched Brown over all of the fur.

Step 2. Next, drybrush the fur Bestial Brown.

Step 3. Drybrush the higher parts of the fur with Vornir Brown. Paint the fur of the belly with Codex Grey and the claws and teeth with Bubonic Brown. Use a 50/50 mix of Scab Red and Dwarf Flesh for the tongue. Wash the entire model with Flesh Wash. Paint the Wolf's eye with Skull White.

and teeth with Dwarf Flesh. Finish off the teeth and claws with Bleached Bone.

BLONDE FUR

Step 1. After you prime the model Skull White, paint it Bubonic Brown.

Step 2. Next, use Flesh Wash over the entire model.

Step 3. Drybrush the fur with a 50/50 mix of Bubonic Brown and Bleached Bone. Paint the teeth, claws, tongue, and eyes as described above.

Step 4. Drybrush the highest parts of the fur with Bleached Bone.

BLONDE ALTERNATE

Use a Brown Wash instead of the Flesh Wash. Paint the skin and drybrush the fur with a 50/50 mix of Bubonic Brown and Bleached Bone. Paint the belly with Bleached Bone and drybrush with Skull White. Highlight the skin with Bleached Bone.

PAINING TRIBAL MARKINGS

There are hundreds of Orc tribes across the Old World. Some of the more popular names are

- Blue Face
- Yellow Nose
- Purple Heads
- Yellow Tooth
- Red Arrow
- Grey Skull
- Brown Sword
- White Dag (triangle)

These are just a few. No matter which you choose, we recommend picking a single color and a simple design to paint such as dags or arrows. Tattoos don't have to be intricate tiny designs, especially for Orcs & Goblins.

You can also be creative with the location of the tattoos and war paint. They can be on Boar and Wolf fur, on half of a face, on an entire arm or hand, in a wide line across the head or arm, or on any other body part!

ORCS OF THE RED ARROW TRIBE

Here is a simple technique for painting dark tattoos or war paint onto Orc skin or even on Boars or Wolves.

Step 1
Paint the arrow design on the Orc's upper arm with Chaos Black.

Step 2
Highlight the arrow with Red Gore or a dark color of your choice, such as Regal Blue. Leave a black line around the edges.

Step 3
Paint the final highlight on the inside of the arrow with Blood Red or a lighter version of the previous color used, such as Enchanted Blue.

PAINTING BOAR FUR

We used Boars for this example, but you can easily use these techniques on Wolves as well. Don't be afraid to experiment with colors and techniques. If you mess up, just give the area a wash and repaint it. Keep in mind that Orc Boars are often penned up. Thus, they are usually filthy. This fact allows you some painting freedom. You can also borrow ideas from the Dwarf section on painting beards!

GREY FUR

Step 1
Spray the model black and drybrush with Shadow Gray followed by Codex Grey.

Step 2
Next drybrush Fortress Grey onto the higher parts of the model.

Step 3
Finally, gently drybrush a little white onto the highest areas.

BROWN FUR

Step 1
Prime the model white and paint it with a slightly thinned mix of Dark Flesh.

Step 2
Wash the model with Chaos Black.

Step 3
Once dry, drybrush the "higher" parts with Dark Flesh and then Vornir Brown.

Step 4
Finally, gently drybrush Bleached Orange onto the highest areas.

TAN FUR

Prime the model with Skull White and paint it with slightly thinned Bubonic Brown. Give the model a wash of a 50/50 mix of Bubonic Brown and Bestial Brown. Once dry, use Bubonic Brown to drybrush the higher parts of the model with Bleached Bone. Finally, gently drybrush Skull White onto the highest areas.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH ORCS & GOBLINS

- A. Large units of Goblins or Night Goblins with full command make excellent helpers for units of Monsters (such as Trolls or Giants), chariots, or cavalry. While the other units provide the hammer-blow hitting power, the Gobboos add outnumbering, ranks, and a banner to the combat resolution which will usually result in a broken enemy unit.
- B. An Orc & Goblin army is not one normally thought of as being magic-heavy. You can spring a nasty surprise on an opponent by bringing an army tooled-out to sling spells of the Big Waaagh! Many spells of the Big Waaagh are very effective and easy to cast, especially ones such as Foot of Gork. Target expensive, elite units (such as Inner Circle Knights or Chaos Knights) with these spells, and you can wreak severe damage.
- C. The Orc & Goblin army can field very inexpensive war machines in the form of the 35-point Spear Chukkas. It's easy to load up on several of these war machines (another tactic that may surprise many opponents), and use a spell such as Mork Save Uzi to reroll misses from the Spear Chukka's relatively mediocre BS3. A volley of accurate war machine fire can shut down quite a few of the tactics mentioned elsewhere in this catalog.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST ORCS & GOBLINS

- A. Goblins can form large units for a low points cost, but they also have low Leadership. Flying units can stop these units from marching, while any Terror-causing units are likely to send these little fellows heading for the hills at the first opportunity.
- B. The strategy for stopping a magic-focused army from ruling the battlefield is similar no matter the caster. Judicious use of Dispel Dice and Dispel Scrolls will keep your Knights riding towards the enemy, and if you can target the Shamans, let 'em have it! Orc & Goblin Shamans are not nearly as difficult to kill as the other Lords and Heroes in this army.
- C. Spear Chukkas may be inexpensive, but part of that low points cost is represented in the weak combat ability of their crews. Any Flying unit can handle Spear Chukkas just by tearing into the Gobbo crew, and shooting or magic missiles can be equally effective.

SKAVEN

The Gutter Runners had taken out all the Dwarf artillery, and the main Clanrats had advanced unopposed. In short order, the remaining units were gathered from their bone-gnawing and reorganized to give chase to the retreating Dwarf-things.

"Oh honored of Leaders, allow Stormvermin to lead the kill. Yes, Yes?" pestered the Fangleader of the Stormvermin, vying to steal the glory of the final assault.

But Snekt was no novice at fighting the Dwarf-things underground. Chasing Dwarf-things into their lair was always deadly. It would serve the ambitious Fangleader right to turn the corner and meet a unit of the thickly armored Dwarf-things. But no, thought Snekt, I'll need Stormvermin later.

"No, No, not Stormvermin. Bring up Pawleader Chitter and his pack." demanded the Chieftain. Bristling with honor, Pawleader Chitter brought up his unit of Skaven Slaves to lead the advance further into the Dwarf stronghold. Snekt's tail twitched at his own cleverness.

Skaven are a race of evil ratmen who have gnawed a series of tunnels and an entire underkingdom beneath the surface of the Warhammer world. Occasionally erupting forth in a seething horde, the Skaven seek nothing less than world domination.

Fighting Style

Skaven armies can muster a variety of deadly threats and different troop types. Two cornerstones of Skaven warfare are the massed attack and dirty underhanded tricks. The massed attack part is easy. Great masses of Clanrats and Skaven Slaves are affordable and can anchor the center of a vermin attack. Occasionally, these troops will win a battle, but more often than not, they will serve to tie up the foe and to pin him in place. Clanrats may be accompanied by Weapon Teams wielding ingenious devices of the Skaven that can be used to thin down the foe. While enemy units are pinned by large blocks of Clanrats, additional units may attack the foe on the sides.

Skaven have no concept of valor, and a stab in the back is every bit as good as an up-front challenge – in fact, it's probably a lot better. Poisoned Attacks, sneaky infiltrators, and hidden Assassins are all part of the Skaven arsenal. Even better, Skaven armies are allowed to fire into combat with their special Life Is Cheap rule. This tactic works fantastically well with large units of Skaven Slaves and Clanrats, as they will tie up the foe while Poisoned Wind Globadiers and Weapons Teams pour fire into the combat. The vermin hordes can well afford to fight a battle of attrition, and as the Poisoned Wind Globes ignore armor saves, they are sometimes the best way to rid yourself of the foe's best troops. Nothing wounds a Knight's pride like being lured into a trap where skill at arms and fighting mean little!

Collecting a Skaven Army

All armies are required to field a minimum number of Core units, and so it makes sense to begin a new army with Core choices. For Skaven, this means Clanrats, Clanrats, and more Clanrats. As Skaven armies get Leadership bonuses for large units, it makes sense to field a few larger units with deep ranks. Additional Core choices (although they may never outnumber the Clanrats) are Giant Rats, Night Runners, Skaven Slaves, and Poisoned Wind Globadiers. Stormvermin have better Weapon Skill and equipment and can make for a nasty surprise for an enemy expecting only Clanrats.

Skaven players also have many options for filling out the edges of their hordes. Gutter Runners are elite Scouts that may tunnel or infiltrate onto the battlefield for sneak attacks. Warplock Jezzails and the dreaded Warp-Lightning Cannon are long-ranged weapons that can rain death on the foe as the bulk of the Skaven army skitters closer. Rat Ogres can form shock attack units capable of delivering quite a blow, and Plague Monks, with their Toughness and Frenzy, can make a formidable unit as well. Plague Censer Bearers may accompany Plague Monks, and their poisoned censers create a deadly cloud of warpstone vapors that can slay a foe before combat even begins.

Skaven Characters can bolster units, and specialty Heroes like a Master Moulder, Warlock Engineer, or Assassin can turn an important fight the vermin way. The most powerful character a Skaven can field is a Grey Seer, a warpstone-crazed sorcerer of mighty powers that can ride to battle atop the wicked contraption known as a Screaming Bell.

Kenneth Somerton won first place at the Canadian Games Day Golden Demon Painting Competition with his Clan Eshar Skaven regiment.

CORE UNITS

PAINTING A CLANRAT FAST

The Skaven army is a horde, and the minimum unit size of Core regiments is 20. Here, we take a look at how to paint a Clanrat for your Skaven army quickly. Don't worry about being too neat as you work. Concentrate on cranking out numbers. Once you put all your models in units, you'll find that you have an impressive horde of Skaven.

STEP 1

After spraying the model with black primer, drybrush the fur with Vermin Brown.

STEP 2

Paint all metal areas with Boltgun Metal, cloth areas with Calachan Green, straps and leggings with Snakebite Leather, and the face, tail, and hands with Dwarf Flesh.

STEP 3

Apply a wash of Flesh Wash over the entire model except for the fur areas.

STEP 4

Highlight the edges of all areas painted with the original colors used in Step 2. Finish the base of the model with sand or flock to match the rest of your horde.

CORE UNITS

PAINTING WARPSTONE

A lot of models in the Skaven army feature warpstone, magical crystalline stones that radiate corrupting magical energy. Because warpstone is prominent on so many Skaven models, it's worth paying a bit of attention to these areas. Below we outline a simple but effective method for painting warpstone.

STEP 1

Start with a basecoat of Dark Angels Green.

STEP 2

Highlight with Snot Green.

STEP 3

Paint Scorpion Green in patches as the final highlight.

STEP 4

To create a glassy effect, paint some Gloss Varnish on the areas of warpstone as a final step.

PAINTING CLAN ESHIN

Here are some simple techniques to give your Skaven that pestilent look.

STEP 1. Undercoat the entire regiment with Chaos Black Paint the robes with a mix of equal parts of Bleached Bone and Skull White. Make sure to leave the undercoat showing in the folds of cloth.

STEP 2. Mix Brown Ink with Chaos Black paint, white glue, and water. Apply the ink wash onto the robes. Using your thumb, remove any excess ink. While the miniature is still wet, take a small brush and dab spots of Green Ink onto the cloak.

STEP 3. Once the ink wash is dry, finish off the robes by drybrushing an equal parts mix of Skull White and Bleached Bone over the top.

STEP 4. With the robes painted, you can pick out the other parts of the model. Use Tin Bitz for the weapons. Bronzed Flesh mixed with Bleached Bone for the flesh and tails. Vermin Brown for the fur, Camo Green on the banner and scrolls. Bleached Bone for the teeth and pustules, and Scorched Brown for the staff.

STEP 5. Mix Chestnut Ink, Scorched Brown, white glue, and water together and apply it to the weapons, flesh, staff's belts and parchment. Paint Red Ink onto the pustules to make them stand out.

STEP 6. To finish the unit, you just need to add some final touches. Drybrush the weapons with Chainmail. Use Brazen Brass over the bells and armor. Apply a Camo Green highlight to the banner and scrolls. Use a mix of Terracotta and Scorched Brown on the raised areas of the staff. Paint the skin with a mix of Bronzed Flesh and Bleached Bone. Highlight the teeth and nails with Bleached Bone.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH SKAVEN

- A A Clan Skryre Skaven army can produce a staggering number of ranged weapon attacks with Jezzail Teams, Ratling Guns, and the Warp Lightning Cannon (and they can even shoot into combat!). This kind of army can be very difficult to beat, since you can train a devastating salvo of shots into nearly any unit you want, and armor is very little protection.
- B Poisoned Wind Globadiers can Wound opponents on a 4+ regardless of Toughness. Aim this unit at tough targets like Monsters, characters, chariots, and war machines.
- C Gutter Runners are good Scouts. However, when they are upgraded to a Tunneling Team, they can make short work of war machines or lone characters and also can wreak havoc where your opponent least expects it.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST SKAVEN

- A A force consisting mostly or fully of cavalry has an even shot at taking out the Clan Skryre army if the cavalry can manage a mass charge. Tomb Scorpions or Dwarf Miners are excellent at digging up from below to charge the shooter units. Keep in mind that the Clan Skryre army described above is an all-or-nothing gamble – the more you can do to disrupt his lines, the greater the risk that his army will begin to Panic and run off the board.
- B A good round of shooting or some magic missile spells ought to put the kibosh on Poisoned Wind Globadiers fairly quickly. If you attack them aggressively in the early stages of the game, you can potentially wipe out the Poisoned Wind Globadiers and cause Panic checks in nearby Skaven units.
- C Gutter Runners and Tunneling Teams can be countered effectively by shooting. A full-strength Gutter Runner unit has to suffer only four casualties before it must test for Panic – a Tunneling Team only three! Because neither unit has any armor, a little luck is all that's needed to send those sneaky rats running off. With a fair amount of luck, you may even be able to wipe out entire units of them!

TOMB KINGS

When the Bretonnian merchant caravan first spotted the dust cloud of travelers out in the open desert, there was much speculation. The exciting prospect of meeting fellow merchants along these desolate trade routes slowly evolved to worrisome rumors. The native guides had spread stories of long buried evils and an ancient power that remained in these desert lands. Gradually, everyone in the party realized that the dust cloud would intersect the course of the caravan.

As the oncoming dust cloud closed the distance and crested the last sand dune, the ghastly nature of the approaching caravan was revealed. Columns of skeletal remains of warriors from some ancient civilization were marching upon the caravan. High overhead, the hungry desert vultures began circling lower and lower, anticipating the feast.

Many thousands of years ago, the ancient realm of Nehekara was a vibrant civilization of Men that rose like an oasis of life in the vast deserts of the Warhammer world. But long ago, dark necromantic magic tainted and destroyed the realm and left only corpses and the remains of ruined cities and mighty tombs. The land was cursed, but soon the dead rose up and reclaimed their kingdom.

Fighting Style

No force in the Warhammer world relies as heavily on its characters as the Tomb Kings army. After all, the soldiers have risen out of their sandy graves only because of the incantations of the Liche Priests and the indomitable will of the Tomb Kings and Princes. While Tomb Kings units are solid and never rout, they are not the hardest-hitting or most skillful troops in the game. There are some fearsome combatants in the army list (Bone Giants and Ushabti for instance), but what makes the Tomb Kings so deadly is their ability to use incantations to gain extra movement, shooting, and fighting from their Undead legions. Additionally, the character models can resurrect casualties and continually bring back models their foes have destroyed. Like the very sands of their desert home, the numbers of the Tomb King army can seem limitless to a dismayed opponent.

Tomb Kings players can use their powerful characters and ability to control the Undead to make an army with a lot of missile weapons, a fast attack force of hard-hitting Chariots and Bone Giants, or a fearsome frontal assault force with outflanking possibilities. With its myriad of spell casters and special deploying creatures like Tomb Swarms and Tomb Scorpions, a wizened and veteran Tomb Kings player can keep his foe guessing until the final (and fatal) attack is launched.

Collecting a Tomb Kings Army

The best two things to begin a Tomb Kings army with are Skeletons and some character models. In order to raise a mighty Undead host, you must have Skeletons. There are a variety of options and equipment (Skeleton Light Horsemen, Skeletons with spears and shields, Skeletons with bows, and more), and a player would be wise to consider how he intends to use each unit before starting in with the painting and assembling. An army must also contain at least one Tomb King or Prince to be its General and at least one Liche Priest or Liche High Priest to be the army's Hierophant (the one responsible for waking the entire force from slumber).

When expanding a Tomb Kings army, it is always advisable to take every character model that you can to ensure plenty of incantations to drive the legions. Once characters are assembled, players can fill out their army with not only rank after rank of Undead warriors but also things like the powerful Screaming Skull Catapult, flying Carrion, elite Tomb Guard, or Undead Constructs like the guardian statues known as Ushabti, the terrifying Bone Giant, or the Tomb Scorpions. Tomb Swarms are ideal to burst out of the sand and tie up enemy units. It is next to impossible to have too many Skeletons, and luckily they are fast to paint up and will look great in your army.

Yukari Yamamoto's Casket of Souls won second place in the Warhammer Large Model category at the 2004 Canadian Games Day Golden Demon painting competition.

As with most Warhammer armies, the best place to start recruiting your forces is with a plastic regiment boxed set. In the case of the Tomb Kings, the Skeleton Warriors boxed set is the obvious choice. With the contents of this boxed set, you can assemble a regiment of 16 plastic Skeleton Warriors, including command to take to battle on the sands of Khemri. You also have the option of arming them one of three different ways. Your Skeletons can have hand weapons, spears, or bows (all three of which are shown here). While there are plenty of other troop types to choose from, the foundations of any good Tomb Kings army are plenty of animated skeletal remains.

TOMB KINGS GOLD

The gold on most of the weapons, equipment and other accouterments that the Tomb Kings possess generally has a distinctly aged look to it, as you might expect since these items have been entombed with their owners for centuries. Here's our method for achieving that "died-in" look.

Step 1. Undercoat with black and basecoat with a mix of one part Shining Gold and one part Vermin Brown

Step 2. Give the entire gold area a thinned wash of Scorched Brown

Step 3. Highlight with a mix of three parts Shining Gold to one part Vermin Brown

Step 4. Add the final level of highlight with unmixed Shining Gold

More tips on painting gold can be found in the Dark Elf and Necron sections in this very catalog

STEP-BY-STEP SKELETONS

Here are a couple of relatively quick and easy methods for painting Skeletons in a hurry without sacrificing painting quality. After a few rounds of either method, your legions of Undead will become too numerous for opponents to withstand.

Here is the simplest method for painting a Skeleton in a hurry.

Undercoat the model with Skull White spray.
Apply a wash of Brown ink thinned with an equal amount of water.

Drybrush the entire model with Bleached Bone.

Here's a more detailed method used by the 'Eavy Metal team to paint the U.K. Studio army featured in White Dwarf.

Undercoat the model with Skull White.
Apply a wash of Brown ink thinned with an equal quantity of water.
Give the weapon an undercoat of Chaos Black after the ink dries.

Drybrush Bleached Bone across the body of the model.
Paint the weapon with a basecoat of Brazen Brass and then give it a thin wash of Chestnut Ink.

Apply highlights of Skull White to raised sections and ridges of bone. Pay particular attention to the highlights on the face.
Highlight the weapon with an equal mix of Brazen Brass and Mithril Silver.

PAINTING TIPS

As you'll notice in the Colors of War section later on, shields are a prominent part of the Tomb Kings army, can be used to make your army look unique, and will help differentiate between units. Using colors that contrast with the bone that makes up most of the force will help your models stand out on the battlefield. We have used a simple color scheme for our army and this example here, but as the examples in the Colors of War section show, you can use more complex patterns to personalize your shields. The shield in the example below is shown separate from the sprue, but shields can be painted more easily and quickly if they're left on the sprue. Try it each way and see which works best for you.

STEP 1

Undercoat the shield black or white (the colors in this instance dictate the use of a black undercoat)

STEP 2

Basecoat the shield with your chosen colors

STEP 3

Shade the colors in the recesses of the shield and put an ink wash on any areas painted with metallic colors

STEP 4

Highlight the edges and other raised surfaces with lighter shades of color and paint the original metallic color over the inked areas

DESERT BASES

At first glance, all the sand on which the armies of the Tomb Kings trod to war may look the same. However, on closer inspection, one might see a number of variations in the color, texture, and other features. Below, we describe a few different ways to base your army. All of the bases below were undercoated white.

Basecoat with Vomut Brown. Drybrush progressively lighter highlights of Bubonic Brown, Bleached Bone, and Skull White.

Basecoat with Desert Yellow. Drybrush progressively lighter highlights of Kommando Khaki, Bleached Bone, and Skull White.

You can also add extra character to your bases by using spare bitz from the Skeleton Sprue or metal bitz like the horned skull or the classic Tomb Swarm scorpion shown. Try out different bitz and see what works for you.

"THE DIP"

"The dip" is an alternate way of painting models. It allows you to paint loads of miniatures quickly. In fact, whole units can be painted in an evening, an army in a week. The basic idea behind it is a complete model wash. The process is to basecoat the miniature entirely, dip it, let it dry, and then finish the base on the model. The "dip" itself is a stain or a colored varnish (found at a hardware store). In this example we've used Behr EuroColour Water Base Wood Stain Victorian Mahogany. Some water-based products can be diluted to get the right color consistency for your particular projects. Dark stains work best. Some varnishes, like Minwax, also provide a protective coating when finished.

Undercoat the models with white. You can either paint the body with Bleached Bone or leave it white. Basecoat the rest of the model before dipping.

Fill a large-mouthed cup with your varnish/stain mixture and dip the entire model into it. Use a brush to pull the excess material off of the model.

Be sure to put down plenty of paper to soak up any spills or drips as you're dipping. Let the model dry overnight.

Finish the bases to match your army, and you're well on your way.

You can use this method on any number of armies, but you might have to practice with some test models to see what the colors will do and how you like the effect.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH TOMB KINGS

A. Tomb Kings armies are capable of charging on the 1st turn. When deploying your forces, delay placing Carrion until your opponent has placed his war machines. Once he has done so, put your unit of Carrion in a position no more than 36" or so away from the war machine. In the Movement Phase advance toward your chosen war machine (lone Wizards also make great targets!), but keep your Liche Priest within 12" of the Carrion. In the Magic Phase, use your Tomb King's incantation to fire your Screaming Skull Catapults – your opponent is very likely to try and stop this incantation. Next your Liche Priest can move the Carrion with his incantation. You should be able to engage in hand-to-hand combat in the 1st turn and take out a major threat with a small 72-point unit. Even if the Carrion fail to destroy the enemy models, the war machine (or other expensive target) will be tied up in combat while you advance during the next turn. If the enemy has no war machines, you can pick on a character (even if he is in a unit) or simply get behind the enemy to prevent marching.

B. Another bit of fun can be had with a simple unit of three Chariots with the Banner of the Undying Legion. Most people see Chariots and overestimate the threat they present. Many Warhammer players are used to seeing Chaos, Orc, and even Elf Chariots and the damage they can do. When presented with three Chariots, it is easy for an opponent to focus on them too much. Eventually, most opponents will realize that three Tomb Kings Chariots are less of a threat than one Chaos Chariot. Until then, however, many opponents will throw a lot of ranged attacks and magic missiles into this unit in hopes of killing it. Luckily for you, the Banner of the Undying Legion will keep it going, and going, and going. Try advancing your Chariots toward enemy shooting units (like archers and crossbowmen). These units will usually shoot at your Chariots. Next, have your Chariots retreat and begin the healing process. Most of the time, the opponent will not want his hard work to go to waste and will usually use two Dispel Dice to prevent the banner from working. If that happens, you have gained a great advantage. Because your opponent has used up some of his Dispel Dice, you will be able to cast the incantations that really matter!

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST TOMB KINGS

A. Clearly, Carrion are not to be underestimated. If you fear that a Tomb Kings opponent may be trying to single out a vulnerable character or war machine, don't hesitate to sacrifice a Dispel Scroll to shut down the Carrion's charge in general. Shutting down the crucial incantations is one of the best ways to defeat a Tomb Kings army!

B. This Chariot trick can be countered simply – kill the Hierophant or save your Dispel Dice for the important incantations! Slaying the Hierophant will destroy most of the fringe units such as Carrion and the Screaming Skull Catapults. It can be worth nearly any sacrifice to hunt down and destroy the Hierophant, so don't be afraid to take losses in the attempt.

VAMPIRE COUNTS

The land of Sylvania is a cheerless place that travelers are warned to avoid at all costs. It is full of dark tangled forests and barren hills crowned by gloomy ruins. Over 500 years ago, the dreaded Von Carstein Vampires took hold of the country and marched openly to war against the Empire. To this day, the Sylvanian people are backward. They fear to go out after nightfall and surround themselves with charms and banes. However, all that ancient evil was banished long ago. The recent outcries of the peasants over missing family members and the return of the bad old days are nothing but rumor. The Sylvanians always were a superstitious people.

Long-dead warriors march again, this time under tattered banners raised by skeletal hands. Evil magics awaken corpses and bind ethereal creatures to fight once more for cruel masters bent on revenge conquest, and immortality.

Greg Smalton's Grave Guard won second place at the 2004 Atlanta Golden Demon painting competition.

Joe Hill's Graveyard Encounter won first place at the 2004 U.K. Golden Demon painting competition in the Duel Category.

Fighting Style

The Undead fight differently than any other army in the Warhammer world. Relying on fear, shambling hordes of Skeletons and Zombies advance to tie down the foe. Fell Bats and Dire Wolves attack along the flanks to negate enemy ranks, while Grave Guard and Black Knights wield their deadly Wight Blades to slice down the foe. The Ethereal Banshee can disrupt enemy units with its Ghostly Howl, and the deadly Black Coach causes Terror and hits units like a Chariot. Even worse, with their powerful Necromantic magics, the Undead can replenish casualties or even summon whole new units of Skeletons or Zombies.

The fighting style of a Vampire Count's army partly depends on which Bloodline the player selects. There are five Bloodlines: Von Carstein, Necrarch, Blood Dragon, Lahmia, and Strigo. While all Vampires are imposing enemies and use the same troop types, each Bloodline has a different specialty that can greatly affect a player's overall strategy. For instance, Blood Dragons are the most powerful fighters of all Vampire kind, but in gaining their combat skills, their Magic is reduced. Blood Dragon players will put more emphasis on breaking the foe in hand to hand and rely less on the Magic Phase. The Lahmia are less skilled in weaponry than Blood Dragons are but compensate with a range of beguiling and seducing abilities that can freeze attackers and possibly even cause them to switch sides. Necrarchs are the weakest in hand-to-hand combat but conversely are the most powerful Necromancers.

Collecting a Vampire Count Army

Before a Vampire Count can begin his or her quest for domination, some Core troops must be raised. Skeletons and Zombies serve as the mainstay for most Vampire Count armies. While neither of these troop types will win many fair fights on their own (without a little bit of luck), they are excellent at pinning the enemy in place. Ghouls, with their Poisoned Attacks and Skirmish formation can make a threatening flanking unit.

When enlarging an army, a few harder hitting units aren't a bad idea. Grave Guard, Black Knights and the Black Coach will make even the staunchest of foes pause. Banshees and Spirit Hosts can be wounded only by magical attacks and make for great battlefield distractions. Fell Bats and Dire Wolves are speedy additions, great for taking out enemy war machines or small flanking units.

The cold heart of the army that drives the whole rotting force forward is, without a doubt, the Vampires. A Vampire Lord or Count can more than make up for the combat inadequacies of Skeletons and Zombies. Additionally lesser Vampires (Thralls), Necromancers, Wight Lords, or Wraiths can lead units of the Undead. Rise up and lead your dark legions to blood and victory!

Large regiments of Skeletons form the backbone of the Vampire Count army. Skeletons are the standard Undead troops. You can either buy lots of them without equipment or take fewer well-equipped ones and plan to raise some more during the game with magic spells.

This 281-page rulebook contains painting and modeling guides, background, and the full rules for fielding a Vampire Count army.

The Skeleton Regiment boxed set is a great place to start building your Vampire Count army. The battlefields of the Old World are strewn with the graves of many nameless warriors who have fallen in combat and been consigned to a hasty resting place or left upon the ground until the carnage. Even in death, there is no rest for the fallen warriors, for they can be summoned back to the world of the living by black sorcery. All that these undead fighters can recall of their mortal life are faint memories of battles fought long ago. All that they feel is the compulsion to fight and to obey their masters.

PAINTING ZOMBIE FLESH

When flesh is Undead, it takes on a vastly different color (and odor) than living flesh. Therefore, when painting the skin on your Zombies, keep in mind that almost any color can be used. Here are a few examples with greys, purples, browns, and whites. Experiment with other colors to see what putrid looks you can create by mixing paints and inks.

PURPLE SKIN

Step 1. Basecoat the model with a thinned coat of Codex Grey and let it dry. Give the skin a wash of 50/50 Codex Grey and Liche Purple.

Step 2. Use thinned Codex Grey for the first highlights.

Step 3. Add Fortress Grey to the Codex Grey and paint the final highlights.

ROTTING FLESH

Step 1. Paint all the skin with Rotting Flesh and let it dry. Give the skin a wash of a 50/50 mix of Vermin Brown and Dark Angels Green.

Step 2. Paint the first highlights with thinned Rotting Flesh. Aim to keep the highlights subtle.

Step 3. Paint the final highlights with a mix of 50/50 Rotting Flesh and Skull White.

FELL BAT CONVERSION

To make Fell Bats into even darker creatures that stalk the night and hunger after the blood of the living, Rob Hawkins did a little converting. For a more dynamic pose, Rob added Wyvern wings from our Warmaster range to these already monstrous Fell Bats.

CONVERTING

Cut the wings off a Fell Bat and glue the body to a 40-mm base with a length of wire. Once the glue dries, pin and glue the Warmaster Wyvern wings to the back of the creature.

PUTTY

Fill in any gaps between the wings and the body with putty. Using a sharp tool, texture the putty to blend in with the rest of the model.

BASING

Base the model with sand and other appropriate bits. This model uses plastic tombstones from Mouse Models, a company that makes cemetery models.

PAINTING

Prime the model black and start with a basecoat of Scorched Brown. Highlight the skin and fur with Beshal Brown. Finish with a highlight of Bleached Bone over the fur.

The dead do not rest easy in the Old World. Ghosts, shades, and specters of dead men return to haunt the land of the living. Some Vampires and the most twisted of Necromancers hold the knowledge to summon these miserable creatures and unleash them upon their enemies. When summoned, spirits gather together into vast hosts and advance on the enemy. They are silent and incorporeal but no less frightening because their touch is enough to freeze the hearts of mortals.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WOODS WITH VAMPIRE COUNTS

- A A Von Carstein Vampire Thrall with a great weapon, the Wolf Form bloodline power and the Flayed Hauberk can lead a unit of Dire Wolves as an extremely potent champion. This character is deadly in challenges and excellent against Chariots or Monsters. He and the unit are both very maneuverable.
- B A Strigoi Vampire with the Bat Form bloodline power can accompany (but not join) a unit of Fell Bats to create an extremely potent flying fighting force. These models can move around the battlefield very quickly and bring a large number of Attacks to bear on nearly any unit you choose.
- C A Blood Dragon Vampire Lord mounted on a Zombie Dragon with the Cursed Book and the Blademaster bloodline power can be a terrifying opponent in combat. He is extremely difficult to hit (-2 to hit rolls, -1 Attack to one enemy model), much less hurt. Add in the Zombie Dragon's fighting ability and the Vampire Lord's own Attacks, and you have one very impressive Lord character.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST VAMPIRE COUNTS

- A This character can be problematic, but this unit is rather vulnerable to shooting. A reasonably strong unit can charge the Dire Wolves and take them out with combat resolution. Alternatively, send in a Hero with a weapon that ignores armor saves to remove the Thrall before he can swing.
- B This combination is very powerful but vulnerable as well. Since the Strigoi is not part of the Fell Bat unit, he will suffer Wounds if the Undead are beaten in combat.
- C Although this model is difficult to kill, it's very much an "all the eggs in one basket" approach. Once you slay the General, the rest of the army crumbles very quickly! Target this character with war machines, particularly Cannons, to remove the threat.

WOOD ELVES

The Dwarfs marched in good order down the recently cleared forest road. Although no enemy had been seen in the area, the Dwarfs regarded everything but their own tunnels as potentially dangerous. Thus, the rugged mountain folk were always ready for battle. It was essential for the new mining colony to establish a good logging camp, and this road cut into the very center of the forest would supply fuel, timber, crossbeams, and more.

Singing harshly in their own gruff language, the Dwarfs passed within arm's length of the Wood Elf archers. As the column of troops passed a prearranged part of the road, the forest air hummed with sounds of released bowstrings. Arrows whistled from the undergrowth and seemed to sprout out of the Dwarfs' bodies. The missiles stuck into chests, protruded from beards, and even pierced through helmets. Grasping the arrows in amazement as their life-blood ran out of them, many Dwarfs dropped to the ground. The battle for the forest was begun, and already half of the Dwarfs had fallen.

Wood Elves are a rustic and secretive race that dwell for the most part in the Loren forest. Throughout the Old World there are additional enclaves of Wood Elves, always centered around large forests. Strangers or intruders are not welcomed into these sylvan kingdoms, and unwary travelers who wander past the often unmarked boundaries are likely to be met with a hail of arrows.

Fighting Style

The Wood Elves have mastered the art of the hit-and-run attack. As the entire army may discount any penalties for moving in a forest, a standard Wood Elf tactic is to harass encroaching enemies with missile fire, and then as the foe closes, the sylvan folk fade back into the safety of dense terrain. A tactical Wood Elf commander can use several units to provide enfilading fire against an enemy while the Elves prepare to scamper further into the woods if they are threatened. Just when an enemy is whittled down and confused, the Elves launch a fierce charge by hard-hitting specialty units like Warhawk Riders, Wardancers, Dryads, and Treemen.

Collecting a Wood Elf Army

The place to start with any new army is a few Core selections. Not only are such units a minimal requirement for the army, but they can form the center for any larger force you choose to build. For Wood Elves, it is hard to pass up Glade Guard. With a Ballistic Skill of 4 and a special rule that enables them to fire their longbows at Strength 4 at short range, Wood Elf Glade Guard are easily among the most feared missile troops in the game. Other Core choices are Glade Riders (Wood Elf cavalry), Eternal Guard, and Dryads.

After a Wood Elf commander has painted a few Core units, it is time for him to look at a few of the more exotic choices. Wardancers are not only colorful and fun to paint but have a variety of excellent close combat special abilities. Warhawk Riders are like cavalry but have the ability to fly. Scouts are excellent at slowing down the enemy. Waywatchers are equally talented small bands of archers, but they are even more experienced at using the woods to set ambushes. The Wild Riders of Kurnous are the personal guards of Orion, Lord of the Forest. These riders are Fast Cavalry and have several special rules that make them a force to be reckoned with on the battlefield. Treemen and Tree Kin are powerful creatures of the forest that are vast in Strength and Toughness. Continuing the nature theme, Great Eagles can also be called upon to aid a Wood Elf army.

CAMOUFLAGE

Since Wood Elves are a force that specializes in ambushes and surprise attacks, you may want to paint camouflage patterns on your models. Here are a few pointers.

PAINTED PATTERNS

Some Wood Elf models already have leaves and foliage sculpted as part of their cloaks and other details. Cloaks that have a few leaves on them are a good place to add freehand painted leaves.

Spirals are another good pattern to use. They break up the shape of the model and also tie the army together, as the spiral is a common motif in Wardancer tattoos and on Dryad bodies.

WASHES

Use washes to make random shapes that you will then detail further in later stages. For instance, paint the cloak Camo Green and then wash with thinned Green ink. Paint Brown ink stripes and then detail them further to suggest bark or woodgrain.

STIPPLING & SPLATTERING

To make small and random areas of color, try stippling and splattering. To make a snow cloak, use an old drybrush whose bristles have fanned out over time. Instead of painting by drawing the brush across the model, use a quick, repeated slapping motion to paint the model. You can use a similar "splattered paint" technique to create an autumn cloak like the one shown here. Use an old toothbrush to splatter the paint onto the model. When splatter painting, mask off other parts of the model to prevent them from being splattered or simply start with the cloak.

PAINTING FEATHERS

There are all sorts of ways to paint feathers. Below are some quick techniques that will allow you to get your Great Eagles and Warhawk Riders onto the tabletop in no time.

DARK BROWN

Over an undercoat of Chaos Black Spray Primer drybrush with Scorched Brown. Next, drybrush more lightly with Bestial Brown and then Bleached Bone.

LIGHT BROWN

Over a Chaos Black undercoat paint the model Codex Grey. Next, apply a thinned-down wash of Black Ink. Finish the feathered areas by drybrushing with Fortress Grey and then more lightly with Bleached Bone only on the outer edge.

DARK GREY

Paint a basecoat of Bubonic Brown over a Skull White spray undercoat. Wash the feathered areas with a thinned-down Flesh Wash. Once the wash dries, drybrush lightly with Bleached Bone.

LIGHT GREY

Prime the model with Skull White spray and then apply a basecoat of Shadow Grey. Drybrush with Space Wolves Grey and then with Skull White. Finally, apply a very light drybrush of Bleached Bone to bring a little warmth to the colors.

CONVERTING TREEMEN AND TREE KIN

Various parts from a number of ranges were used in the construction of these Treemen. The fat Treeman uses the torso of the Great Unclean One while the skinny Treeman uses Durthu's torso and the Blood Bowl Treeman's hips. Both use legs from Durthu and Warmaster Carrion bitz for branches.

Test fit the pieces before you glue anything. You'll need to do some sanding and shaping for the pieces to fit together well. Pin the pieces together.

Add a few more details like the larger branch, which was originally the club from the Abion Giant and the crow from the Nurgie Lord's signpost. Use green stuff to fill gaps and create smooth transitions from piece to piece.

The Treemen created in this way are great for representing Treeman Ancients. Similar techniques can be used to make a female Treeman and Branchwraiths. Just scale the figure down to the appropriate size.

TACTICS

TIPS FOR WINNING WITH WOOD ELVES

- A. With almost every unit in the army being Skirmishers, Fast Cavalry, or Flyers, the Wood Elves are easily the most maneuverable army in the game of Warhammer. Players that have a strong command of these three troop types will be able to run circles around their opponents. Avoid combat when it does not suit you, surround your enemy, and spring trap after trap to defeat armies that are larger and tougher.
- B. It's possible to field an entire army of nothing but Treemen, Dryads, and Tree Kin. While this all-Tree army will be low in numbers, very few opponents will expect to face an army of close combat monsters when preparing to do battle with Wood Elves. The element of surprise is your ally here. Move quickly to engage the enemy in combat before he has a chance to adjust his formations to face your combat-oriented force.
- C. With high maneuverability, the Wood Elves are great at slowing down the enemy to give their accurate missile troops time to take their toll on the enemy. Use Scouts, Skirmishers, Fast Cavalry, and other maneuverable troops to slay within 8" of enemy troops, prevent them from March moving, and fire away.

COUNTERTACTICS

TIPS FOR FIGHTING AGAINST WOOD ELVES

- A. One of the Wood Elves strengths, the high number of Skirmishing units, can also be one of their greatest weaknesses. If you can catch these units with a block of infantry or some hard cavalry, their lack of a rank bonus will almost ensure their defeat in combat. However beware of traps! Catching one small unit can result in being surrounded by three others – not a good trade-off.
- B. If a Wood Elf player surprises you with an all-Tree army, do your best to take advantage of the army's weaknesses. The all-Tree army will have few numbers. Try to gang up on small units and lone Treemen with powerful characters and fully ranked units of your own. With the rank and outnumbering bonuses, you should be able to counter the powerful Treemen, Tree Kin, and Dryads.
- C. Most units that will be assigned the duty of slowing down your troops and preventing you from marching will be small and relatively weak in combat. Use whatever you have at your disposal that can effectively threaten these enemy units: your own Skirmishers or Fast Cavalry, heavy cavalry, accurate missile troops, some spells, and some artillery pieces.

WARHAMMER SIEGE

Captain von Blitterstein gazed out over the parapets and fought back despair. Although cloaked in night, the enemy bore torches, and their lights were beyond counting. The harsh shouting of Orcs could be heard just outside of cannon range. More ominously, the distant hammering, sawing, and cursing could only mean that the greenskins were building siege machines. Tomorrow's light would undoubtedly reveal hastily assembled battering rams, ladders, and siege towers. The devices would be crudely constructed, almost comical, but von Blitterstein knew the dangers of such devices and had no intention of laughing.

Before the morning assault, the catapults would be assembled and pushed forward into range under the cover of darkness. The timbers, groaning and straining under severe tension, would soon heave great boulders to smash into the castle walls. The Empire cannon crews had already been assembled and briefed. Each cannon would have to attempt to out-duel and destroy the enemy machines before damage could breach the wall. A single well-placed cannonball could smash the greenskin catapults into a ruined pile of broken kindling – but there were so few cannon that defeat seemed inevitable.

By morning, the overwhelming numbers of Orcs would be revealed. Dozens of ladders would be flung up against the walls, wheeled battering rams would smash into the gates, and enormous siege towers would be pushed forward to unleash hordes of troops on the battlements. Sigmar preserve us, thought the Empire Captain, it is going to be a hard fight.

Below: Rob Kendra's amazing scratch-built Empire castle has far more flair and style than the rugged strongholds of the Empire

One of the ultimate challenges for Warhammer players is the siege battle. Sieges are also a chance for modelers and terrain makers to have some fun as well.

Very simply, a siege battle takes place when the Defenders are protected by defensive terrain. The defensive terrain could represent protective walls, hedgerows, or natural barriers. Most often, however, defensive terrain means specially constructed fortifications to ward off enemies. The castle or fortress is the pinnacle of all defensive structures.

SIEGES IN WARHAMMER

The rules for playing sieges in Warhammer can be found in the Warhammer rulebook. There is an entire Appendix section dedicated to the rules for scaling walls, battering down gates, bombarding castle walls, and more. Additional rules, scenarios and army upgrades (like camouflaged Wood Elf towers and ironclad Dwarf fortresses) can be found in The General's Compendium.

On the following pages, you will find the Warhammer Fortress and Siege Tower for conducting your own siege battles.

The Warhammer Fortress is an easy way to have a castle in an instant. The fortress is also a fantastic base for modelers to start from when creating their own defensive works. Really ambitious terrain makers can check out the Games Workshop web site for more castle-making ideas.

A siege game can be as simple as a small band of warriors trying to throw down a lonely watchtower or can be as vast and elaborate as an assault to capture a sprawling enemy fortress.

Whether you are reducing the local Vampire Count's castle to rubble or attempting to storm a walled Empire city, a good Warhammer game can be transformed into an amazing siege battle with the right materials.

THE LORD OF THE RINGS

STRATEGY BATTLE GAME

*One Ring to rule them all, One Ring to find them,
One Ring to bring them all, and in the darkness bind them.*

Middle-earth on Your Tabletop

The Lord of The Rings Strategy Battle Game allows players to re-create all the action of Middle-earth. Begin the journey as the four Hobbits set out across the Shire, join the Fellowship, and dare to enter the murky dangers of Moria. You can charge with the Riders of Rohan to rid the land of Orcs or help stem the tide of Saruman's Uruk-hai at the Siege of Helm's Deep. From small skirmish games revolving around the well-known heroes to the massive battles of the Last Alliance or Pelennor Fields, The Lord of The Rings game puts the excitement right onto your tabletop.

The Range

The Lord of The Rings range of Citadel Miniatures contains all the figures a collector will want to represent his or her favorite character, monster, or troop type from the movies. Even better, gamers will find the extensive range and variety of figures ideal for gathering models to play all the scenarios from the action scenes of the movies. It is even possible to build up great armies for larger and more glorious battles.

The Lord of The Rings Strategy Battle Game was available originally in three separate sets, one for each film. However, a complete rulebook that encompasses all three sets is now available for you to re-enact the adventures of the film trilogy. For those who want to expand their games of The Lord of The Rings, there are a number of supplements that allow you to explore Middle-earth beyond the story presented in the movies. Travel deep into the Mines of Moria with Shadow & Flame, ride with the Rohirrim to The Battle of Pelennor Fields, defend the gates of Minas Tirith with Siege of Gondor, or defend the lands of the Hobbits in The Scouring of the Shire. The possibilities for games in Middle-earth are endless with The Lord of The Rings game!

Above: Lihanna Troy's Gollum won second place in The Lord of The Rings Single Miniature category at the 2004 LA Golden Demon

The Lord of The Rings Strategy Battle Game is different from Warhammer and Warhammer 40,000 in that it focuses less on conflict between large armies and more on story-driven scenarios. A good place to start is with the boxed game shown below. It contains the full rules for playing and scenarios based on the final chapter in the The Lord of The Rings trilogy. From there, you can purchase rules supplements and special miniatures for use in the multitude of scenarios and battles from either the books or your own imagination.

THE BATTLE OF PELENNOR FIELDS

A day may come when the courage of men fails, when we forsake our friends and break all bonds of fellowship, but it is not this day.

—Aragorn

This supplement for The Lord of The Rings Strategy Battle Game brings new characters, warriors, and war machines for both the forces of Good and Evil to the front, including the amazingly huge Mumakil! The first half of the book charts the progress of the armies of Harad as they march northward to the great widow-making fields of Gondor, while the second half of the book is given over to reprising those evocative moments from the films and the books where the warriors of Harad have a key role. There are rules for new Warriors and Heroes, as well as the Mumakil to use in your games. There are also 11 new scenarios that stretch across the arid land of Harad and travel northward across the Poros and Harnen rivers until they reach the Pelennor Fields themselves. In addition, you'll find modeling and painting advice for bringing your warriors to life.

—Gandalf to Frodo
The Fellowship of The Ring

The newest supplement for The Lord of The Rings Strategy Battle Game contains the requisite new assortment of warriors and heroes for both Good and Evil, but this time the focus shifts from the vast expanses of Middle-earth to the relatively small confines of the once-peaceful Shire. The nefarious Sharkey and his recruited band of ruffians infiltrate the home of the Hobbits and begin to wreak havoc. The Hainlings are left with no choice but to fight to protect their home and drive the evil out. Bring this struggle to life with the new rules, scenarios, and modeling projects contained within this book.

BATTLEFLEET

GOTHIC

There is no peace among the stars. In the void of space, massive battlefleets pierce the darkness to enforce the will of the Emperor. Vast warships maneuver and fire at each other; fighters and bombers are launched in waves; and torpedoes race toward their targets in a life and death struggle for domination of the Gothic sector.

Battlefleet Gothic allows you to command fleets of warships in deadly conflict in the voids of space. The Gothic war was a grim time when the Imperium of Mankind battled for survival in the hostile depths of space. The system was plagued by Ork pirates, Eldar corsairs, and the most dangerous foe of all...Chaos.

The original Battlefleet Gothic game came with rules for four fleets – Imperial Chaos, Orks, and Eldar. Since that time, the hard-working guys in the Specialist Games Division have made rules and models for Necrons, Tau, Space Marines, Dark Eldar, and other space phenomenon like mines and more.

Many of the races in Warhammer 40,000 are represented in Battlefleet Gothic – perfect for linked campaigns involving whole star systems!

BLOOD BOWL

The Game of Fantasy Football

"Welcome, sports fans, to the hardest-hitting section of the catalog! In these hallowed pages, you will find all the teams fit to take the field (and probably some that are a bit questionable). Additionally, you will find coaches, cheerleaders, and some of the most famous Star Players ever to play the game, grace the pitch, or mangle an opponent. But what's that? You don't know the game of Blood Bowl? Before the match starts, I'd better hand you over to the color commentator Bob?"

"Thanks Jim. Hard to believe there are any fans out there who have not heard of Blood Bowl. This sport pits two teams of heavily armored and quite insane warriors against each other. Players on each team may pass, throw, or run with the ball in order to get it to the opposite end of their field into the End Zone to score a Touchdown (1 point). Of course, it's true that some players (or whole teams) prefer to ignore the ball and just pummel and stomp the opposition into the turl — but hey, that's only one strategy! Getting the ball into the End Zone is plenty tough, as the other team is trying to crush the ball carrier, take the ball, and start streaking off in the opposite direction.

"The team with the most Touchdowns at the end of the match is declared the winner. Over the course of a season, teams will hire new team members, recruit Star Players, replace dead players, deal with injuries, and more. It takes a lot of training and hard work to reach the finals! Of course, a little treachery never hurt anybody's chances for victory, either. Well, it looks like tonight's game is about to begin, but before we get underway with the kickoff, we have a special interview with ex-player Stu McGore who has just dropped by the booth. Good to see you, Stu. What's your opinion on the type of game we'll see tonight?"

"Get 'em! Stomp on 'em! Crump 'em!"

"Er...thanks for that, Stu. As I thought, hit in the head and thrown off the playing pitch too many times. Now back to you, Jim..."

League Play

Blood Bowl can be played as an enjoyable one-off game over the course of few hours. To experience the full-tilt, bone-crunching joys of Blood Bowl fully, you have to play a league or season of games!

In most leagues, all players (How many? As many of them as you can round up!) enter their teams in a quest for a particular Cup or Championship. Wins and losses are tracked, and so are Star Player points and the amount of gold crowns earned from fan attendance. Each player builds up his team, fan base, and player skills. Rivalries are established; players gain notoriety; and trades, bribes, and more ensue.

Depending on how gamers structure their league, the matches can last over the course of a weekend, a few weeks, or even months and longer. At the end of the season, a playoff round is battled out by the top players, with the overall winner taking the cup and being declared Champion. Glory, prestige, and poorly hidden ire are heaped upon the winner.

EPIC ARMAGEDDON

Squad after squad of Infantry file into combat, vast columns of armor, super heavy tanks fire devastating barrages, and massive Titans tower over the battlefield in a combined arms effort to win the day. Epic Armageddon is warfare in the deadly 41st millennium but on a whole new scale.

War on an EPIC Scale!

The Epic Armageddon rules allow players to fight battles with Epic-scale models (about 6 or 7 mm tall for a man-sized creature). This fantastic scale allows access to the full spectrum of units and all manner of war machines available to a futuristic commander or warlord. Where a game of Warhammer 40,000 might have a few tanks per side, the size of Epic Armageddon allows for dozens upon dozens of such vehicles of destruction to be under the control of each player. You'll need that kind of firepower to take on the enemy! Mighty Titans, immense war machines the size of skyscrapers, stride into the fray. Flyers streak overhead, and squad after squad of infantry hole up in cover to offer support or launch assaults to swarm over enemy armor. The game is all about artillery barrages, swift scouting vehicles, and the kinds of battles that any gamer would truly deem EPIC.

Why Armageddon?

Longtime hobbyists will recognize much in Epic Armageddon, as it combines many of the previous Epic-scale models and concepts with the Warhammer 40,000 Battle for Armageddon Campaign. Serious veterans will even recall board games about the many struggles on this key Imperial planet.

Epic Armageddon includes a history of the major wars fought on Armageddon and details the military units that took place in the ferocious fighting that occurred. The new Epic Armageddon rules are designed to reflect the kinds of battles that were rampant on the planet during the last Ork invasion.

INQUISITOR

You have been told of the Inquisition, that shadowy organization that defends Mankind and the Emperor from the perils of heresy, possession, alien dominance, and rebellion. You have been told the Inquisition is the ultimate defense against the phantoms of fear and terror that lurk in the darkness between the stars.

You have been told the Inquisition employs the bright saviors in an eclipse of evil, the purest and most devoted warriors of the Emperor.

You have been told the Inquisition is united in its cause to rid the galaxy of any threat, from without or within. Everything you have been told is a lie!

For 10,000 years, the forces of the Emperor's Inquisition have fought a secret war to defend humanity from its worst enemies, the alien, the heretic, and the Daemon. But this war is fought as much with hearts and minds as with guns and blades. It is a war without mercy that is fought in the dark, forgotten corners of the galaxy.

Welcome to the shadowy world of the Inquisitor! This narrative wargame allows you to play the part of a bold hero or cruel villain in the horrifying universe of the 41st millennium. Each player controls one or more characters who are represented by large-scale miniatures that move and fight over a tabletop battlefield. This skirmish-level, narrative-driven game adds a whole new level of detail to gaming in the 41st millennium.

The Inquisitor rulebook contains all the rules needed to play as well as a comprehensive armory and details of many special talents, abilities, and psychic powers. Extensive tips and guidance for Games Masters can be found as well as 15 fully detailed sample characters. Inquisitive minds will also find plenty of background for the character types as well as painting and modeling tips. So, for those of you ready for more character and roleplay in your tabletop gaming, Inquisitor is for you.

Inquisitor-Scale Models

Games Workshop has designed an extensive range of Inquisitor models for all of the characters detailed in the Inquisitor rulebook and many more besides. These large-scale models are much bigger than the majority of Citadel Miniatures. Man-sized models in the other GW games are approximately 28 mm high, whereas those for Inquisitor are roughly 54 mm to 60 mm high.

Conversion Ideas

With all the individuality of characters in Inquisitor and the hyper-detailed skirmish rules, many players find themselves doing conversions on their large-scale models. Of course, it is possible to use all the bits in the Inquisitor range, but cunning converters will be able to find a host of parts throughout the rest of this catalog, especially with large monsters and even some war machines or vehicles!

Explore the ruined city of Mordheim with all kinds of warrior bands, from brutal groups of Pit Fighters to even more brutal bands of Witch Hunters.

MORDHEIM

Mordheim, the City of the Damned, is a terrible place of nightmarish ruin, where danger awaits in every shadow. It is here amid crumbling palaces and twisting streets, that hard-bitten warriors gather to seek out the promise of riches and fame.

Mordheim, the City of the Damned, is a dark, atmospheric game set in the troubled history of the Warhammer world. As a player, you control a warband that is out to earn fame and fortune among the devastated ruins of the once-great city of Mordheim, the cursed city. Mordheim is a skirmish game. The rules are similar to Warhammer but add a level of detail not possible when entire armies of figures do battle. A typical warband size is somewhere between six and a dozen figures. Models can climb the ruins, leap off balconies into combat, crouch in shadowy cover, push foes off precipices, stun or knock down enemies, parry, and score critical hits.

Mordheim can be played as a one-off battle in an evening, but where the game really shines is in the campaign rules that allow players to link together an ongoing series of games in which the warbands will develop new skills, hire extra warriors, and gain further fame and notoriety. Be careful as you explore the ruins for new treasures. Rival warbands also scour the city and may be lurking in every shadow.

History of the City of Mordheim

Ages ago, a clear and portentous sight was spotted in the night sky over the large and well developed Empire city of Mordheim. It was the twin-tailed comet, the very sign of Sigmar, founder and savior of the land.

As the comet burned closer and closer, lighting up the whole night sky above Mordheim, many pilgrims flocked to the city to join the ongoing celebration. Feasts, dances and much drinking followed, and the revelry soon grew into debauchery and decadence.

But the comet was not a sign of Sigmar's coming but instead the instrument of his judgement. If the impact of the falling meteorite did not instantly slay the city dwellers, the ensuing fires and mysterious vapors soon did.

Eventually, the ruins cooled, and the few survivors who had been just outside the city when the comet hit began to trickle into the still smoking debris in search of salvage and treasures. Strange stories began to circulate about the wondrous and magical shards of glowing stones that could be discovered in the rubble. Credited with powers of healing and more, the glowing stones were named wyrdstone and were highly sought after.

Soon the ruins of Mordheim were being scoured by small warbands from Reikland, Middenheim, and far away Marienburg, but they were not alone. Skaven, man-sized bipedal rats, emerged and sought the glowing stones too, and Chaos-worshippers gathered in the gloom. Bands of Undead and the Witch Hunters who sought to burn them entered the ruinous gates. Infamous rogues and mercenary cutthroats made their way toward the riches. More and more warbands from the far corners of the Warhammer world began to take interest in what was at stake. Will you dare to enter Mordheim, the City of the Damned?

NECROMUNDA

Necromunda is a game that allows players to take part in the rival gang wars that occur amid the ruined buildings, gantries, and multi-level walkways of the futuristic Hive cities. Players must not only outmaneuver and outfight opponents on the tabletop but also learn how to equip and expand their gangs. The weak do not survive long in the Underhive.

Battles in the Underhive

Necromunda is a fast-playing and atmospheric game that takes place in the vast and horrible Hive Cities of the future. As a player, you control a gang that seeks riches, powerful weaponry, the wonders of age-old technology, territory, or anything else that will help put you on top of your own corner of the slag heaps and tunnels that make up the Underhives of Necromunda.

This skirmish-level game is heaped with detail, like having your gang members gain skills and experience, run out of ammo at a critical time, climb up ladders, leap off balconies into combat, or hire bounty hunters to assist your missions. The armory lists rules for weapons as well as a full array of useful equipment, like bio-scanners, auto-repairers, bionic eyes, medi-packs, Screammers, and more. The excellent campaign system and scenarios really add a challenge for gangs to live and survive the long haul of the hard life in the Underhive.

The Hives

In the 41st millennium, many planets that were once fair and supported many life forms have been choked and clogged with vast populations and ruinous pollution. Necromunda is just such a planet. The populace, minus vagabond drifters who somehow survive in the Ash wastes, live in enormous Hives. The Hives of Necromunda tower out of the wastelands like mountains. The vast spires reach above the poisoned cloud cover and pierce the atmosphere. In addition to going upward, these vast Hives spread out and downward to far below the surface.

Built up over thousands of years, the many different Hives have sprawling level after level. Some levels are new while others hide long lost technology or mysteries that were better left undiscovered.

The topmost layers of the Hive are spacious, with domes looking down on the clouds. These upper hive dwellers are the rulers of the Hive and of the very planet itself. Nobility, such as it is, dwells on the next lowest levels. Far, far below the cloud level, where the light of the sun is never seen the Hive City throbs with life crammed into every nook and cranny. Massive industrial complexes, honeycombed sewers, venting, and air filtration systems spread throughout the cramped and polluted underhive. Here dwell the majority of the people — Hivers, as they are called. Still further down, far below the planet's surface is the Hive bottom, which houses unbelievable horrors that have long been forgotten by those fortunate enough to rise above them. The discharged filth and pollution from all the upper levels eventually finds its way to a putrid lake of radioactive matter called the Sump. Here, at the very base of the spire, dwell the mutant dregs, denizens of darkness and pollution.

From pestilent Survivors to the fiery wrath of the Redemptionists, Necromunda has many different types of gangs, and each player should be able to find one that suits him!

Most Warhammer armies (and even some special characters!) have a Warmaster army version, opening up possibilities for a massive campaign in different scales all the way from Warmaster to Warhammer Skirmish!

WARMMASTER

Warmaster is a game of conflict on a grand scale in the Warhammer world. The smaller scale of the models allows for a more abstract rules set and larger, more sweeping strategies and tactics. Indeed, it is more the general's ability to command that will win the day over brute strength or individual heroics. Vast armies of infantry, cavalry, artillery, and monsters are arrayed on the fields of battle, and the opposing generals lock wits. Warhammer fans will be thrilled to see their armies and troop types brought to life on a different scale, but the scope of Warmaster makes it a whole new game altogether. Breaking an army's center, destroying the enemy's command and control, and enticing the foe to overextend his battle line are the "grand level" tactics that are part and parcel of Warmaster.

Bold Sweeping Maneuvers and Mighty Battles

The design theme for the game of Warmaster is plain and simple: big battles. The game firmly places the player in the role of the general making plans, issuing orders, and maneuvering his vast army into an undefeatable position. The emphasis on command control means that it is possible for troops to undertake sweeping flanking moves in a single turn, while other, less fortunate troops just sit back in their Deployment Zone and wait for instructions that never arrive. Certainly, luck plays its part, but a good commander makes use of all the tools at his disposal - heroes, wizards, and others along the chain of command - to issue orders across the far-flung battle lines to make the best luck possible.

To accommodate the grand scale of the battlefield, the models themselves are relatively small. A man is about 10 mm tall compared with a man-sized model from Warhammer or Warhammer 40,000, which is approximately 28 mm tall. This small size enables the miniature designers to craft most combatants in whole ranks or "strips" that fasten to rectangular 20-mm x 40-mm bases or "stands." Warmaster models are cast in metal, and most are designed to fit onto the plastic bases supplied. A few large models require you to modify the bases or make your own from scratch. In order to distinguish character pieces, many players like to substitute the standard rectangular bases for round bases made from coins or washers. Infantry and cavalry units generally consist of three bases or stands as shown in this catalog. Some units consist of fewer stands, and most large monsters fit onto just one. In all cases, the model range has been designed so that you buy one whole unit at a time. The character sets include a variety of pieces including extra bitz (the designers like doing characters!) but always contain enough pieces to make at least one general, one hero, and one wizard stand. One exception is the Slann Mage-Priest for the Lizardmen. He's so fat that we had to put him in his own pack.

HOBBY SUPPLIES

A Vast Hobby

The majority of this massive catalog is taken up by page after page of the best miniatures ever produced, but of course, the hobby is bigger than the models. This section is dedicated to all the painting and hobby supplies that can help you get the most out of this fantastic hobby.

Painting

There is no denying the appeal of painting and painted models. There is an entire spectrum of painting — from exquisitely detailed models that can take weeks of work to complete to simple and clean basecoated soldiers pleasingly ranked up for battle. From contestants in the Golden Demon, the ultimate GW painting competition, to the more humble speed painter who just wants some color on his models for an upcoming battle, many types of hobbyists enjoy this exciting aspect of the hobby.

In this section, you will find the Citadel Colour line of water-based acrylic paints as well as brushes, spray primers, and more.

Modeling

In addition to cleaning up mold lines and preparing models to paint, some hobbyists like to convert models. A converter will hack off a bit here, add a bit there, and suddenly a unique figure or pose is created. New weapons, peg legs, battle scars, and all manner of new alterations can be made by the model converter to bring a unique piece to life. Even larger pieces, like tanks or Dragons, can really let a modeler go all out.

To aid the hobbyist in modeling, Games Workshop sells all manner of tools such as files and pin vises as well as essentials like glue and putty.

Diorama Making

Some hobbyists combine painting and modeling to create life-like dioramas that are striking to behold. A well-painted model looks even better in a realistic vignette — perhaps an Empire Knight entering the Drakwald forest or a Lictor waiting to spring onto an unsuspecting victim. A great diorama tells an interesting story and brings life to the models.

Terrain Making

Where are your armies going to fight? Nothing will make a wargamer yearn for battle like an evocative gaming table with interesting terrain.

It may start with simple hills, forests, or defensible emplacements, but soon the rich environments of Games Workshop's worlds will inspire a terrain builder to soar to new heights — tightly packed hive cities, Dwarf mines, and more. Really inspirational high-end games like siege battles, city fights, underground warfare, or even starship boarding actions are the kind of scenarios that gamers dream of playing and require the kind of terrain that hobbyists aspire to design and create.

In this section, you will find some very useful tools for building terrain, like the wonder cutter as well as some great starter terrain like hills and trees.

Gaming

And the whole hobby swings back to gaming. Win or lose, the tactics, dice rolling, and good-natured camaraderie of playing a tabletop wargame remains unmatched by any other experience. You'll find extra bases, movement trays, see-through templates for area effect weapons, and more to make your gaming experience fast and fun.

Painting & Hobby Supplies

It doesn't matter if you like all aspects of the hobby equally or if you only participate in one particular aspect, this section can add to your enjoyment. On the following page, we've wedged in loads of examples of tools in use, modeling techniques, and types of projects. Loads more can be found each month in White Dwarf magazine or on the GW web site.

Priming your models is an important step in painting. Primer provides a base to which your paints can easily adhere. Without primer, the paint job you worked so hard on will rub off as the models are handled and transported.

GW HOBBY CENTERS

Games Workshop Hobby Centers are springing up all over North America. They are the premier location to find everything associated with the Games Workshop hobby. If you haven't been to one yet, here's the scoop on just what they're all about.

Friendly & Expert Staff

Games Workshop Hobby Centers are staffed exclusively by hobbyists. Thus staff members are more than qualified to answer any of your questions about any of the following topics:

- gaming
- assembling your models
- painting
- choosing or building an army
- beating your buddy in a game
- terrain building
- model converting

Exactly What You Want

Games Workshop Hobby Centers are stocked with everything that is in the current range. They are at the forefront of all the new releases – if it is in the current range, you'll find it in our Hobby Centers.

In addition, you can visit our Hobby Centers to place special orders for models from older ranges and for Specialist Games, including any of the Special Offer items you can find throughout the catalog. Ask the staff to help you and to check on the availability of models from older ranges.

Every Level of Gaming

Games Workshop Hobby Centers have something for every level of gamer.

Introductory Games. We are always glad to teach newcomers how to play Warhammer, Warhammer 40,000, and The Lord of The Rings. Just walk in and ask us! Bring a friend or play against staff. It is an awesome and fun opportunity to give our games a test run.

Advanced Gaming. Our Hobby Centers have a wide variety of gaming events, from mega-battles to special veteran nights for more serious competitors. There are always tournaments, leagues, and campaigns that allow you to join in the fun.

If you are interested in any of the special events, just ask the staff about the next event and how you can get involved.

Painting Clinics

Lots of hobbyists are daunted by painting at first, but we've found that, with a little encouragement and a little advice, anyone can turn out nice looking paint jobs. Hobby Centers run formal Painting Clinics (ask for the hours), and staff members are always available for advice on brushwork!

Terrain Making

While anyone can attend the gaming events at our Hobby Centers and use our terrain, many hobbyists want to build their own gaming table but are daunted by the task. Stop by a Hobby Center and get some tips.

ROGUE TRADER RETAILERS

All across North America, hobbyists can find independent Retail shops (also called Rogue Trader stores) that carry Games Workshop products. Your local shop isn't only a place to purchase your games and miniatures but also a place to play some games and befriend new opponents. Some Rogue Trader stores even run tournaments, leagues, painting clinics, and more.

Above: A complete, up-to-date list of stores in North and South America is included in every other issue of White Dwarf magazine. No matter where you are on either continent - Tukwila, Washington, or Paducah, Kentucky or Santiago, Chile - you can use this list to find local hobby shops that carry GW products.

Finding a Rogue Trader

There are several ways to find Independent Retailers close to your home:

- Every odd-numbered issue of White Dwarf magazine contains a Retailer List. This insert lists every Rogue Trader & Hobby Center by state. From Alaska to Hawaii to everywhere in the continental U.S., you can find the shops near you.
- The Games Workshop web site has a great Store Locator. Under "Shopping" there is a link to FIND A STORE NEAR YOU. Type in your address, and you can get a listing of stores within 50 miles of your home as well as phone numbers, driving directions, and more.
- Call our Mail Order number at 1-800-394-GAME and tell them you are trying to find a store in your area.

Rogue Traders Can Carry the Entire Catalog!

No matter how large or small a Rogue Trader shop is, it can carry the entire line of games and miniatures featured in this catalog. In addition, any models from older ranges and from the Specialist Games range can be special ordered through the Rogue Trader. Just tell a staff member at your local shop that you are interested in these extended ranges, and he or she will check on availability and help you place your order. It's easy!!

Find Your Local Hot Spot!

Finding a game shop with events is awesome and can be topped only by getting involved with a regular gaming group. Many Independent Retailers have one or more such groups that regularly attend gaming nights. Often, these groups run their own events. Stop by and ask a staff member when the next battle is and how you can get involved. If, by chance, your local Rogue Trader doesn't have a lot of gaming opportunities, perhaps you can offer to organize a regular game night? After all, anyone with an army or an urge to play is probably waiting for the same thing!

RTT Events

An RTT Event is an officially sanctioned GW event that stores, conventions, and clubs can run. These events can include tournaments, gaming leagues, and painting competitions and give local gamers a chance to pit their armies against others' forces in a competitive but fun atmosphere. In tournaments, players are judged not just by wins and losses but also on sportsmanship and painting. Everyone gets to play. While everyone may not take home an award, having fun is a victory in itself. You can find out who is having an RTT event near you by looking under the Events section online or by checking out White Dwarf.

GAMES DAY

Every year, a dedicated central team and hundreds of staff and volunteers in the field strive hard to bring you, the Games Workshop hobbyist, the finest in participation events.

Locations

In order to spread the celebration of the Hobby to as many folks as possible, we'll be running FOUR Games Days across the country in 2005. For details of each event, head to the Games Day web site:
